

What's in YOUR Wallet?: The Money Management Simulation

We all know the saying: Money makes the world go 'round. It is no secret that a major part of achieving the American dream is through wise financial decisions. However, with the increasing costs of college education, students are graduating with more debt than ever before.

In this session, attendees will participate in a post-graduation simulation where their financial decision-making will be put to the test. After being divided into groups, each group will receive a card with their starting salaries and incurred debt. The object of the game is to see who has the best method of becoming debt free in the least amount of time. This will be a segment of the conference that attendees will definitely remember.
