COMMEMORATING FALLEN OROMO HEROES AND HEROINES

(Guuyyaa Gootota Oromoo)

Asafa Jalata,

The University of Tennessee-Knoxville

Paper presented at the Washington and Atlanta Oromo Communities, April 14 and 21, 2007.

Why do we commemorate this national day? What is the importance of having heroes and heroines in Oromo society? What criteria distinguish Oromo individuals who have sacrificed their lives for the liberation of their people and their country? There are five major reasons why we commemorate this day. First, this day allows us to remember those Oromo heroines and heroes who sacrificed their lives to restore Oromo culture, identity, and human dignity that were wounded by Ethiopian colonialism. Second, this commemoration day assists us to recognize the dialectical connection between martyrdom, bravery, patriotism and Oromummaa. Third, this day reminds us that we have historical obligations to continue the struggle that Oromo martyrs started until victory. Fourth, it causes us to recognize that Oromo heroes and heroines are still fighting in Oromia today. Fifth, this commemoration day reminds us that Oromo liberation requires heavy sacrifices, and those who have given their lives for our freedom are our revolutionary models which have created a dignified Oromo history.

The Price of Restoring Oromo Culture, Identity and Human Dignity

Until Oromo heroes and heroines created the Oromo Liberation Front (OLF) by paying ultimate sacrifices, Oromo peoplehood, culture, language, and history were dumped into the trashcan of Ethiopian history for more than a century. When the OLF was established, these heroes and heroines manifested their cumulative experiences of Oromo patriotism and bravery. These heroes and heroines had clearly understood the significance of Oromo culture, history, language, and identity in building Oromummaa and victorious consciousness to consolidate the Oromo national struggle for achieving Oromian statehood and democracy.

In addition to committing genocide on Oromos between the 1860s and the 1930s by massive and indiscriminate killings, hand and breast cutting, hunger and starvation, disease, slavery, and resource expropriation, Ethiopian colonialists partitioned Oromo identity into colonial regions and attacked Oromo peoplehood by changing their collective name into Galla. The enemies of the Oromo people labeled Oromo history, culture and religion as primitive and useless in order to destroy and replace them with that of Ethiopians. The ultimate sacrifice that OLF leaders and members paid for with their lives enabled Oromos to restore their collective name, Oromo, and the name of their country, Oromia, and to initiate the process of the revitalization of Oromo identity, culture, and language.

I cannot list the names of hundreds of thousands of Oromo sons and daughters who have sacrificed their lives and built the Oromo national movement by spilling their blood and scattering their bones in Oromian forests, valleys, mountains, and Somalia deserts as well as in Ethiopian prisons. Furthermore, those Oromo leaders and members who by luck have survived and continued the difficult and complex struggle deserve recognition and respect for what they have done for their people. Without them, the multiple enemies of the Oromo nation would have destroyed the OLF a long time ago. The Oromo leaders and members, who ignited the fire of Oromummaa or Oromo nationalism, whether dead or alive, have been the foundation and pillar of the Oromo national movement.

The history of the restoration of the names, such as Oromo and Oromia, has been written in the blood of Oromo heroines and heroes. That is why the majority of Oromos who realize this fact have accepted the OLF as their leader, hope, protector, and guiding star. Consequently, the fallen Oromo heroines and heroes have made the OLF an embodiment of Oromo survival and victorious consciousness. It is not an exaggeration to say that because of the Oromo heroes and heroines who have built the OLF the sleeping great nation, Oromia, has awoken. As a result, there is no government, even with its terrorism that can defeat the victorious consciousness of the Oromo people. The blood and flesh of Oromo heroes and heroines are flourishing Oromummaa.

Courage, Death and Oromummaa

Agitating, educating, organizing, and mobilizing a colonized and dehumanized nation for liberation requires courage, determination, bravery and self-sacrifice without fear of suffering and death in the hands of the enemy and their collaborators. Several decades ago when Oromo heroes and heroines had initiated the Oromo national struggle, even to mention the name Oromo was a serious political crime. Nobody could dare to mention the names such as Oromia and the OLF. Today because of the sacrifices that our heroines and heroes have paid, our enemies are forced to abandon the name Galla and to recognize the names Oromo and Oromia.

Even Oromo collaborators such as the Oromo People's Democratic Organization (OPDO) claim that they are Oromos and they administer Oromia. However, they merchandize the Oromo issues to make money and live luxurious lifestyles. Today, there are also members of the Oromo Diaspora who have engaged in such dehumanizing activities by ignoring the sacrifices Oromo heroes and heroines have paid to restore their wounded humanity. The Oromo heroes and heroines have rejected being the tools of their enemies and abandoned the idea of promoting their personal interests at the cost of their nation. They have left their families, wives, husbands, houses, professions, children, and other important things by choosing Oromo human dignity and freedom.

By making these kinds of difficult choices, they have confronted suffering and death. They have been the movers and shakers of Oromo history; they have opened a new historical chapter in our history and showed to us new possibilities by taking risky and courageous actions. Oromummaa has developed from such activities and it is flowering because of such courageous activities. Today, Oromo heroes and heroines are engaged in the struggle in Oromia; members of the Oromo Liberation Army (OLA), Oromo students and other activists are our contemporary heroes and heroines who are intensifying the struggle. All Oromos all over the world who demonstrate their support and sympathy by contributing whatever they can for these brave men and women are also engaged in patriotic and brave activities of blossoming Oromummaa.

Unfortunately, there are some individual Oromos who are trying to destroy Oromo bravery and patriotism by receiving positions and money from the enemy of the Oromo people. For such individuals, Oromummaa, Oromo freedom and human dignity are meaningless since they worship money, luxuries lifestyles, and easy access to power. Since some Oromos lack political consciousness such mercenary Oromos can easily mislead them. Mercenary Oromos are the opposite of Oromo heroes and heroines. There are millions of Oromos between these two extremes.

There are three kinds of Oromos today. The first group of Oromos has moral and political courage and struggle to enable the Oromo nation to achieve human liberation and democracy. The second group of Oromos is those Oromos who do not hesitate to sell their brothers and sisters for money by joining the Habasaha camp. The third kind of Oromos is passive Oromos who are blinded by ignorance or religion and do not participate in the Oromo struggle for national liberation. We, Oromo nationalists, should isolate the second kind of Oromos from Oromo society and educate and mobilize the third kind of Oromos to join the Oromo national movement. This is the continuation of the work of fallen Oromo heroes and heroines.

Remembering Martyrs and Fulfilling Historical Obligations

Since Oromo heroines and heroes have died while courageously fighting for the liberation of their people, we should not let their efforts and lives waste in vain. They were accomplished individuals in whatever professions they were involved. They were among the best and brightest Oromos who were proud of their nation and its culture, history and humanity. They preferred to fight against the injustice of Ethiopian colonialism and decided to face any consequences. Following the footsteps of these heroes and heroines, today millions of Oromos in Oromia are fulfilling their historical obligations by fighting through cultural, political and military fronts against Meles Zenawi's authoritarian-terrorist regime.

While the OLA is confronting the enemy of the Oromo nation in Oromian valleys, forests, and mountains, the qubee generation is confronting the enemy in garrison cities, school compounds, and college/university campuses. Other Oromo nationalists are also paying necessary sacrifices in money, time, expertise and other contributions by supporting the OLF and the OLA. What should be the contributions of Oromos in the Diaspora?

We, Oromos in the diaspora, should follow the footsteps of the fallen and surviving Oromo heroes and heroes by contributing anything we can to support the Oromo national struggle. If fallen Oromos have paid with their lives to liberate us, how can we fail to contribute our time, money and expertise to liberate our beloved country, Oromia, and ourselves as well? How can we sleep when our mothers, daughters and sisters are raped? How can we be at peace when genocide is committed on our people? How can we live when our fathers and mothers are disrespected and beaten? We, Oromos in the diaspora, must be the backbone of the Oromo national movement financially. Since our people live under Ethiopian political slavery and because there is no country that supports the Oromo struggle, we must fulfill our historical obligations by supporting the Oromo national struggle.

Recognizing Contemporary Heroes and Heroines

All Oromos who contribute to the Oromo national struggle in every capacity are our revolutionary heroes and heroines; they are making Oromo history. Specifically those who are engaging in organizing Oromos in Oromia and engaging in the Oromo national movement in general and the armed struggle in particular are the most dedicated and effective heroes and heroines since they are engaging in risky activities with courage and patriotism. These committed nationalists cannot effectively accomplish the mission of the Oromo national struggle without moral, political, ideological and material supports from the Oromo diaspora. Therefore, conscious and committed elements of the Oromo Diaspora are the blood and sinew of the Oromo national struggle.

Recognizing this important fact, the Tigrayan authoritarian-Terrorist regime has hired hundreds of mercenary Oromos who are against the Oromo struggle by spreading rumors against the OLF and its members, collecting information, attacking prominent personalities, spreading regional or religious divisions, and by recruiting innocent Oromos to join the OPDO. There are websites and Internets that have been created for these purposes. Oromo nationalists should not be quiet and allow these mercenaries to undermine the contributions of our heroes and heroines. We must defend our cause and movement.

The Importance of Having Heroines and Heroes

Any society that does not recognize and celebrate its heroines and heroes does not have an effective mechanism of measuring achievement and excellence. In Oromo society, during the practice of the gada system, bravery, patriotism, oratory, cultural knowledge and expertise in leadership, organization and warfare were highly appreciated. As soon as Oromo society lost its independence and came under Ethiopian colonialism, the Ethiopian colonialists created submissive leaders who had no respect for gada principles, saffu (ethical and moral order), and social justice. The OPDO is the contemporary submissive group that does not care about the welfare of Oromo society.

Members of this group engage in destruction of Oromo society by following the order of the Tigrayan-led regime. The Ethiopian colonial system has been destroying the Oromo heroines and heroes while promoting the most despicable elements of Oromo society as its leaders. Without restoring the authentic Oromo heroes and heroines to their historical place, the Oromo nation cannot achieve its liberation and develop itself by overcoming hunger, illiteracy, diseases, poverty and underdevelopment. Those Oromos who do not protect the Oromo national interest cannot be Oromo heroines and heroes.

Oromo heroines and heroines create new possibilities and opportunities for their people; they show their people that no other people are better than them and no other culture, history, and language are better than that of the Oromo. By demonstrating their bravery, talent and expertise, they prove that Oromos are not an inferior people. They teach their people that Ethiopian colonialism has only brought to them temporary defeat and it can be overthrown by the Oromo national struggle. They have the capacity to unleash the potentials of Oromos that have been chained by the ideologies of colonialism, imperialism, and racism. They equip their people with the knowledge of liberation by challenging the knowledge of domination that distorts the worldview of the Oromo people through ideology. Our victory is inevitable because the blood and flesh of the fallen Oromo heroines and heroes have produced young Oromo revolutionaries who are engaged in carrying out the mission of the Oromo national struggle.

Martyrdom, Revolutionaries Models, and Missions

Most of Oromo heroines and heroes were philosophers, military leaders, cultural and religious experts, merchants, students, farmers and agricultural experts, teachers, and doctors. It is a must that we learn about the lives and worldviews of these individuals. First, we must collect their names, photos, stories, and study about them. Second, we must write series of articles and books on them. We must appreciate Burqaa for starting to work on these issues. Third, we must create a website on which we exchange ideas on these heroes and heroines. Fourth, we must financially support these projects and contemporary heroes and heroines who are fighting and dying in Oromia.

We must emulate our true leaders and use this emulation as a single standard against which we measure our contemporary and future leaders. The spirits of these heroines and heroes only expect us to pay necessary sacrifices to fulfill the missions they died for. Only if we fulfill our historical obligations can we liberate Oromia and our people. Victory belongs to those who plan strategies and tactics and take concrete actions.

Conclusion

Our fallen heroines and heroes were the shining stars of the Oromo struggle that blossomed Oromummaa by their blood and flesh. Our martyrs have lost their lives while dreaming and fighting for freedom, justice, democracy and development of their people and their country. We have moral and national responsibilities to pursue the objectives for which our heroines and heroes sacrificed their lives by any capacity we can. Not contributing to the Oromo national movement is tantamount to walk on the blood and flesh of these martyrs.

The Oromo national movement is a very dangerous project. Tens of thousands of our people have been imprisoned, tortured, raped, and received all forms of abuse from successive Ethiopian governments in general and that of the Meles Zenawi in particular. The Tigrayan-led government has been systematically targeting and killing all Oromo leaders and those who have potentials of leadership while promoting the most despicable elements of Oromo society and the children of colonial settlers as leaders of the Oromo nation. The more this criminal regime engages in genocide, the more the Oromo people have rejected this regime and its puppets. Particularly, Oromo students have demonstrated their courage, love, and respect they have for fallen Oromo heroines and heroes by rejecting this racist and terrorist regime. Recently, a few Oromo generals, colonels, and hundreds of Oromo soldiers from the Ethiopian colonial army are defecting and joining the OLA.

While commemorating our fallen heroes and heroines, we must also remember our current ones who are engaging in the bitter struggle and those who are suffering in Ethiopian prisons. We must double our support for the OLA that is engaging in implementing the missions of the fallen Oromo heroines and heroes in Oromian forests, valleys, mountains, and Ethiopian garrison cities. We should sustain the spirits of our fallen heroes and heroines by taking concrete actions everyday.

It is our national responsibility to educate, mobilize and recruit passive or unconscious Oromo individuals to join the Oromo national movement. Such actions must start in families by educating and training children; husbands and wives must teach one another and their children the essence of Oromoummaa. The spirits of our heroes and heroines require that all of us must be grass-root leaders who engage in a systematic struggle to fight those agents of the enemy or those misled individuals who undermine the Oromo national struggle intentionally or unintentionally.

All Oromo nationalists must be cadres, teachers, students, leaders, followers, fighters, financiers, ideologues, organizers, defenders and promoters of the Oromo cause. We should not keep quiet when certain individuals attack our organizations, leaders, communities and Oromo peoplehood to satisfy their troubled ego or their masters. If we do some of these activities in our daily lives, the spirits of our fallen heroes and heroines will survive through our actions and lead us to march to our national victory.

We should remember thousands of Oromo martyrs who have sacrificed their lives for Oromo liberation. Although it is impossible to have a complete list of the names of Oromo martyrs at this time, I have listed the names of four hundred and three heroines and heroes below. It is an historical obligation to have all names of our fallen heroines and heroines and to study about them.
