Volume 23, Number 2

This issue of Alumni Headnotes serves two purposes. The first part of the publication includes the latest news and information from the UT College of Law. The latter portion includes information normally published in previous years in the College's Annual Report. As a cost-saving measure, the 1996-97 Annual Report is being combined with the 1997 fall issue of Alumni Headnotes.

The new UT College of Law building was dedicated with a dinner Sept. 12, 1997, at the Knoxville Hyatt Regency and a ribbon-cutting ceremony Sept. 13 in front of the building. Nearly 700 alumni and friends attended the Friday night dinner and 400 were on hand for the ribbon-cutting ceremony Saturday morning.

Legal Clinic Anniversary

Legal Clinic celebrates 50th anniversary, hosts colloquium on clinical education

The University of Tennessee Legal Clinic celebrated its 50th anniversary Oct. 17 and 18, 1997, with a dinner and a colloquium on 50 years of clinical education.

Stephen B. Bright, executive director of the Southern Center for Human Rights in Atlanta, was the keynote speaker at a dinner Friday evening, Oct. 17, at the Knoxville Hyatt Regency Hotel. The colloquium, entitled "Fifty Years of Clinical Education for the Profession," was held Saturday, Oct. 18, in the law school building.

Clinton Lyons, executive director of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, was the Saturday luncheon speaker. Colloquium topics included "Lessons from the Past: The History of Clinical Education," "Teaching Professionalism: The Role of Clinical Education," "Clinical Pedagogy, Legal Education, and the Profession," and "Lawyering Theory: Legal Education and the Profession."

The late Charles H. Miller founded the UT Legal Clinic in 1947 and served as its director until 1975. The UT Legal Clinic was the second such clinic to be founded in this country and today is the nation's longest continually operating legal clinic. The clinic in the new law school building is named for Prof. Miller, who retired in 1976 and died in 1996.

The UT Legal Clinic is a functioning law firm -- a teaching law office. Under a special rule of the Tennessee Supreme Court, third-year law students represent real clients in civil and criminal cases under faculty supervision.

Prof. Emeritus Durward Jones to be honored with professorship

The UT College of Law, in cooperation with alumni, has established a series of CLE seminars on tax issues to raise funds for a tax professorship in honor of Professor Emeritus Durward S. Jones. Prof. Jones retired in 1992 after 27 years as a member of the faculty.

The first seminar, "Probate and Estate Practice Under the New Tennessee Probate Code," was held in October 1997. Future topics will include Planning and Drafting, Estates and Trusts, and tax issues with regard to Qualified Retirement Plans. Future seminars will be held in Chattanooga, Nashville and Memphis with faculty taken from practitioners in those cities.

Prof. Jones received a law degree from the University of North Carolina in 1954 and came to UT in 1965 after seven years in private practice and serving as Guilford County Attorney in Greensboro, N.C. He taught taxation and business-related courses during his tenure at UT. In 1992, Prof. Jones received the Student Bar Association's Outstanding Faculty Member Award.

The Summer 1993 issue of the Tennessee Law Review was dedicated to Prof. Jones.

Anyone interested in contributing to the Jones fund should contact the Development Office at (423) 974-6691 or 1505 West Cumberland Avenue, Knoxville, TN 37996-1810.
The Speaker Series

New law student group gets off to a strong start

The College of Law Speaker Series has enjoyed a strong showing in its inaugural year. The Speaker Series is a new student program at the College of Law designed to host prominent speakers who will address legal issues of importance to a broad spectrum of Tennesseans.

The next big event for the Series will be an interdisciplinary symposium entitled “Revitalizing Cities and Building Community” on April 4. The event will bring professionals from a variety of fields together to address the issues confronted by Tennessee’s cities and large towns facing increasing urbanization.

“The format, along with the selection of co-sponsors, has been driven by a desire to bring together a variety of backgrounds and perspectives to address these challenges,” said Will Ed Settle ’98, Speaker Series Vice Chair for Speakers.

Continuing education seminars will be conducted by the Tennessee Bankers Association, the Tennessee Bar Association, the University of Tennessee College of Architecture and Planning, and the University of Tennessee Center for Entrepreneurial Law. In addition, two discussion forums will be held in which a panel of speakers will address a particular issue, take questions, and lead discussion.

One discussion forum, entitled “Economic Development in Tennessee’s Cities,” will include representatives from the Community Microloan Program, Leadership Chattanooga, and Leadership Memphis. The other forum, entitled “Urban Challenges and Grassroots Organizations,” will include members of the Center for Neighborhood Development, Community Partnership Center, Habitat for Humanity, Individual Development Accounts Program, and the Tennessee Municipal League.

The symposium will begin at 8:30 a.m. with a continental breakfast followed by a variety of continuing education seminars and special topic sessions. After lunch, the event will culminate with a keynote address followed by a reception. The event will conclude around 3 p.m.

Registration fees will vary according to which continuing education or special topic seminars participants wish to attend. Anyone interested in participating in this event or seeking more information should contact the Speaker Series at the College of Law at (423) 974-5998.

The Speaker Series recently co-sponsored the 50th anniversary celebration and re-dedication of the College of Law’s Legal Clinic. Stephen Bright, the Director of the Southern Poverty Law Center, and former Tennessee Supreme Court Justice Penny White addressed the audience.

Most recently, the Series hosted an event entitled The Airbag Debate: Automotive Safety and Products Liability. The forum featured products liability attorneys Sidney Gilreath and Robert Campbell, as well as Stefan Duma, an automobile safety research engineer from the University of Virginia Automotive Safety Laboratory. In addition, the Speaker Series hosted U.S. Representatives Bob Clement and Harold Ford, Jr.

For more information about this event, please contact the Speaker Series at (423) 974-5998.
Marian Wright Edelman, founder and president of the Children's Defense Fund, spoke at the May 15, 1997 hooding ceremony for the Class of 1997. Two excerpts from her address follow:

"We are living at an incredible moral moment in history. Few human beings are blessed to participate or experience the beginning of a new century and millennium. How will we say thanks for the life, for the earth, for the nation, and for the children God has entrusted to our care? What legacies, principles, values, and deeds will we stand for and send to the future through our children, to their children, and to a spiritually confused, balkanized, and violent world desperately hungering for moral leadership?"

"How will progress be measured over the next thousand years if we survive them? By the kill power and number of weapons of destruction we produce and traffic at home and abroad, or by our willingness to shrink, indeed destroy, the prison and violence constructed in the name of peace and security? By how many material things we can manufacture, advertise, sell, and consume, or by our rediscovery of more lasting, nonmaterial measures of success, a new Dow-Jones for the purpose and quality of life in our families, neighborhoods, and national community? By how rapidly technology and corporate mergermania can render human beings and human work obsolete, or by a better balance between corporate profits and corporate caring for children, families, and communities? By how much a few at the top can get at the expense of the many at the bottom and in the middle, or by our struggle for a concept of enough for all Americans? By the glitz, style, and banality of too much of our culture, or by the substance of our struggle to rekindle an ethic of caring, community, and justice in a world driven by money, technology, and weaponry?

"The answers lie in the values we stand for and decisions and actions we take today. What an opportunity for good or evil we Americans personally and collectively hold in our hands as parents, citizens, community leaders, and as titular world-leader in the post-Cold War and post-industrial era on the cusp of the third millennium. Czech Republic President Vaclav Havel said recently that 'there are good reasons for suggesting that the modern age has ended. Many things indicate that we are going through a transitional period when it seems that something is on the way out and something else is painfully being born. It is as if something were crumbling, decaying, and exhausting itself while something else still indistinct were arising from the rubble."

"A thousand years ago the United States was not even a dream. Copernicus and Galileo had not told us that the earth was round or revolved around the sun. Gutenberg's Bible was not printed, Wycliffe had not translated it into English, and Martin Luther had not tacked his theses on the church door. The Magna Charta did not exist, Chaucer's and Shakespeare's tales had not been spun, and Bach's, Beethoven's, and Mozart's miraculous music had not been created to inspire, soothe, and heal our spirits. European serfs struggled in bondage while African empires flourished in independence. Native Americans pleaded our land free of slavery's blight, and Hitler's holocaust had yet to show the depths human evil can reach when good women and men remain silent or indifferent."

"A thousand years from now will civilization remain and humankind survive? Will America's dream be alive, be remembered, and be worth remembering? Will the United States be a blip or a beacon in history? Can our founding principle 'that all men are created equal' and 'are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights' withstand and test of time, the tempests of politics, and become deed and not just creed for every child? Is America's dream big enough for every fifth child who is poor, every sixth child who is Black, every seventh child who is Latino, and every eighth child who is mentally or physically challenged?

"Can our children, each of whom 'comes with the message that God is not yet discouraged of man' says Indian philosopher Rabindranath Tagore, become the healing agents of our nation and world transformation and future spiritual and economic salvation?"

"On Jan. 20, 1997, an extraordinarily important symbolic convergence occurred as we celebrated Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday and inaugurated the last President of the twentieth century. The key question is whether we are going to just celebrate or truly follow Dr. King.

"Many citizens say, 'I am not Dr. King and can do nothing to stop child neglect and ill health.' But we all have some of Dr. King inside us, just as we are God's hands and heart and feet and voice in the world. 'When evil men plot, good men must plan. When evil men burn and bomb, good men must build and bind. When evil men shout ugly words of hatred, good men must commit themselves to the glories of love.' Dr. King counseled.

"Some stand mute when children and the poor are treated unjustly because they are afraid of controversy or failure. Dr. King too was often afraid of police dogs, or violence among his followers and foes alike, of disunity in the movement, and of failure in the face of seemingly intractable obstacles. But as a college student I heard him say to take the first step in faith even when the whole stairway is not revealed and to leave the results to God. He also said, 'If you can't run, walk. If you can't walk, crawl, but keep moving.' The important thing is to keep moving!"

Amy Hess became editor-in-chief of the Real Property, Probate & Trust Journal in August 1997. Micki Fox, Law Review business manager, also joined the Journal on that date as its print manager. They are the first members of the Journal’s professional staff who are unaffiliated with the University of South Carolina since the student editorial board was located there in 1990. Prof. Hess gave two CLE lectures. On Oct. 10, she joined UT alumni Jonathan Reed and Marshall Peterson in presenting an all day program at the UT law school on Practice Under the New Tennessee Probate Code. It was the first in what the group hopes will be a series of CLE programs on tax and estates subjects, the proceeds of which will eventually be used to endow a Durward S. Prof. Lloyd spoke on “Programming in ToolBook 3.0” at the Conference of Law School Computing sponsored by the Center for Computer-Assisted Legal Instruction (CALI). His presentation was broadcast on the Internet. Prof. Lloyd has been appointed chair of the task force studying real estate receivables as part of the redrafting of Article 9 of the UCC.

Student fund started in Dean Hoover’s name

The Mary Jo Hoover Student Organization Fund has been established at the UT College of Law in honor of the longtime associate dean for student affairs who retired June 30, 1997. Creation of the fund was announced at a reception for Dean Hoover in the Commons area of the new law school building on June 13, 1997, just prior to her retirement.

The fund will be used to benefit College of Law student organizations for years to come. Anyone interested in making a gift or pledge to the fund may do so by contacting the College of Law’s Development Office, 1505 West Cumberland Avenue, Knoxville, TN 37996-1810. Call (423) 974-6691 if you have questions.

Dean Hoover received an A.B. degree in philosophy from the University of Michigan in 1959 and a J.D. degree from the Brooklyn Law School in 1969, graduating fourth in a class of 330. She worked as a law clerk for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York (1969-70), a staff attorney for East New York Legal Services (1970-72), an attorney in family law with Community for Legal Services in New York City (1972-73), a managing attorney for MFY Legal Services in New York City (1973-74), and a law clerk with the Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals (1976) prior to entering academia.

Dean Hoover joined the faculty of the UT College of Law in August 1976 as assistant dean and instructor of law. She became the associate dean for student affairs in 1980.

Dean Hoover is best known to the current generation of the law school family as the guiding force behind the move from the old law school building in 1994 and back into the new building this spring. She has twice received Carden Awards for Outstanding Service to the Institution and also received a Chancellor’s Award for Excellence in Advising.

While Dean Hoover has retired from the University, she still plans to work as an attorney in Knoxville, concentrating on pro bono and legal aid activities.

Dean Rivkin completed a site visit to the University of Nebraska Law School as a member of an ABA accreditation team. Prof. Rivkin was quoted in a March 5 Wall Street Journal story about TVA. Prof. Rivkin organized, moderated, and made a presentation at the Centennial Lecture Series of the Chattanooga Bar Association in late September. The topic of the panel discussion was “Judicial Independence.” Prof. Rivkin also presented a teaching demonstration in environmental law at a conference sponsored by the Society of American Law Teachers entitled “Reconceiving Legal Pedagogy: Diversity in the Classroom, Clinic, Theory and Practice.” The Conference, which drew 170 law teachers from around the country, was held at American University Law School. Rivkin published a chapter entitled “Special Education Advocacy in Juvenile Delinquency Representation” in a manual published by the Tennessee Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers called A Practical Guide to Juvenile Defense. Rivkin had an essay published in Tools to Aid Environmental Decision-Making (Springer-Verlag forthcoming 1998). Rivkin was presented with an award “for the gift of your time and expertise in the service of people in the Cumberland Mountains and throughout Tennessee” at the 25th anniversary celebration of Save Our Cumberland Mountains (SOCM).

First two Leech Scholarships awarded to Barker, Murphy

The first two William M. Leech, Jr. Memorial Scholarships have been awarded at the University of Tennessee College of Law. Allison Barker of Crossville and Aaron Murphy of Knoxville are the 1997-98 recipients of the state's largest grants for law students.

Barker, a third-year law student, graduated cum laude from Tennessee Technological University in 1995 with a degree in business administration and personnel and labor relations. She is a member of the UT Student Bar Association and the Law and Medicine Society and has served as a student advisor and a student advocate for the homeless.

Murphy, a second-year law student, received a degree in psychology from Chapman University in Orange, Calif., in 1995, graduating magna cum laude. He was a 1997 summer associate with the Knoxville firm of Lewis, King, Kreig, Waldrop & Catron and was the recipient of the 1996 Arthur B. Hyman Memorial Scholarship at the UT College of Law.

The Leech scholarships were established in July 1997 by the Nashville Community Foundation’s McWhorter Foundation Advised Fund to honor the former State Attorney General and UT law alumnus. Mr. Leech, a 1966 UT law graduate, died in June 1996.

The Leech Scholarships will award $48,000 to six students per year — three each at the UT College of Law and the University of Memphis’ Cecil C. Humphreys School of Law. Each student will receive $8,000.

Four initial scholarships — one to a second- and third-year law student at each school — were awarded for the ’97-98 academic year. Beginning in 1998, an additional scholarship will be awarded to a first-year student at each school.

The Leech Scholarships are awarded to students who reflect the dedication to professionalism in the law and public service exemplified by Mr. Leech. Mr. Leech served as Attorney General and Reporter of the State of Tennessee from 1978 through 1984. After returning to private practice, he became a senior member with Waller Lansden Dortch & Davis, where he represented corporate clients until his death in 1996.

To qualify for a scholarship, students must be Tennessee residents and demonstrate financial need, a high likelihood of academic and professional success, an effort to overcome challenging personal obstacles, and a commitment to public service.

Tennessee Law Review is ranked 41st nationally

The Tennessee Law Review, the UT College of Law’s legal journal, has been ranked 41st nationally by two law professors at Nova Southeastern University.

The professors, Robert M. Jarvis and Phyllis G. Coleman, ranked 161 journals based on the national prominence of the authors of their lead articles. The findings were published in the 1997 spring issue of the Arizona Law Review. The Columbia Law Review topped the list with the Harvard Law Review second.

The Tennessee Law Review is published quarterly by UT law students and includes articles by professors, students, and practitioners on a wide variety of legal topics.
Admissions Networking

The Admissions Office began preparing for the 1998 application year well before the books on the 1997 admission process were closed. Over 40 colleges and universities were visited and hundreds of candidates were met in person by admissions representatives. Numerous additional contacts were made through publications of the College of Law and through the College of Law home page on the World Wide Web.

What role can our alumni play in these outreach efforts? Our alumni are one of our biggest recruitment tools as they offer personal words of encouragement to candidates who are considering law school. We also ask several alumni each year to be profiled in our recruitment brochure, the Applicant Guide.

An outreach activity that proved successful in 1996 and again in 1997 was our Alumni Networker program. Over 50 alumni agreed to write letters to admitted candidates in their area to encourage their acceptance of our offer of admission. We need more volunteers for this year from all over the US -- particularly alumni who are located in Chattanooga, upper East Tennessee, North Carolina, Georgia, and Virginia.

Alumni Networkers! If you are an alumnus of the UT College of Law and you can help us by writing 5 or fewer letters to admitted candidates in early 1998, please contact the Admissions Office with the information requested at right.

Technology becomes greater ally in UT admissions process

The UT College of Law now offers several options utilizing the latest in technology for prospective students.

The latest addition to the College’s web page (www.law.utk.edu) allows students anywhere in the world with internet access and Acrobat Reader software to print all of the forms necessary to apply to the UT College of Law, fill them out at home, and then mail them to the College. Students without Acrobat Reader have the option of requesting, via e-mail, that application forms be mailed to them.

These latest additions to the College’s admission efforts are the result of the work of Bill Hodges, the College’s computer, electronic services, and networking manager. Hodges is now working on a process that will allow prospective students to fill out the forms and return them online.

“We’ve come light years in the last three years,” said Karen Britton, director of admissions and financial aid. “When I came to UT in 1994 our procedure was to gather names and addresses and send students a Bulletin by bulk mail with an application stuffed in the back. It took weeks for students to receive the materials. In some instances they never received them.”

The College now has a comprehensive Applicant Guide and application packet that is promptly mailed to prospective students. All of the pertinent information in the Applicant Guide is also included on the College’s web page, which has been up and running for the past year. The page provides information such as academic requirements and programs, admissions procedures, fees, financial aid, and faculty credentials.

Information about the UT College of Law is also included on a CD Rom that students may order from the Law School Admission Council (www.lsac.org). The CD includes much of the information contained in the Applicant Guide and on the web page, including application forms.
Career Services

Joann Gillespie Rothery retired from the College of Law at the end of December after 13 years as Director of Career Services.

"Though I will so miss the students, employers and colleagues that have been a part of this job that I’ve enjoyed tremendously, it’s exciting to know that my successor is such a dynamic and talented person," Rothery said.

In January, Karen Reagan Britton assumed a new title, reflecting additional responsibilities, as Director of Admissions and Career Services.

Britton has been director of admissions and financial aid at the College of Law since 1994. Prior to moving back home to Knoxville, she worked for eight years at Bass, Berry & Sims in Nashville, directing their administrative areas of attorney recruitment and hiring, associate development, attorney training, and client development. Britton has held several leadership positions with the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) and is a frequent speaker at professional meetings in the field of law career services.

Britton holds the M.S. in higher education, and in May of 1998 will complete her doctoral course work in leadership studies in higher education, with emphases in law and management, and counselor education and counseling psychology. Her doctoral dissertation will focus on the development of a career development concept map for law students, tracing influences on initial career choice from the time of admission to law school through the initial job choice of a new law graduate.

“When Joann told me of her plans, I immediately thought of Karen Britton as a natural to lead the offices of Career Services and Admissions and Financial Aid,” said Dean Richard Wirtz. “Both operations will remain in their current locations in the College of Law building, and Karen promised not to ask for a stair climber machine for Christmas since she will maintain offices on two floors.”

When asked about the transition, Britton said, “The organizational structure and programs of the two operations are complementary. When we counsel candidates for admission, their career development is almost always a part of the discussion. With extremely capable, experienced staff members in both operations, we are looking forward to the opportunity to keep serving the students we admit as they plan their careers during their three years of law school.”

During her tenure as Director of Career Services, Rothery was a founder of the Mid-South Law Placement Consortium and recently served as chair of the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium for two years. As a member of the National Association for Law Placement, she has served as Southeastern regional chair of the publications, alternative careers, and counseling concerns committees. She has also overseen a dramatic growth in Career Services resources and programs, and the office has maintained a graduate placement rate higher than the national average for many years. The College of Law wishes her well as she begins a private career and counseling service.

THIRD-YEAR SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENTS
Career Services

The ending of the 1996-97 academic year was more like a beginning as we moved to the Taylor Wing of the handsome new College of Law building. Career Services moved up—from its previous home in the corner of the basement to offices across from the Dean’s suite on the second floor. Alumni will remember these renovated quarters in the old building as the area behind the circulation desk in the law library—everything has changed except the large supporting beams which now are covered with bulletin boards bearing job notices and interview sign-up sheets for on-campus interviewing.

Our last year in transition continued with the challenges of communicating with students and colleagues scattered all over the campus. The challenges weighed more heavily with students who arrived at our offices from these outposts burdened with tomes of law collected in huge back packs. But as all challenges prompt growth, the Career Services staff and students were pressed to rely more quickly and completely on the latest telecommunications equipment, with e-mail and Web sites gaining on faxes and answering machines. At the same time, old favorites—such as notices taped to the walls and hot pink slips placed in student mailboxes—were not abandoned.

Trends noted during the year included rising student interest in the practice of international law, evidenced not only by individual inquiries about careers and opportunities for study abroad during the summer, but also by a very active International Law Society. On a different note, many others expressed interest in striking out on their own, not because they would have no other opportunities, but rather so because they wished to have control of their work. A Career Services seminar entitled “Nuts and Bolts for Starting your Own Practice,” presented by alumnus Jim Pointe of Rogersville, proved a popular event.

Another highlight was an appearance by Kimm Walton, or the “Job Goddess” as she is called on The National Law Journal’s Web site. Author of Harcourt Brace’s widely read Guerilla Tactics for Getting the Legal Job of Your Dreams...Regardless of Your Grades, Your School, or Your Work Experience, Ms. Walton made a lively, motivational presentation that emphasized the value of networking for one’s arsenal of job hunting tools. Pacing the dais wearing a striped, knit shirt atop black leather pants, the author assured students that one doesn’t have to know people in high places to network. She followed with an anecdote about the successful referral of an unemployed law graduate by trash collectors for his apartment complex to attorneys living a couple of doors down. The Student Bar Association co-sponsored and financed the event.

While on-campus recruiting activity remained near the same level as the previous year, a budding resurgence in the strength of the legal job market was signaled by a year-end count of employer listings soliciting direct contact from students and graduates. Over 346 listings were made during the 1996-97 academic year compared to 246 for 1995-96. With spirits buoyed by new surroundings and encouraging statistics for the Class of 1997, the Career Services staff looked forward to a new school year filled with enthusiasm and high expectations.

EMPLOYMENT STATISTICS FOR THE CLASS OF 1996

The annual employment survey compiled by the Career Services office for the National Association for Law Placement (NALP) for the Class of 1996 showed the first distinctive drop in employment for graduates since the Class of 1991. Average salaries, however, showed a slight increase.

Within nine months of graduation, 88 percent of UT’s Class of 1996 whose status was known had accepted employment, compared to 92 percent of the Class of 1995. Hopefully this decline can be attributed to a larger than usual class size (137 whose status was known, compared to an average of 148 graduates in the Classes of 1991-95), and the change that NALP made in defining the population of a “graduating class” (from August, December and May matriculants to December, May and August matriculants). As a result of this change, seven employed August 1995 graduates were removed from our statistics for the Class of 1996 and do not appear in any information reported to NALP.

Nationwide, employment for law graduates was up slightly to 88 percent of the Class of 1996, compared to 87 percent from the previous year.

Twelve percent of both UT’s Class of 1996 (19 graduates) and the nationwide Class of 1996 reported that they were unemployed and/or seeking work. Of the unemployed UT law graduates, eight were seeking work (the same number as the previous year), seven were not seeking work, and four became full-time degree-seeking students enrolled predominately in LLM programs.

Statistics for 138 employed UT graduates by type of initial employer reveal the following breakdowns: 63 percent (87 people) entered private practice; 20 percent (27 people) accepted government-related positions; 15 percent (20 people) were employed in business and industry; one percent (2 people) accepted public interest positions; and one percent (2 people) were employed in academia.

Forty-five percent of graduates employed full-time provided salary information, revealing a range of $21,500 to $57,500. The average annual salary of $37,868 reported by UT graduates for all locations and all positions was up from $36,192 for the Class of 1995.

For law school graduates nationwide, the 1996 average annual salary was $46,499, up slightly from $45,590 for the previous year. The median starting salary for UT graduates was $37,000, compared to $40,000 for graduates nationwide.

* All national statistics were obtained from the Class of 1996: Employment Report and Salary Survey, published by the National Association for Law Placement, 1997.

The Law Library

Anyone who enters the Law Library is immediately aware of the major accomplishment of its faculty and staff over the past year. 1996 was definitely the year of the on-line catalog, and 1997 will go down in history as the year of the new facility. Remarkable efforts and amounts of time, energy, talent, and personal sacrifice have, over the past several years, been invested in making the Law Library a reality for its various user groups.

After almost two years in a cramped transition facility, during which a percentage of the collection was housed in two off-site facilities and during which full library services were provided to its users, the new facility was finally ready to accommodate the move of staff, faculty, collection, equipment, students and other users. Without doubt, the Law Library’s spectacular new physical facility provides venue for the finest law library ever to grace facilities and during which full library services were provided to the major accomplishment of its faculty and staff over the past five years. Some of the decreasing growth in the collection can be attributed to increased materials costs, especially for subscription items such as reporters, looseleaf services, and other update services.

It is, however, the growth of technology which will mark the Law Library’s transport across the symbolic bridge into the next century. Three years ago, the Law Library negotiated a major leap by assuming the leadership and responsibility for the provision of electronic services and communications throughout the College of Law and between the College and the rest of the world. As a result of this brave step, the College now boasts a local area network with Internet access, two computer labs complete with 55 computers, the Law Library online catalog, the College of Law web site (http://www.law.utk.edu), e-mail, and personal computers on every faculty and staff desk. The capacity for outreach by the College and the Law Library is determined, almost entirely at this point, by the resources available for development of this technology base already in place. Staffing in this area has become painfully inadequate, while the fees for computer ports in the new facility have become staggering. A staff of two supports 200 personal computers, 35 networked cd-rom drives, file servers, mini computers, operating system, and application software. In spite of these drawbacks, plans and work continue for the implementation of the circulation, acquisitions, and serials modules of the automated system, along with exciting enhancements.

The five-year comparison chart illustrates current collection growth and acquisition expenditures. The Law Library now contains 436,129 volumes and microforms volume equivalents. This is a 3.6% increase over the previous year and a 19.3% increase over the past five years. Focus on services to the legal community is anchored on the development and maintenance of a practice-oriented collection and document delivery services, along with professional-level instructional programs. Service focus for the general public is entirely at this point, by the resources available for development of this technology base already in place. Staffing in this area has become painfully inadequate, while the fees for computer ports in the new facility have become staggering. A staff of two supports 200 personal computers, 35 networked cd-rom drives, file servers, mini computers, operating system, and application software. In spite of these drawbacks, plans and work continue for the implementation of the circulation, acquisitions, and serials modules of the automated system, along with exciting enhancements.

In spite of the monumental nature of the Law Library’s recent accomplishments. The faculty continue to make significant service contributions to the College, the University, and the Community, while finding time and energy through personal sacrifice to engineer the development, completion, and publication of research projects. Several Law Library faculty participate in the governance of the University community through their service with forces such as the Faculty Senate and its various committees, the Commission for Women and its array of committees, the Graduate Council and its committees, and the University’s Evaluation of Administrators Process. The Law Library faculty continues to participate also in the governance of the College through their service on the College’s committees including Dean Search...
Committees, director and department head search committees, self-study committees, and other continuing committees such as long-range planning, admissions, readmissions, scholarship and financial aid, technology and information, governance, facilities, building, transition, Clinic Advisory and of course, promotion and tenure.

Topical areas of research and scholarship which are currently in-process, include the insanity defense, prison and institutional law library services, Tennessee legal research, Knoxville legal history, law library history and development, and women and the law. Over this past year, particularly, the Law Library faculty has proven itself to be an energetic, service-oriented and contributing group of professionals and academics with a diverse and interesting array of scholarship interests. As a result of their continuing devotion to these continuing responsibilities, along with their massive efforts which finally resulted in the library's move into the new facility, each member of the Law Library Faculty was recently awarded the College's 1997 Carden Award for Outstanding Institutional Service.

All-in-all, this year has been a positive and eventful one for the Law Library and its user constituency. The tasks before the library at the year's beginning were overwhelming and daunting, but the faculty and staff, in an impressive display of teamwork and determination, were able to overcome and triumph. The new facility provides opportunities for service that have never before been available. Inadequate staffing numbers and stagnating collection growth, however, continue to cast a shadow over the year's victories.
