PREFACE

The 2002-2003 edition of the University of Tennessee Fact Book comes with a new look, reflecting recent changes in the university's organizational structure. The University of Tennessee encompasses programs in Knoxville, Memphis, and Tullahoma, as well as the Institute of Agriculture, and the Institute for Public Service. These changes are incorporated in this edition of the Fact Book. For this reason, some of the data reported for 2002-2003 will vary substantially from previous years. For example, the number of professional degrees granted shows a marked increase because of the addition of the degrees awarded at the Health Science Center. The reader is advised to note the altered metric when extracting information from the Fact Book. Please contact the Office of Institutional Research and Assessment if you are seeking information arrayed differently than found in the Fact Book.

The University of Tennessee e-Fact Book is presented in Adobe PDF format. It is best navigated using the Table of Contents within the Bookmark pane as found in Adobe Reader 5.0.5. Use the links at the left on this page to begin navigation.

Finally, the production of a compendium such as this represents the good will and cooperation of dozens of people across the University of Tennessee and I am grateful for their help. This was truly a community effort. Within the Office of Institutional Research and Assessment, Elizabeth Pemberton has maintained her usual high standards as editor, and Mozhgan Shahidi made a major contribution by overseeing the technical and production aspects of this project.

As always, I solicit your comments and suggestions regarding the Fact Book. Please contact me at dscroggs@tennessee.edu, (865) 974-4373, or at 211 Conference Center, 600 Henley Street. You are welcome to bookmark our website at <http://oira.tennessee.edu>.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

The Agricultural Extension Service is an off-campus division of the Institute of Agriculture. It is a statewide educational organization, funded by federal, state and local governments, that brings research-based information about agriculture, family and consumer sciences, and resource development to the people of Tennessee where they live and work.

Because Extension emphasizes helping people improve their livelihood where they are located, most Tennesseans have contact with the Agricultural Extension Service through their local county Extension agents found in each of the 95 counties. Extension agents are supported by area and state faculty as well as by the educational and research resources and activities of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), 74 land-grant universities, and 3,150 county units throughout the nation. The stated mission of the system is to help people improve their lives through an educational process that uses scientific knowledge to address issues and needs.

Each county office of the Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service is staffed with agents who are college graduates in agriculture and/or family and consumer sciences. These highly trained professionals are able to provide information on a variety of subjects, ranging from landscaping to nutrition, from animal health to family money management. These programs are available to all county residents.

Extension also gives special attention to youth. Challenges facing Tennessee's young people are greater than ever before. Extension's 4-H youth development program helps youth from 9 to 19 develop self-esteem, leadership and citizenship skills, and gain knowledge in a wide range of subjects. From health to public speaking, from wildlife to photography, 4-H brings tomorrow's world to today's youth, and encourages advanced education. Tennessee 4-H clubs have continually produced national winners in project competition, and Tennessee has one of the largest 4-H memberships in the nation.
