The 1987-88 Alumni Advisory Council
The West German Connection

The second phase of an on-going exchange program between faculty at the University of Tennessee and the Rheinische Friedrich Wilhelms Universitat Bonn, West Germany took place this Fall with a visit from eight representatives of the West German university.

The subject of the exchange is "Law and the Environment", involving faculty members in the fields of law and political science. Eleven UTK professors presented papers in West Germany during June of 1986. During the week of September 28 through October 2 this Fall, the University of Tennessee hosted members of the Bonn faculty.

The faculty from the University of Bonn started their visit in Washington, D.C., where they visited a number of environmentally-related government and non-government organizations. In Knoxville, they presented papers, participated in a conference on "The Constitution and the Environment", and visited the Tennessee Valley Authority, Oak Ridge National Laboratories, and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park to examine American environmental protection policies and practices.
Dean's Corner

Although this is my first "Dean’s Corner," this communiqué seems like a letter to friends. The reception I have received before I even arrived at the College of Law and since then has been heartwarming. The many letters and the attendance by so many alumni at the receptions in Chattanooga, Knoxville, Nashville, and Memphis have made my transition to Tennessee a happy one. Official events on campus, such as the Alumni Advisory Council meeting, homecoming’s barbecue and open house, and the 40th birthday for the clinic, have given you and me a chance to get to know each other in familiar settings as well. This comprehensive familiarization process has helped me get a feel for the institution much earlier than I had expected. Thank you.

I hope to use this column not only to bring you up to date on current activities at the law school, but also, from time to time, to share some of my vision of our future as well. There has been quite a bit of activity here over the last few months. The new curriculum has cleared all but the last two obstacles to its adoption. It has been approved by the faculty and the central Undergraduate Council and will be considered by the Faculty Senate for recommendation to the University’s Board of Trustees within the next few weeks. Students and faculty have been thoroughly briefed and seem to be looking forward to the changes.

A review of the administrative structure of the law school has been undertaken and some duties have been realigned. In addition, we are in the process of hiring a development officer for the College and setting an agenda for CLE activities. Support services at the institution have been reviewed and recommendations received for upgrading them. As the result of those recommendations, I am working now to identify resources to provide the faculty with word processing equipment and enhanced research assistance.

A more active faculty development program is developing with regular faculty forums attracting a good bit of interest and interchange. As always, individual faculty are engaged in a substantial amount of research, writing, and speaking in addition to the usual superb teaching and institutional service activities. A one-day faculty retreat in mid-December will help us focus even more on our future direction. All in all, this is an exciting place to be right now.

Much of my activity over the next few months will be directed toward facilities and other development activities. We are still desperately in need of expanded and renovated facilities and supplemental funds for operations, faculty development, and student financial aid. I will be working with the University administration and the new development officer to identify strategies and sources for these projects. I know you will not be surprised if I call on you for assistance.

You have very conscientious leaders in Ross Clark, Chair of the Alumni Advisory Council, and John Harber, Chair of the Law Annual Fund. I hope you will feel comfortable about discussing our program and services with either of them, or with other members of the Alumni Advisory Council, or directly with me or my staff.

What I have learned since my first conversations with the search committee here more than a year ago convinces me that the College is poised to make great strides in the very near future. It has always been an excellent institution, educating fine attorneys and leaders in an efficient and effective manner. We will continue that tradition, enhancing always our effectiveness and, we hope in the process, your pride in your association with us.

Law Classes of '57 and '77 Sponsor Reunions

Thanks to the special efforts of class leaders, the graduates of the law classes of '57 and '77 held reunions during the 1988 Homecoming festivities, November 13 and 14.

The class of '57 shared good times at a dinner at the Orangery restaurant Friday night organized by E. Riley Anderson and Fred Bright, Jr. There was a last-minute notice and surprisingly good attendance at a reception at the Holiday Inn-World’s Fair for the class of '77 and December '76.

Alumni, faculty, and students gathered at several events for one of the best homecomings ever; the Advocates Ball Friday night, the pre-game Student Bar Association Barbeque, and the traditional post-game Open House. A very impressive victory over Mississippi on the football field just seemed to round-out a great 1987 Homecoming.

Now is the time to plan for the 1988 Homecoming: Oct. 1st!

Faculty Honor Sebert and Hardin for Extraordinary Service

When academicians are called upon to serve their school in administrative capacities, their time, patience, and management skills are precious elements in the school’s success. The faculty decided that the efforts of two such academicians over the past year should not go unnoticed.

John Sebert served as Acting Dean and Patrick Hardin was our Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Administration during a year in which significant progress was made on important projects such as the curriculum revision proposal and the dean search. Professor Tom Eisele presented each with plaques, as tangible evidence of the faculty’s appreciation, during the Annual Fund Appreciation Dinner on October 23rd.
Curriculum Revision Proposal

Over the last three years, the faculty of the College of Law have spent a great deal of time reviewing our curriculum and devising ways of improving the educational experience our students receive. The review included an extensive self-study and significant research, including examination of five major national studies published by such respected groups as the Association of American Law Schools, the Carnegie Commission, and the American Bar Association.

A committee composed of both faculty and students presented recommendations for a comprehensive revision of the curriculum in the Spring of 1987, and final faculty approval was given in September of this year to the proposal outlined below.

Before these changes go into effect, approval must be obtained from the Board of Trustees. These changes would be effective for students entering in the Fall of 1988 and thereafter.

Major Changes:

* Adding an introductory period of instruction during the first week of school for entering students, covering an introduction to the legal system and the study of law;

* Combining the two required property courses into one required four-hour course;

* Requiring Evidence in the third semester;

* Increasing the credit hours for the required second-year Legal Profession course from two to three;

* Requiring one course in advanced constitutional law;

* Requiring one course in the area of Interviewing, Counseling, and Dispute Resolution;

* Requiring one course in the area of Planning and Drafting;

* Increasing the total hours required for graduation from 84 to 89.

Overview

1st Semester Requirements
Civil Procedure I (3)
Contracts I (3)
Criminal Law (3)
Legal Process I (3)
Torts I (3)
Total: 15 credit hours

2nd Semester Requirements
Civil Procedure II (3)
Contracts II (3)
Legal Process II (3)
Property (4)
Torts II (3)
Total: 16 credit hours

Second-Year Requirements
Fall:
Constitutional Law I (3)
Evidence (4)
Spring:
Legal Profession (3)
Prior to End of Second Year:
Computer-Assisted Legal Research (0)

Other Requirements
Income Tax I (4)
Advanced Constitutional Law (3)
Perspective Requirement
Expository Writing Requirement*
Planning and Drafting Requirement
Interviewing, Counseling, and Dispute Resolution Requirement

* The Writing Requirement may be fulfilled in the same course that satisfies another requirement, such as the Perspective Requirement.

Probably the most significant change in the first-year curriculum involves the teaching of Legal Process, Legal Bibliography, and Legal Writing and Advocacy. All of these courses and their objectives will be consolidated into a two-semester, six-hour, sequence, Legal Process I and II.

Computer-Assisted Legal Research is a new second-year requirement. This noncredit but required module will provide students with a basic introduction to the major computerized legal data base retrieval systems.

The Planning and Drafting Requirement is new. It recognizes that almost all attorneys will have occasion, relatively early in their careers, to assist a client in planning a course of conduct outside a litigation setting and will have to draft agreements, legislation, or other documents in order to effectuate the planned course of action.

The final new requirement is an Interviewing, Counseling, and Dispute Resolution Requirement. Students must successfully complete prior to graduation one course from a prescribed list.

Civil Advocacy and Criminal Advocacy, our clinical offerings, will be changed effective the Fall of 1989. Instead of eight-hour courses with an intensive trial practice component, each course will be offered for six hours of credit with Trial Practice as a prerequisite.
Alumni Profile: John M. Smartt

The Outstanding Public Service Award selection committee, composed of representative alumni from all three regions of the state, were given the criteria that the recipient should be one who has distinguished him or herself and the profession by longterm contributions to their communities, to the public, and to the legal profession.

Previous recipients of the award are:
Hon. Howard H. Baker, Jr.
Harry W. Laughlin
Hon. L. Clure Morton
Hon. Frank W. Wilson (posthumous)
Lindsay Young
Marion S. Boyd
John K. Morgan (posthumous)

The committee decided that there should be only one recipient this year. Taking notice of his many years of selfless and valuable service to our profession and to the community, the committee decided that the person who fit the award's objectives to a "T" is Knoxville's own JOHN M. SMARTT.

He says he was born in a town called Smartt, Tennessee sometime before the Great Depression and after the turn of the century. Since his jogging and diet keep him so healthy and youthful, we won't bother to mention the exact date. Being born into a town with the same name as his own must be either a tremendous coincidence or an indication of the fact that he is carrying on a family tradition of significant influence in community affairs.

John Smartt has been a leader in professional and civic activities in Tennessee before and after attaining his undergraduate and law degrees at the University of Tennessee. Following service in the U.S. Army from 1942 to 1946, he entered Law College where he was a member of the Tennessee Law Review before graduating in 1948. John is still listed as a Lt. Col. in the Army Reserves.

Currently of counsel to the firm of Ambrose, Wilson & Grimm, John Smartt has been widely known by alumni and friends of the University of Tennessee as Alumni Director for 21 years, from 1948 to 1969. Even after entering private practice, he has maintained a reputation as the University's unofficial cheerleader, preferring to remain in the background as advisor, sponsor, or organizer for a variety of Law College and University-wide events.

Statewide, he is perhaps best known for his role since 1972 as Coordinator of the Tennessee Law Institute, an organization which provides high quality continuing legal education for Tennessee attorneys (otherwise known as the "Donnie and Johnny Show").

John has been President of the Smoky Mountain Conservation Association and an elder and teacher at Second Presbyterian Church. He has also been active in the Presbyterian Center on the UT campus and the downtown Kiwanis Club. He was just recently inducted into the Tennessee Bar Foundation, and he is a life member of the Sixth Judicial Conference.

A significant portion of John Smartt's public service activities has been visible through his extensive involvement with the United Way. Since 1975, he has served in one capacity or another, including chairman, for the "attorneys" division of the United Way campaign. He has been on and off the Board of Directors of the United Way several times over the years, and he is now serving a second consecutive three-year term on that board. At the moment he is devoting a great deal of time and effort as President of the Trustees for the Monday United Way Foundation.

John's wife, Harriett, and one of his sons were on hand to see the presentation of the award during the Annual fund Appreciation Dinner at the Hyatt Regency in Knoxville. Two additional sons and a daughter complete the Smartt family portrait.

"What more can be said," noted Clark, "except that we are very proud to count John M. Smartt as a fellow alumnus of the University of Tennessee College of Law."
Student Profile:
Kathryn A. Stephenson

"You could hand the world over to Kate Stephenson tomorrow, and she would run it beautifully."

– Associate Dean Mary Jo Hoover

As a 2L, Kate was one of the three members of the National Moot Court Team which won the regional competition and whose brief placed fourth in the nation. She decided to try out for moot court because, in her words, “I was terrified of speaking in front of anybody. The first time I got up in practice I barely got my name out... but by the time we got to the nationals I felt in charge and capable.” Now, she exudes confidence.

As an experienced “mooter”, Kate thinks the moot court program at UT is one of the best things we have going for us as a school. It not only offers opportunities for great publicity due to our winning tradition, but it is good for the students because it teaches them so many different skills: "the confidence of speaking, research, writing, organization, dedication, issue analysis — it’s all in there — plus the one-on-one work with faculty. There is a real dedication on the part of the faculty “to the success of our moot court teams.”

Kate decided not to compete this year so that she could spend her last year getting a little exercise, spending time down the halls... and almost every other activity at the Law College.

There is a real dedication on the part of the faculty “to the success of our moot court teams.”

A more person-to-person relationship with members of the faculty which developed through her participation in moot court was very important to Kate. "Now I can walk down the halls... and almost every professor will say, ‘Hello, Kate’ — that is one of the great pleasures of having been on the moot court team.”

She is student coach to two moot court teams this year, the National Moot Court Team and the Constitutional Law Moot Court Team. She decided not to compete this year so that she could spend her last year getting a little exercise, spending time with family, and getting involved in other activities at the Law College.

When asked what she would first do about this school to improve it if she had the power, Kate's immediate response was "the physical facilities!"

For example, she noted that one of our “pre-eminent” professors has a desk held together with tape, that the shades in his office won't go up and down because the strings are broken, and that such things don't exactly make someone feel "cherished".

The first year she was here, she didn't really notice much about the facilities because her head was buried in the books and she had plenty of other concerns to occupy her thoughts, but now that she is in her third year, she observes that this place "is not very pretty".

She noted that even getting from one class to another can be very difficult because of the awkward design of the building. The unsteady, and often unseasonable, temperatures in the classrooms is another problem. "To ask a professor to keep the attention of a class when it's 90 degrees in the classroom and to ask the students to learn under those conditions is asking a lot.”

She has accepted a position with the Nashville firm of Farris, Warfield & Kanaday, for whom she clerked last summer. She plans to do a lot of estate planning work because, in her words, "you get to know your clients personally... and... most of the time you are doing something for your client without at the same time doing something to someone else's client."

KATE STEPHENSON

Born in Knoxville, Kate Stephenson lived in upstate New York and Texas before her father, who was with ALCOA, was transferred to Pittsburgh, where she went to high school. She majored in Philosophy at Kenyon College, then earned a master's degree in American Women's History at the University of North Carolina.

She spent about a year trying to "break into television" after graduate school. (She had worked for public television during high school and college vacations.) "I kept being offered jobs as a production assistant, and at that point I felt that I had paid my dues and had my master's degree and I didn't want to be a production assistant."

Her grandfather and her sister live in Knoxville, which has something to do with her decision to return to Knoxville to work. She was offered and did accept a job teaching history at Webb School of Knoxville, where she taught for four years before deciding that teaching wasn't what she wanted to do the rest of her life.

Kate decided one January to give law school a try. She took the LSAT that March, applied to law schools in April, and was accepted and offered a scholarship almost immediately. Getting a scholarship offer cinched it for her. That Fall, she enrolled at UT.

Designation, Please?

Did you know that when you make a gift to the University of Tennessee you can indicate the particular school or program for which you would like that gift to be used? If you indicate on your check or pledge card that you want the gift to be used by the College of Law, then the College of Law will receive that gift. You, in turn, will receive all the benefits of appropriate UT gift club membership and/or alumni association membership.

The Law College only receives gifts specifically designated for our use, however, so please remember to designate "UT College of Law" each time you send in your gift. Thank you!

Faculty Profile:
Richard S. Wirtz

It’s a ‘Wonderful Feeling’

Richard Wirtz was recently promoted to full professor, and he says it’s a “wonderful feeling” to be chosen for that distinction by your peers. “What to do for the rest of my life is up to me,” now that he has reached the highest level of promotion for professors.

As always with Professor Wirtz, teaching will come first. Teaching is primarily what he and his colleagues are paid to do, and it will continue to deserve the highest priority in the time available. He is excited about the opportunities presented by the proposed new curriculum. (See article on page four.)

In addition to teaching, there are many things tenured full professors can and should do to take advantage of their ‘unique’ status and offer the greatest possible benefits to students and to the profession, and thus contribute to the reputation of the law college, according to this professor.

Dick Wirtz has a lot of specific ideas on the subject. For example, the reputation of the University of Tennessee College of Law could be enhanced through the establishment of a graduate law degree program in a specialized field such as Law and Technology or Health Law.

A second, more specialized journal and a special Summer course of study might complement this graduate program, perhaps with a faculty recruit who has a national reputation in the field.

Of course, he noted, the physical facility also needs some attention if we are to succeed in attracting the best possible students and faculty.

Professor Wirtz holds a Master’s degree in Public Affairs from the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University in addition to his J. D. degree, which he earned in 1970 at Stanford Law School.

Following active duty in the United States Army, he worked for the Harlem Domestic Peace Corps and later for the Community Action Program in the Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington, D.C. After obtaining his law degree, Wirtz clerked for a year for the Honorable Robert A. Ainsworth of the U.S Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and spent three years in private practice with the Seattle, Washington firm of Davis, Wright, Todd, Riese & Jones.

He decided in 1974 that teaching law might be right for him, and the University of Tennessee College of Law was fortunate enough to acquire his services. He has been on our faculty for the last 13 years, with the single interruption of 1977-78 when he taught as a visitor at Cornell Law School.

Professor Wirtz’s principal teaching interests are in the areas of antitrust, intellectual property, evidence, and contracts. He has been a regular contributor to the American Bar Association Section of Antitrust Law’s publication, Antitrust Law Developments, among other publications. His latest article, “Rethinking Price-Fixing”, appears in the Indiana Law Review, Volume 20, Number 3 (1987).

His dedication as a teacher was rewarded in 1984 when he was chosen by faculty and students to receive the Harold Warner Outstanding Teacher Award. In 1987, the graduating students selected him to receive the Student Bar Association’s Outstanding Faculty Member Award.

Professor Wirtz’s father, W. Willard Wirtz, was the featured speaker at the Law Review Banquet in 1982. This Washington, D.C. attorney was Secretary of Labor under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. Dick’s wife, Peggy, works with the Knoxville-Knox County Community Action Committee’s Office on Aging. They have two daughters, Liza, a junior at Kenyon College in Ohio, and Margy, a senior at Holston High School.
Alumni Leadership Awards

Established in 1984, the Alumni Leadership Award is a vehicle for the Dean, faculty, and alumni to give public recognition to certain alumni who have devoted a significant portion of their energies to the welfare of the University of Tennessee College of Law.

Previous winners are: Thomas E. Fox '48, John M. Smartt '48, Robert L. Echols '64, Herbert M. Bacon '50, Ross B. Clark, II '60, W. Allen Separk '69, L. Anderson Galyon, III '71, Charles T. Huddleston '76, and Bernard E. Bernstein '58.

The 1987 awards, in the form of inscribed marble paperweights, were presented at the Annual Fund Appreciation Dinner on October 23 by 1987-88 Annual Fund Chair, John K. Harber '77.

ROBERT R. CAMPBELL
Class of 1956

Bob Campbell has literally answered the call each time the College administration has needed alumni representation on a committee. Most recently, he served on the selection committee for the new Dean of the College. With dramatic adjustments to his normal working schedule, he met with the other members of the committee for many hours of early morning and late afternoon interviews and discussions. He also made special arrangements for other alumni to meet the candidates.

He has been an active member of the Alumni Advisory Council since 1983, and has consulted with us in a variety of ways concerning improvements to the Law Center facilities. He serves on the sub-committee to study proposals for improvements in the Taylor Law Center facilities. Bob's insight, dedication, and guidance have proven extremely valuable to the future of our school.

He is a Knoxville native and a member of the Knoxville firm of Hodges, Doughty & Carson.

ROBERT W. RITCHIE
Class of 1962

Bob Ritchie was the other alumni representative on the selection committee for the new Dean. He epitomizes the reason for the saying, "If you want something done, ask a busy person." Despite his demanding trial schedule and nationwide commitments, he managed to make a substantial contribution to the work of the committee.

Bob has lent his renowned trial expertise to assist our educational program in the Legal Clinic over the years. As a matter of fact, for several years beginning in April of 1967, he was a part-time staff attorney and instructor for the Legal Clinic, eventually assuming considerable responsibility for the advanced criminal clinic courses. He has continued, to the present, to assist the Clinic on an occasional basis for individual demonstrations and critique. Recently, he donated his time to serve on a panel discussion on "Criminal Defense Practice Techniques" sponsored by the Student Bar Association.

He is a native of Corbin, Kentucky, and a partner in the Knoxville firm of Ritchie & Fels.

ROBERT F. WORTHINGTON, JR.
Class of 1957

Bob Worthington has the distinction of having served on the Alumni Advisory Council since its creation in 1973, without a single interruption.

Over those 15 years, Bob has sustained an enthusiasm for the school and has served as a source of encouragement and support for the Law College administration, faculty, and students. Even before the creation of the advisory council, he and his firm have shown their support in a number of ways.

His personal involvement in the life of the school has been manifested in quiet ways: regular attendance at advisory council meetings and official Law College events, substantive comments and intriguing questions presented at those meetings, and a positive attitude about the future of legal education at the University of Tennessee. He has also graciously served the College in official capacities such as that of Class Agent.

A native of Knoxville, Bob is the named partner in the firm of Baker, Worthington, Crossley, Stanberry & Woolf.
ROBERT W. RITCHIE and SIDNEY GILREATH are renovating a building on Main Street in Knoxville so that it will be a miniature version of the old Knox County Courthouse. To be called "The Lawyers Building," it will house the firms of Ritchie & Fels as well as Sidney Gilreath and Associates.

Celebration Honors 40th Anniversary of Legal Clinic

In the November 1948 edition of the predecessor to Alumni Headnotes, "The U-T Law Letter", Charlie Miller reported that a total of 222 cases were received in the first year of the Legal Aid Clinic. Of those cases, 11 involved economic problems, 83 family problems, and 31 property problems.

At the time, the UT Legal Aid Clinic was one of very few across the country, and its director, Charles H. Miller, was a pioneer in the field of providing legal aid to people who could not pay for such services.

Forty years later, the Legal Clinic continues to fulfill its original purpose: to give the student an opportunity to participate in the creative practice of law and an opportunity to develop a sense of obligation to the general public.

Current and former faculty, staff, and students at the Legal Clinic offices gathered on Thursday evening, November 12, to celebrate the 40th anniversary and to honor the founding director, Charles H. Miller. Mr. Miller and members of his family were joined by former directors and staff attorneys such as Jerry Becker, Walter Kurtz (now a judge in Nashville), and Robert Ritchie.

Dean Marilyn Yarbrough and Knoxville Legal Aid Society director Kenneth Collier-Magar presented Charlie with framed memorabilia and a plaque. Dean Yarbrough also announced that another Charles Henderson Miller Lecture in Professional Responsibility will be held in late January featuring Harvard Law Professor Gary Bellow.
