This issue of Alumni Headnotes serves two purposes. The first part of the publication includes the latest news and information from the UT College of Law. The latter portion includes information normally published in previous years in the College's Annual Report. As a cost-saving measure, the 1995-96 Annual Report is being combined with the 1997 spring issue of Alumni Headnotes.
On Feb. 14, 1997, Suzanne Livingood died of cancer at her home in Knoxville. She was 48.

From the day she arrived at the law school in 1992 as Director of Development and Alumni Affairs, she began making friends. For some alumni, she gave the school a more pleasant voice and face than the one they remembered. To alumni who remembered the law school favorably but thought the law school had forgotten them, she brought the cheerful news that it had not.

Suzanne and I covered a lot of Tennessee together -- Suzanne driving, by choice, me with the maps in my lap. Though she sometimes let me spell her, she preferred to be behind the wheel. People had trouble with our names. We finally had business cards printed up with both of our names on them. It didn't help. To receptionists from Mountain City to Memphis, we were Lovingood and Writz.

Suzanne was the soul and spirit of the law school's Cornerstone Campaign. A fund-raiser by profession, she had never worked on a major campaign before. The fact that a campaign was in the offing attracted her to the job. When Jack Williams, UTK's veteran and wise vice chancellor for development, first suggested a goal of six million dollars for the law school -- four times what the law school had ever raised before -- I was intimidated. Maybe Suzanne was, too. If she was, nobody ever knew it.

One story tells a lot about Suzanne. On the itinerary for a trip to Chattanooga, Suzanne included Mrs. Corwin. Mrs. Corwin was the widow of a successful and respected UT law alumnus who had left most of his estate to the law school, subject to his wife's life interest. There was no benefit to the law school in any narrow sense from a call on Mrs. Corwin. Nevertheless, Suzanne had made up her mind that we should go and see her, and we made an appointment to take her to lunch.

When we got to the house, nobody was home. The car in the drive had leaves on it. Suzanne decided we should see if the neighbors knew where she was. So we knocked on doors until we found someone who knew that Mrs. Corwin had fallen and been taken to the hospital. The neighbor did not know what hospital, but she did know the name of Mrs. Corwin's doctor. Making calls from a pay phone, we found the doctor, who knew where she was. Bumbling through an unfamiliar part of Chattanooga, repeatedly getting lost (stopping for lunch to refuel), we finally found the rehabilitation center, and -- having lunch in a chair beside her bed -- Mrs. Corwin. Not surprisingly, it took Mrs. Corwin a few moments to figure out who we were. When she did, her face brightened, and she rose up to greet us, saying, "Good old UT!"

In 1992, Suzanne was diagnosed with breast cancer. She went through two radical treatments, and one course after another of chemotherapy. To those who knew about it, or guessed as a result of changes in her appearance and asked, she was frank and forthright. But she never brought the subject up; and so far as those of us who worked alongside her knew, she never submitted to the disease.

Some of us talked about the event we would have for her, celebrating her, when eventually she had to relinquish her work. Then, suddenly, it became apparent that there would be no such event. On the morning of Feb. 14 I drove out to the house to tell her that the Cornerstone Campaign had met its goal, and that we would dedicate the Development and Alumni Affairs Office in the new building in her name (see story on page 5). Her sister-in-law answered the bell. Suzanne had died 10 minutes before.

Suzanne was one of the most courageous people any of us has ever known. She left a lasting legacy to the College of Law. We will remember her for her care and concern for people, her devotion to her family and her church, and her unquenchable spirit.
Campaign Update

Miller & Martin gift recognized in Library

The Chattanooga law firm of Miller & Martin has pledged $125,000 to the University of Tennessee College of Law as part of the University of Tennessee’s 21st Century Campaign.

In recognition of the gift, the Rare Book Room in the new College of Law Library will be named for the firm.

John B. Phillips Jr., a partner in the firm and 1974 graduate of the UT College of Law, pointed out that more than a third of the firm’s attorneys are UT law graduates.

“Our firm has always had a significant connection with the UT College of Law,” Phillips said, “and we continue to benefit from the education the law school provided to us, as well as that being provided currently to law students whom we will recruit.

“We are proud of the important advances which the law school has made in connection with its facilities and programs, and we are pleased to play a part in providing financial assistance to the law school as it moves into the twenty-first century.”

Law Library Director Bill Beintema said the library has been collecting and preserving historic Tennessee legal materials and books, many of which are irreplaceable, for several years.

“The Rare Book Room in the new library will be a worthy home for these treasures, as well as a unique setting for meetings and seminars,” Beintema said. “We are especially excited by the generous gift of Miller & Martin and delighted that the Rare Book Room will be named in their honor.”

Law Dean Richard S. Wirtz said Miller & Martin has been a loyal supporter of the law school for many years. The firm’s members include a Trustee of the University of Tennessee and several members of the law school’s Dean’s Circle and Alumni Advisory Council.

“We’re very pleased with this gift -- the generous pledges on the part of many UT law alumni at one of the state’s premier law firms, plus a pledge from the firm itself,” Wirtz said.

“We have been cherishing the plans for this room for years. It is a one-of-a-kind room. Over the many years for which this building will serve the law school, this room will be the site of some of its most important occasions, including public occasions involving national figures.”

Campaign passes $6 million

The most recent gifts and pledges to the College of Law’s Cornerstone Campaign have pushed the total to nearly $6.3 million.

The most recent gifts and/or pledges of at least $50,000:
- E.H. Avery, Atlanta, Ga., $73,125, Judge Matherne Scholarship Fund.
- Bettye & Sidney W. Gilreath ‘62, Knoxville, $100,000, Center for Advocacy.
- Greene County (Tenn.) Bank, $50,000, Center for Entrepreneurial Law.
- Sandra & James E. Lauderback ’81, Johnson City, $50,000.
- Lockridge, Becker & Valone, Knoxville, $50,000, Center for Advocacy.
- Miller & Martin, Chattanooga, $125,000, Miller & Martin Building Fund.
- Donna & Richard D. Plumley ’93, $1 million.
- John T.M. Rogers ‘74, Greeneville, $100,000, Center for Advocacy.
Plumley's pledge $1 million to UT, law school is beneficiary

Knoxville attorney Richard D. Plumley '93 and his wife Donna have created a $1 million trust for the benefit of the University of Tennessee. In a separate letter, the Plumleys have indicated the gift be used specifically to benefit the College of Law.

Earlier during the Cornerstone Campaign, the Plumley's pledged $50,000 to the new Center for Entrepreneurial Law.

"Rich and Donna Plumley are two of the fine and generous people of the world," said Dean Richard S. Wirtz. "Rich got intrigued with the idea of the Center for Entrepreneurial Law at the law school while he was still a student. He brought valuable insights to the project, based on years of experience building a successful business. This new gift creates an extraordinary legacy for the university and the college."

Prior to entering law school in 1991, Rich served as president of Plumley Companies for seven years. Headquartered in Paris, Tenn., Plumley Companies is a manufacturer of automotive equipment.

Rich is currently an associate with Baker, Donelson, Bearman & Caldwell and concentrates his practice in corporate law.

"I believe that the greatest value which a lawyer can add to society is to competently advise and assist entrepreneurial business people," Rich said. "The UT College of Law is rapidly establishing itself as a source of 'value-added lawyers.'"

Rich graduated magna cum laude from the U.S. Military Academy in 1974 and magna cum laude from the UT College of Law in 1993.

Building dedication to highlight fall semester

Several events have been planned for the 1997 fall semester at the University of Tennessee College of Law as the college celebrates the opening of the new building and the 50th anniversary of the UT Legal Clinic.

The first major event is the dedication of the new College of Law building, scheduled for Sept. 12-14. The dedication weekend will include a Friday night dinner and keynote address, the official dedication ceremony Saturday morning on-site at the new $21.5 million law building, and an upscale dance/party Saturday night sponsored by the Student Bar Association and the Barristers of the Knoxville Bar Association. Suzanne Livingood to be honored in new building

The Development and Alumni Affairs suite in the new College of Law building will be named for Suzanne Livingood, the College’s director of development and alumni affairs who died Feb. 14 at her home following a lengthy illness.

Suzanne had been with the College of Law since 1992 and had previously held fund-raising positions at Knoxville’s Fort Sanders Foundation and Child & Family Services of Knox County.

Dean Dick Wirtz said Suzanne would be remembered for her fund-raising expertise and the friends she made for the college.

“We will remember her for that, with gratitude, but we will remember her even more for her care and concern for people, her devotion to her family and church, and her unquenchable spirit,” the dean said.

Jack Williams, vice chancellor for development at UT-Knoxville, said Suzanne was the “consummate professional, highly regarded by alumni, friends and colleagues.

“Her professionalism and work ethic while fighting serious illness was a source of inspiration to us all,” Williams said.

Suzanne earned the designation of Certified Fund Raising Executive from the National Society of Fund Raising Executives. She was founding president of the Smoky Mountain Chapter of NSFRE in 1988 and served as board member, philanthropy chair, and nominating committee chair.

Active in church work, Suzanne was a member of the Parish Council of Sacred Heart Church and was an active member of All Saints Catholic Church. She won an Addy Gold Award for her work with the Patricia Neal Center and an Addy Silver Award for her work with Hospice. She was the Parent Annual Giving Phonathon Chair for Webb School during 1991-92.

Suzanne was also widely recognized for her success in breeding and showing champion Pekingese dogs.

A native of Louisville, Ky., and a graduate of the University of Louisville, Suzanne is survived by husband, Chris; and two children, Patrick, a graduate student at the University of Michigan, and Jennifer, a student at UT-Knoxville.

Suzanne was buried in the Rest Haven Cemetery in her hometown of Louisville, Ky.

Dotti Bressi named acting director for development & alumni affairs

Dotti Bressi has been named acting director of development and alumni affairs at the UT College of Law by Dean Richard S. Wirtz. Dotti has been the College’s assistant director since June 1995.

Suzanne Livingood, the College’s director of development and alumni affairs since 1992, died after a lengthy illness Feb. 14.

A native of Orlando, Fla., Dotti has worked at UT Knoxville in various capacities since 1992. She was the Panhellenic Advisor for two years before resigning in 1994 to pursue a doctoral degree in educational leadership at UT. She later became a graduate assistant for the UT Vice Chancellor of Development and Alumni Affairs and worked with the University’s 21st Century Campaign organizing and training volunteers for the UTK Family Campaign and the UTK retiree solicitation for the campaign.

Dotti earned a B.A. from the University of Central Florida and a master’s degree in college student personnel from Florida State University. After graduating from Central Florida, she was a national travel consultant with Delta Delta Delta sorority for one year before entering graduate school at Florida State.

Dotti hopes to complete her doctorate in December 1997.
New program to bring noted speakers to the UT Law School

In conjunction with the many exciting developments currently underway at the UT College of Law, a new Speaker Series is being launched to benefit Tennessee's legal, business, political, and educational communities. The first speaker of the series is scheduled for the fall of 1997 to coincide with the dedication of the new law school building.

"The Speaker Series is going to be a great addition to the College of Law," said Dean Richard S. Wirtz. "The energy behind this student-driven initiative is exciting."

Each year, the Speaker Series will host four nationally known speakers who will address issues of importance to a wide spectrum of Tennesseans. Anticipated speakers will be of national interest and stature -- U.S. Supreme Court Justices, heads of federal and state agencies, renowned legal scholars, public interest advocates, business leaders, and public policy makers.

The Speaker Series is broadly overseen by a Board of Advisors comprised of prominent Tennesseans who lend insights to the program based on their positions and experiences (see list below). Board of Advisors members are invited to attend all events associated with the Speaker Series, including small dinners and receptions in honor of speakers.

This program is administered by an executive committee comprised of students from the College of Law. In addition, the Speaker Series has a Student Advisory Group consisting of the executive officer of each of the official student organizations within the College of Law and four at-large members. The Speaker Series executive committee works closely with the Board of Advisors, the Student Advisory Group, and the Law School faculty to coordinate all aspects of the Speaker Series.

The first speaker will appear at the dedication of the new $21.5 million College of Law facility on Sept. 12, 1997. The second speaker will be featured as part of the 50th anniversary and rededication of the UT Legal Clinic on Oct. 17, 1997. Two additional major events will be hosted by the Speaker Series during the spring semester. The Series will also help to organize the 1997-98 Order of the Coif Lecture and will assist in hosting a speaker for the May 14, 1998 College of Law graduation ceremonies.

Fran Ansley attended an international labor rights conference in Guatemala this past summer. The trip was an outgrowth of Prof. Ansley’s interest in the impact of the global economy on workers in the U.S. and in Mexico. The conference commemorated the still-unresolved and unprosecuted disappearance of 27 labor leaders who were taken at gunpoint from a peaceful meeting in Guatemala City June 21, 1980, and never seen by their families or co-workers again. While in Guatemala, Prof. Ansley met with a number of government officials, non-governmental organizations, and firms that have recognized the right of their employees to bargain collectively. She also interviewed Guatemalan attorneys and U.S. and Canadian human rights interns at the Center for Human Rights Legal Action. Any student interested in an internship with the Center should contact Prof. Ansley for more information. Prof. Ansley was a commentator at a symposium entitled “Affirmative Action: Diversity of Opinions” at the University of Colorado Saturday in February. The symposium was sponsored by the Colorado Law Review.

Kelly Browne gave four presentations last summer: one in June on “Using CD-Roms for Legal Research” at a Tennessee Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers/Knoxville Defense Lawyers Association-sponsored Continuing Legal Education (CLE) seminar; two in July, one at the Legal Writing Institute Conference in Seattle on “Teaching Legal Research to Adult Learners” (co-presented by Prof. Steve Thorpe) and the other on “Newsletter Production” at the American Association of Law Libraries Annual Meeting in Indianapolis; and one in August on “Introduction to the Internet,” a Tennessee Bar Association-sponsored CLE seminar. Prof. Browne has been asked to chair the Consortium of Southeastern Law Libraries (COSELL) Public Services Roundtable at the Southeastern Chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries (SEAALL) annual meeting in Tallahassee, Fla., in April.

Neil Cohen and Prof. Don Hall of the Vanderbilt Law School had the 1996 supplement to their book, Criminal Procedure: The Post-Investigative Process (first published in 1995 by Michie), published. Prof. Cohen was interviewed on National Public Radio’s “All Things Considered” program on the right of prisoners to vote. He continued as a Knox County District Attorney in the capital prosecution of Thomas Huskey, charged with the serial murder of four women in Knoxville. Prof. Cohen conducted a three-hour CLE program in Memphis on Evidence for the Tennessee District Public Defenders’ Conference. About 200 public defenders attended. The topic was hearsay and character evidence. Cohen had published the 1996 supplement to The Tennessee Law of Evidence (3d ed. 1995). The supplement was written with Sarah Sheppeard ’79, a UT adjunct faculty member.

The third edition of Constitutional Rights of the Accused by Prof. Joseph G. Cook has been published, in four volumes, by Clark Boardman Callaghan.

Judy Cornett presented a paper, “The Jurisdiction of Reason: Legal Metaphor in the ‘Sophia’ Pamphlets,” at the 1996 conference of the Aphra Behn Society in Athens, Ga., in October. In November, Prof. Cornett made a CLE presentation entitled “Like Snakes in Ireland? Ethics in Divorce Representation” at the Fourth Annual Tennessee Law Review Ethics Seminar. She gave the same presentation at a CLE program sponsored by the Pro Bono Project of the Knoxville Legal Aid Society. Cornett spoke on “Careers in Law” at the UT English Department Career Fair. Also in November, Cornett introduced to the Tennessee Supreme Court two of our alums who recently passed the bar, Margo Maxwell ’96 and Mark Grayson ’96, and she successfully moved their admission to practice in the courts of this state. Cornett read her paper, “The Jurisdiction of Reason: Legal Metaphor in the ‘Sophia’ Pamphlets,” as a member of the panel on “Historicizing Law and Literature” at a conference in February sponsored by the English Department of the University of Southern California.

Melinda Davis has been elected to a three-year term on the Board of Directors of the Friends of the Library (Knox County Public Library) and she is also serving as secretary of the board. Prof. Davis has also been appointed editor of Special Interest Section News (a monthly column) in the AALL Spectrum (a monthly publication of the American Association of Law Libraries).

West Publishing Company has published the 1996 supplements to Bogert, The Law of Trusts and Trustees -- 18 in all. They are the work of Amy Hess.

Associate Dean Mary Jo Hoover was among those who passed the Tennessee bar examination administered this past summer. She was sworn in to practice in Tennessee in January. Dean Hoover is retiring as associate dean for student affairs June 30, 1997.
The College of Law will welcome Colleen Medill as a new faculty member at the beginning of the 1997 fall semester. Prof. Medill comes to UT from the Kansas City law firm of Stinson, Mag & Fizzell, where she has been an associate since 1990. She has been a member of the tax department engaged in substantial corporate and litigation work, including working with pension plans and other retirement planning. Recently, she has published in the Missouri Law Review an article on the law of directed trustees under ERISA. She will teach Gratuitous Transfers in the fall and a course on Employee Benefits Law during the spring semester. Medill graduated first in her class in 1989 from the University of Kansas Law School and received the C.C. Stewart Award given to the outstanding senior law student. While in law school, she served as articles editor on the Kansas Law Review. Upon graduation, she clerked for the Hon. Deanell Reece Tacha of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

Jerry Phillips wrote the lead article in the symposium issue of the Suffolk University Law Review dedicated to the late Prof. Thomas M. Lambert Jr. The article is entitled “A Verray Parfit, Gentil Knayght” and is a long biographical sketch of Prof. Lambert compiled from interviews with Prof. Lambert, his wife Elizabeth, and Prof. Lambert’s friends and colleagues.

Tom Plank’s article, “The Essential Elements of Judicial Independence and the Experience of Pre-Soviet Russia,” was published in the Winter 1996 issue of the William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal. Prof. Plank is co-author, along with nine others, of an article, “Rethinking the Role of Recourse in the Sale of Financial Assets,” recently published in 52 Business Lawyer 159-198 (1996). His contribution was in suggesting the basic theoretical basis for the article. The other authors had prepared an early draft that Prof. Plank thought was not analytically defensible, and they restructured the article along the analytical lines that Prof. Plank suggested and asked him to be a co-author.

Glenn Reynolds, along with Dave Kopel of the Independence Institute, had an op-ed piece published in the Colorado Statesman under the headline “Abortion ban breaks Republican promise.” Prof. Reynolds’ article, “It Takes A Militia: A Communitarian Case for Compulsory Arms-Bearing,” has been accepted by the William & Mary Bill of Rights Journal. It was co-authored with Brannon Denning ’95. Reynolds was a source for a column by George Will entitled “Litigation for Losers” that appeared in the Washington Post Dec. 8, 1996. Reynolds is the author of two entries in the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Tennessee History and Culture. The entries are on the cases of McIntyre v. Ballentine and Andrews v. State. In addition, his article “Shirtpocket Federalism: Lopez and the Partial Birth Abortion Ban” has been published on the World Wide Web. The site is http://www.i2i.org. Reynolds spoke at the New York University Law School in February on property rights in space resources.

Dean Rivkin was a commentator in October for a paper given by Professor Mary Lyndon of St. John’s University Law School at a conference sponsored by the National Center for Environmental Decision-Making Research. The conference focused on “Environmental Decision-Aiding Tools,” and Professor Lyndon’s paper dealt with the “Legislative, Regulatory, and Judicial Setting.” A revised version of Prof. Rivkin’s commentary will be included in a book that will be published based on the conference. In November, Gordon Bonnyman ’72 and Michele Johnson ’94 of the Tennessee Justice Center in Nashville and Prof. Rivkin presented a CLE program entitled “Representing Children and Youth with Special Needs: Health, Special Education, and School Discipline.” The program was sponsored by the Pro Bono Project.

Barbara Stark’s chapter on women and economic rights will be published in Feminist Approaches to Social Movements, Community and Power (Robin Teske and Mary Ann Tetreault, eds., 1997), and her chapter on economic rights and the Cold War will be published in The United States and Human Rights: Looking Inward and Outward (David Forsythe, ed., 1997). In addition, Prof. Stark will present a paper on economic rights at the first Lillich-Newman Colloquium on Human Rights, to be held in Cincinnati next October.

Greg Stein taught a session of “Introduction to the Built Environment,” a course offered by Dean Marleen Davis of the UT College of Architecture. Prof. Stein’s session was devoted to a discussion of the legal relationship between property owners and architects. Prof. Stein’s article “Pinpointing the Beginning and Ending of a Temporary Regulatory Taking,” which appeared in the October 1995 Washington Law Review, has been reprinted in full in “Inverse Condemnation and Related Government Liability.” This set of materials is published by ALI-ABA and served as the program for a CLE program held in Washington, D.C.
Tucker Carrington receives Prettyman/Stiller Fellowship

W. Tucker Carrington, a third-year law student at the University of Tennessee, has received an E. Barrett Prettyman/Stuart Stiller Fellowship from the Georgetown University Law School.

Carrington is the recipient of one of only five Prettyman/Stiller Fellowships awarded each year. Carrington will participate in a two-year program following graduation from UT in May. The first year he will practice in District of Columbia courts under faculty supervision. The second year he will teach in the Georgetown clinics.

Carrington received a B.A. degree in English from the University of Virginia in 1988 and an M.A. in English from Hollins College in 1990.

Carrington was the winner of the national Don Edwards 1996 Bill of Rights Essay Competition held in conjunction with the “First Monday in October 1996: Profiles in Judicial Courage” celebration. His essay was entitled “Injustice Anywhere is a Threat to Justice Everywhere: Creative Responses to the Current Threat to Prisoners’ Rights.”

UT hosts regional trial competition

The UT College of Law and the Center for Advocacy hosted the Region IV National Trial Competition Feb. 20-22 at the Knoxville City/County Building. Twenty teams competed for two spots in the finals in Houston in April. The University of Memphis and North Carolina Central advanced to the finals in this the 22nd year of the competition.

UT’s teams consisted of Melanie Gwinn/Keith Foster and Camille Kirk/Olen Haynes. Adjunct faculty member Bob Jolley coached the teams. Melanie and Keith won both of their trials but were edged out on points for the semifinal rounds. Camille and Olen split their two trials. As second-year students they will form the nucleus for next year’s team.

The Law School received outstanding support from the bench and bar for this competition. Local judges rescheduled matters set in their respective courts so that the competition could take place in courtroom settings. Special thanks to the Honorable Dale Workman ‘69, Chief Judge, for arranging for us to have the courtrooms. Judge Thomas Phillips, United States Magistrate and Judge Wheeler Rosenbalm ‘64 presided over the semifinal rounds.

Ballal, Belew ‘97 Advocates winners

Third-year UT law students Meera Ballal of Cookeville and Amanda Belew of Jackson are the winners of the 1997 Advocates Prize intramural moot court competition at the University of Tennessee College of Law. Second-year students Nick Tooley of Clarksville and Melanie Totty of Centerville finished second.

Belew was named Best Oralist of the competition and Ballal and Belew also teamed to write the best brief. Scott McCullough of Memphis and Benjamin Morgan of Ashboro, N.C., had the second-best brief.

Evidence team takes second at nationals

The College of Law’s Evidence Moot Court team took second place overall and won the award for the best brief at the national tournament in April at the Brooklyn Law School. The Tennessee team was comprised of Mike Giamo of McKenzie, Tony Hullender of Chattanooga, and Kristi Marsh of Knoxville. UT defeated Quinnipiac, New York University, New York Law School, Campbell, and Valparaiso, before bowing to Emory in the finals. The team was coached by Prof. Neil Cohen.

UT second in Client Counseling regional

A team of two University of Tennessee law students finished second in the ABA Regional Client Counseling competition held Feb. 15 at the Mercer Law School in Macon, Ga.

Third-year law students Tracey Carter of Abingdon, Va., and Louis McLendon of Waynesboro, Miss., led UT to a second-place finish in the nine-team, five-school competition. UT was represented by a second team of Karen Anderson of Knoxville and Jerry Hall of Knoxville. The team was coached by Knoxville attorney and adjunct UT law professor Mary Ann Stackhouse.
Admissions

UT attractive to law school applicants; College ahead of national trend

While law school applications are down nationwide, the UT College of Law has not experienced the drastic reduction in numbers that has plagued many law schools. In fact, UT has experienced a modest increase in applicants for the 1997 entering class, according to Admissions Director Karen Britton.

Applications to law schools for the 1997 applicant year are down 11.2% nationwide, a continuation of a nationwide decline that has brought application numbers down from over 100,000 applications for the 1990 entering class to fewer than 70,000 for the 1997 entering class. Law schools across the United States reported dramatic declines in applications over the four-year period from 1992 to 1996 (source: Midwest Association of Pre-Law Advisors survey). Duke University (-33.6%), the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill (-30.5%), and the University of Virginia (-29.6%) are among the dramatic declines in Tennessee's region.

Sharp declines have been noted again for 1997 among schools identified as UT's "peer institutions." The following institutions have reported '97 declines to date (compared with '96 figures): University of Georgia, -20%; University of Kentucky, -13%; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, -24%; University of Oklahoma, -20%; University of South Carolina, -10%; University of Texas, -12%; and University of Virginia, -20%.

The UT College of Law has not experienced these drastic declines in application numbers. Over the 1992-96 four-year period, UT was down just 5.9%. At press time, UT's applications had increased approximately 1% over the total applications for 1996, and 1,130 applications were under consideration for 165 seats in the entering class.

Law schools across the nation faced with declining quality of candidates are choosing to decrease class size in order to maintain the academic quality of the class. Here, UT is again fortunate; the academic profile of candidates for admission has remained stable.

When asked why the news is so good, Britton suggests several factors. "UT is perceived as a good value -- you can get a first-rate legal education here without incurring tremendous debt," she said. "Candidates are impressed by our faculty and by the new law school facility. The admissions staff and committee work hard to let admitted candidates know that UT has a personal interest in them and that they will not be just a number here. We continue to rise in the U.S. News and World Report ranking of law schools, and even though we downplay this, it is hard for candidates to completely ignore these measures of prestige, however questionable."

UT College of Law was ranked 42nd in the nation among the 178 accredited law schools in the magazine's March 10, 1997 issue.

UT employs a number of measures to encourage admitted candidates to accept offers. Britton stressed the helpfulness of UT alumni in this effort. "More than 50 alumni wrote our top admitted candidates to encourage their acceptance of our offer of admission this year," she pointed out. "Students and alumni help the admissions effort by representing UT at various recruitment programs across the state and the Southeast. We know that this level of involvement makes a difference -- our admitted candidates tell us that they do. We will just keep working hard to let candidates know what they would miss if they did not choose the UT College of Law."

UT moves up in U.S. rankings

The University of Tennessee College of Law has been ranked among the nation's top 50 law schools by U.S. News & World Report for the third consecutive year.

In its annual survey of "America's Best Graduate schools" that appeared on newsstands March 3, the magazine rated Tennessee No. 42 among 179 law schools surveyed nationwide. UT continued its rise in the rankings, having been rated No. 49 in 1995 and No. 47 in 1996. For the first time, Tennessee is ranked among the top 25% schools in the nation.

The U.S. News & World Report ratings are based on five criteria: student selectivity, employment success, faculty resources, and two separate measures of institutional reputation.

From the Dean

It was a good year. . . .

At the University Honors Ceremony, the Chancellor recognized Professor Bob Lloyd with the National Alumni Association Teaching Award for outstanding teaching. Professor Fran Ansley and Doris Gentry, the Legal Clinic's receptionist since 1988, were honored for outstanding community service.

Professor Amy Hess assumed the mantle of Bogert on Trusts, with sole editorial responsibility for revising and updating the authoritative 20-volume treatise.

The first 28 students completed the field of concentration in Business Transactions in the Center for Entrepreneurial Law.

The American College of Trial Lawyers honored the law school with the Emil Gumpert award for excellence in the teaching of trial advocacy.

The Tennessee Law Review’s symposium issue on the Second Amendment, organized by Professor Glenn Reynolds, was previewed in the Chronicle of Higher Education and the New York Review of Books; the Review could barely meet the demand for the book.

Faculty members published articles in law reviews around the country on topics ranging from products liability and the constitutional limits of bankruptcy to democracy and international human rights.

It was a year of outstanding team performances:

Director of Clinical Programs Doug Blaze joined with alumni Bob Pryor ’69 and Jackie Dixon ’86 on a Bridging-the-Gap proposal for new lawyers that drew a strong endorsement from the Board of Governors of the Tennessee Bar Association.

The faculty and staff of the Law Library went on-line with an automated, integrated library system that will provide lawyers and judges around the state with direct access by computer to the Law Library’s resources.

A computer program written by Professor Bob Lloyd and students Ken Hoffmeister and Joelle Howard to teach Commercial Transactions won a national award from the Center for Computer-Assisted Legal Instruction.

The faculty adopted a new grading system, based on the work of a faculty-student committee chaired by Professor Carl Pierce, designed to communicate more effectively and make grading more fair.

The Commission on the Future of the Tennessee Judicial System completed two years of work and published a thoughtful and controversial report, To Serve All People. The soul and spirit of the Commission was Tennessee Supreme Court Justice Lyle Reid ’56. The membership included Marty Black ’73, Bob Crossley ’52, and Judge Gary Wade ’73 (and me).

It was a year of exceptional accomplishment by our students.

Tucker Carrington presented a paper entitled “Sweet Home Alabama: The Possibility for a Responsible Dialogue on Prisoners Rights” at the Suffolk Law School's annual symposium in Boston. Ross Booher co-authored an opinion piece in the Chronicle of Higher Education, arguing against subsidized student loans. Brannon Denning ’95, now an associate with the Baker Donelson firm in Memphis, had an article, “Can the Simple Cite be Trusted: Lower Court Interpretations of U.S. v. Miller;” published in the Cumberland Law Review.

- Working as prosecutors under the Supreme Court’s student practice rule, Arnice Adams and Jennifer Dawes won respect for their significant in-court contributions to the successful prosecution of homicide cases.
- The first publication of the Center for Entrepreneurial Law appeared: Braving the Waters, a guide to starting up small businesses in Tennessee, written from experience by Ann Sartwell ’96.
- The four finalists in the Jenkins Prize intramural mock trial competition drew a special commendation by Federal District Judge Leon Jordan ’60 for trying the case with a high degree of civility, as well as skill.

It was a year in which people did unusual things. John Thomason ’52 of the Thomason, Harvey firm in Memphis spent the fall in residence at UT as a visiting professor, designing and teaching a course in Advanced Trial Advocacy. Professor Fran Ansley, director of UT’s Community Partnership Center, negotiated a $500,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for a program to link community groups with university resources. Professor Neil Cohen and Adjunct Professor Bob Jolley, a senior prosecutor in the Knox County District Attorney’s office, swapped jobs for the Spring Semester.

When the College of Law sought support during 1995–96, alumni, faculty, staff, and friends responded with cash gifts of more than $857,000 and pledges of just over $1 million. As this Annual Report was going to press, the College surpassed its initial goal of $6 million for the Cornerstone Campaign and we are moving ahead enthusiastically to our greater challenge of $10.4 million.

There were some sad moments. In September 1995 the College lost professor emeritus R. MacDonald Gray. In November 1995 we celebrated professor emeritus Charles H. Miller’s 90th birthday with him; in July 1996 Charlie passed away. They are mourned by a generation of UT lawyers.

For many of us, 1995–96 was the second year of life on the road. We held classes wherever we could get classrooms. The desks were too small. Sometimes there were not even enough chairs. The students bore up well. At the May hooding ceremony, every graduate got, in addition to a hood, a Class of 1996 hard hat.

We have a building coming on line. It will be nice to be in it.

But it was a good year.

Richard S. Wirtz
Never before in the history of the UT College of Law have the alumni felt a closer relationship to the college or been more generous. There are basically three reasons for the improved relationship and the generosity:

- the leadership of Dean Richard Wirtz,
- the construction of the new facility, and
- the contacts made during the Cornerstone Campaign.

The Campaign is proving to be a development success; hundreds of alumni have been contacted by members of the committee and many by the Dean himself.

The Cornerstone Campaign is the College of Law's development effort which is part of the University-wide 21st Century Campaign and has been tabbed the “Cornerstone Campaign” because of the nice way it correlates with the construction of the new law school. The UT Development Council recently voted to raise the 21st Century Campaign goal from $250 million to $308 million. The goal for UT Knoxville is now $175 million, up from $130 million, with $148 million raised. The law school goal has remained the same, and we surpassed our original goal of $6 million in April 1997. As of April 15, nearly $6.3 million had been generated by the campaign alone, not counting regular annual gifts which would be generated absent a campaign.

We will continue to seek major gifts throughout the campaign. This past summer, we began regional campaigns in some of Tennessee’s metropolitan areas. Beginning in 1997 and continuing until the end of the campaign on June 30, 1998, alums will be contacted by phone and through the mail. I hope you will respond favorably when you are contacted.

My deepest thanks to those who have already made a commitment. Our campaign priorities reflect real needs for program initiatives: students, faculty, and staff; the Legal Clinic; the Law Library; and technology for the new building. You are helping us meet an ambitious goal for the law school.

The real cost for fully funding the priorities is $10.4 million. We call this the Greater Challenge. At the beginning of the campaign, we thought this was truly a dream. Now that we have surpassed our initial goal, we have reason to hope that the seemingly impossible can be achieved.

This is a unique opportunity for the law school to take the lead in legal education. We ask that each of you reach deep in your pockets when you are contacted. Every dollar will be a great investment in the legal profession.

Robert E. Pryor
It was another great year for the UT College of Law Office of Development and Alumni Affairs. From July 1, 1995, to June 30, 1996, over $857,252.00 in cash gifts, and $1,031,828 in pledges were received. Thank you very much for your incredible support!

The College of Law is pleased to report the following, which reflects gifts and pledges reported between July 1, 1995, and June 30, 1996:

NEW FOUNDERS

John T. Milburn Rogers ’74 and Donna Rogers, Greeneville, Tenn., have made a gift commitment to the University of Tennessee College of Law Center for Advocacy. This gift qualifies Mr. Rogers to be distinguished as a Founder for the Center for Advocacy.

The law firm of Woolf, McClane, Bright, Allen & Carpenter has become the first Founder for the University of Tennessee College of Law’s Center for Entrepreneurial Law. The Center for Entrepreneurial Law is a unique, innovative program designed for law students who want to represent businesses, or own their own business.

NEW ENDOWMENTS

Susan B. Anthony Scholarship Endowment

The Susan B. Anthony Scholarship began as an award in 1990 when the East Tennessee Lawyers Association for Women initiated its annual Susan B. Anthony Celebration. The celebrations have increased the community’s awareness of women’s issues and have raised funds to permanently endow the scholarship award. Susan B. Anthony advanced the legal status of women and played a critical role in the passage of the 19th Amendment, which gave women the right to vote. The scholarship award is presented at the Annual Awards Banquet to a student who has demonstrated a commitment to the promotion and advancement of women’s rights.

Judge Carl E. Colloms Scholarship Endowment

A native of Bradley County, Tenn., Judge Carl E. Colloms ’66 has funded a scholarship endowment for students from Bradley, Polk, Monroe, and McMinn counties who are enrolled at the UT College of Law. Judge Colloms has served in law private practice, as the Bradley County Attorney, City Judge for Charleston, Tenn., County Judge for Bradley County, and Child Support Referee for Bradley, Polk, Monroe, and McMinn Counties. Judge Colloms is grateful for the opportunity to attend the University of Tennessee College of Law. He knew as a young child that he wanted to be a lawyer to help people. He was the first in his family to attend college, graduate, and obtain a professional degree. He created this scholarship so others may realize the same dream.

Kleber E. Dunklin Law Library Endowment

A longtime friend of the College of Law and contributor to the Law Library, Kleber E. Dunklin of North Carolina died in 1995. He provided in his will a bequest which funded the Kleber E. Dunklin Law Library Endowment. The income from the endowment is to be used to purchase books, periodicals, journals, research data base subscriptions, and other law-related reference and research materials for the benefit of law students, faculty, and the legal community of East Tennessee.

R. McDonald Gray Scholarship Endowment

The R. McDonald Gray Scholarship was established by Mrs. Dorothy Gray in memory of her husband, Colonel R. McDonald Gray, who died September 6, 1995. Colonel Gray was a professor at the UT College of Law from 1963 to 1977. Before becoming a professor, Colonel Gray served 30 years in the U.S. Army, including assignments as a member of the War Department general staff; staff judge advocate of the Third Army, the Sixth Army, the 18th Airborne Corps and the V Corps; chief of the international law division for the European Theater of Operations; and in General Dwight Eisenhower’s headquarters. He was awarded the Legion of Merit three times, the Bronze Star commendation medals, the Belgian Order of the Crown, the Netherlands Order of Orange-Nassau, and the European Theatre of Operations Ribbons with five battle stars. He was born in Charlotte, N.C., and received A.B. and J.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina.

Howard G. Swafford Scholarship Endowment

To honor the life and accomplishments of Howard G. Swafford ’47, his daughter, Claudia Swafford Haltom ’80, and son-in-law, William H. Haltom Jr. ’78, created a scholarship endowment for students who intend to establish a general practice of law in a rural community. Mr. Swafford earned a B.S. in business administration from the University of Tennessee. With the advent of World War II, he enlisted in the U.S. Naval Air Corp. He served on the battleship South Dakota, participating in the Philippines, Okinawa, and Mainland campaigns. Following law school, Mr. Swafford returned to his hometown of Jasper, Tenn., and began practicing law in 1947 with the oldest law firm in Marion County, Raulston and Raulston (est 1895). The law firm is now Swafford and Swafford, the second being his son, Howard Graham Swafford Jr. Mr. Swafford’s wife, Claude Galbreath Swafford ’48, is also a lawyer. Mr. and Mrs. Swafford have five grandchildren to carry on this family’s dedication to the legal profession.

The John and Patsy Waters Scholarship Endowment

Mr. and Mrs. John Waters have established this scholarship endowment to assist students from Sevier County, Tenn., with their legal education at the UT College of Law. John B. Waters graduated from the University of Tennessee College of Law in 1961. His career includes serving a nine-year term as TVA’s 20th director and a two-year term as TVA’s chairman. He retired from TVA in 1993. Mr. Waters practices law in Sevierville, Tenn., and is of counsel to his son’s firm of Long, Ragsdale & Waters, P.C.

NEW DEFERRED GIFTS

Dr. and Mrs. Nathan F. Ford, Parrotsville, Tenn., established a charitable remainder trust in honor of their three children. One-third of the trust will create the Elizabeth Barger Ford Scholarship Endowment for College of Law students. Beth graduated from law school in 1977.

The Estate of Mrs. H. Williford Gragg made a gift of $50,000 designated to the H. Williford Gragg Professorship of Law Endowment. Mr. Gragg graduated from the law school in 1936 and died in 1987.

Helen C. and Charles D. Lockett ’39, of Knoxville, established a charitable remainder trust that will fund a professorship at the UT College of Law.

The Estate of John F. Schrankel ’54 made a gift of $226,500 designated for the John F. Schrankel Scholarship Endowment. Mr. Schrankel funded the scholarship with a $50,000 gift shortly before his death in 1994.

Harriet and John M. Smartt ’48 have donated a life insurance policy for the benefit of the College of Law.

R. Lee Winchester ’49, Memphis, Tenn., established a charitable remainder trust to support two of his UT interests, the College of Law and UT Memphis.

LAW FIRM GIFTS

Two firms with long histories of annual support for scholarships led the way with campaign gifts to the law school. Bass, Berry & Sims became a Founder for the Center for Advocacy. Waller Lansden Dortch & Davis created the Waller Lansden Dortch & Davis Professorship of Law. Others are following their lead.

Baker, Donelson, Bearman & Caldwell, the oldest and largest firm in Tennessee, also has distinguished itself by making the largest firm gift to date. The firm has created the Baker, Donelson, Bearman & Caldwell Capital Improvement Fund to provide technology in the new law school building.

Ritchie, Fels & Dillard founded a fund to honor the memory of Professor Emeritus Toxey E. Sewell. The Toxey E. Sewell Fund will support College of Law student organizations.

Manier, Herod, Hollabaugh & Smith, longtime supporter of two scholarships, has made an additional commitment to the College of Law’s Cornerstone Campaign. The firm’s campaign gift has been designated to the Harold Warner Capital Improvement Fund to be used for technology and other needs in the new building.

College of Law Class of 1996 Scholarship Endowment and Building Fund

The 1996 graduates chose two class gifts this year. The first is the establishment of a scholarship endowment to assist future students from the state of Tennessee based on both financial need and merit. The second is the purchase of benches for the front of the new law school building. Development Council Co-Chairs Jennifer Penland Keller and Christine Watts Jones led a well-organized effort that resulted in pledges totaling $27,365. Recipients of the Class of 1996 Scholarship will be chosen by the College of Law Scholarship Selection Committee. The first scholarship will be awarded when the endowment balance reaches $15,000.

The College of Law’s 1996 Development Council was organized to assist the Class of 1996 with the determination of a class gift and to solicit the members of the Class of 1996 for contributions. The following students were members of the 1996 Law Development Council:

Career Services

The move across the street to our home away from home in Aconda Court initiated the 1995-96 academic year. A three-week camp-out on the third floor to await final preparations of assigned quarters one floor below preceded our settling in for the remaining year and a half of "transition." The 1920s building, with multiple towers and stairways (as well as interesting nooks and crannies), spawned much speculation about previous occupants.

The arrival of recruiters for fall on-campus interviewing brought one answer to that question when George Bishop of Nashville’s Waller Lansden Dortch & Davis looked around and realized, “I used to live in this building.” Actually, he discovered, it was in the suite next door to Career Services, where the Tennessee Law Review is now quartered. The building had been used as faculty apartments, when Mr. Bishop’s father was a professor of finance here.

“It was a great place to grow up,” Bishop recalled. “I could walk from here to Fort Sanders Elementary School. The lawn in front of the old student center made a great place to play, and students from my father’s classes came by. I used to shag flies with the catcher of the baseball team.” Bishop lived in Aconda Court around 1959-60.

As the recruiting season continued, we heard other interesting stories about the building. Another interviewer recalled he had dated someone here when it was an honors dorm. And a student remarked that Aconda Court had once been used as an infirmary—it seems her grandfather was brought here after suffering an injury as a UT football player, circa 1930.

While affording a ringside view of construction on the new building, the greatest challenge prompted by our transition location continued to be the loss of a captive audience, since students were scattered around campus for classes. Notes in mail boxes no longer sufficed for timely communication of interview selection because most students did not have the opportunity to check their boxes daily.

Thus, necessity provided the impetus for our “getting up to speed” on every available communication technology—moving from the ubiquitous flyers and column in the weekly newsletter to more reliance on answering machines, e-mail, and the World Wide Web. (Check out our site on the College of Law’s home page at http://www.law.utk.edu.)

Career Information Fairs, held each semester in the University Center, took the place of individual career-related seminars and workshops. Students were enthusiastic about this format, and many took full advantage of the opportunity to question more than 50 attorneys about their practice specialties and what should be done now to prepare for similar careers.

As we await our return to new quarters in the renovated Taylor law building, we can reflect on the “transition period” and realize that it has been a really great year!

Employment Statistics for the Class of 1995

The annual employment survey compiled by the Career Services office for the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) showed slight increases in overall employment rates and salaries for UT graduates in the Class of 1995. These increases also were the case for Class of 1995 graduates nationwide, as documented in NALP’s official report Class of 1995: Employment Report and Salary Survey.*

Within nine months of graduation, 92 percent of UT’s Class of 1995 whose employment status was known had accepted employment, compared to 91 percent of UT’s Class of 1994. Eighty-eight percent of law school graduates nationwide in the Class of 1995 had accepted employment during the same period, compared to 85 percent of the Class of 1994. Six percent of UT’s Class of 1995 reported that they were unemployed and seeking work, compared to nine percent of law school graduates nationwide.

Statistics for 131 employed UT graduates by type of initial employer reveal the following breakdowns: 68 percent (89 people) entered private practice; 22 percent (29 people) accepted government-related positions; seven percent (9 people) were employed in business and industry; two percent (3 people) accepted public interest positions, and one percent (1 graduate) was employed in academia.

Fifty-five percent of graduates employed full-time provided salary information, revealing a range of $20,800 to $58,000. The average annual salary of $36,192 reported by UT graduates for all locations and all positions was up slightly from $35,831 for the Class of 1994. For law school graduates nationwide, the 1995 average annual salary was $45,590, up from $44,149 for the previous year. The median starting salary for UT graduates was $36,000, compared to $40,000 for graduates nationwide.

Notable trends for UT’s Class of 1995 included:

- a slight, steady decrease in the percentage of graduates unemployed and seeking work—six percent for the Class of 1995, down from seven percent for the Class of 1994 and eight percent for the Class of 1993.
- an increase in the percentage of graduates accepting full-time legal positions—91 percent of those employed, compared to 86 percent each for UT’s Classes of 1994 and 1993.
- an increase in the percentage of graduates accepting employment out of state—21 percent of the Class of 1995 began their jobs outside of Tennessee, compared to 18 percent in 1994 and 14 percent in 1993. (The percentage for the Class of 1995 more closely approximates the 23 percent average for the Classes of 1989-92.)

* All national statistics were obtained from the Class of 1995: Employment Report and Salary Survey, published by the National Association for Law Placement, 1996.

* NOTE: Six students slated to graduate in May 1994 were not certified to graduate until August 1994, which would have placed them in the official NALP count for the Class of 1995. In error, five of these students were included with employment statistics for the Class of 1994.
