

8-15-2012

Hot Topic: Attorney General Finds Administrative Hearing Officer Act Provides Adequate Due Process

Josh Jones

Municipal Technical Advisory Service, jonesj@tennessee.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://trace.tennessee.edu/utk_mtastop

Part of the Public Administration Commons

The MTAS publications provided on this website are archival documents intended for informational purposes only and should not be considered as authoritative. The content contained in these publications may be outdated, and the laws referenced therein may have changed or may not be applicable to your city or circumstances.

For current information, please visit the MTAS website at: mtas.tennessee.edu.

Recommended Citation

Jones, Josh, "Hot Topic: Attorney General Finds Administrative Hearing Officer Act Provides Adequate Due Process" (2012). MTAS Publications: Hot Topics.
https://trace.tennessee.edu/utk_mtastop/153

This Bulletin is brought to you for free and open access by the Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS) at TRACE: Tennessee Research and Creative Exchange. It has been accepted for inclusion in MTAS Publications: Hot Topics by an authorized administrator of TRACE: Tennessee Research and Creative Exchange. For more information, please contact trace@utk.edu.

August 15, 2012

ATTORNEY GENERAL FINDS ADMINISTRATIVE HEARING OFFICER ACT
PROVIDES ADEQUATE DUE PROCESS

Josh Jones, Legal Consultant

A recent opinion by the Tennessee Attorney General alleviates the primary concern of cities waiting to implement an administrative hearing officer program. The crux of opinion, No. 12-78, can be found in its last paragraph where the Attorney General states:

[I]n the absence of actual bias being demonstrated in a particular case, an alleged violator's due process rights are not violated merely because an administrative hearing officer reviews the citation, makes a determination that a violation exists, and then conducts a hearing on the citation.¹

The Municipal Administrative Hearing Officer Act (the act) was passed in 2010 as Public Chapter No. 1128 and subsequently codified at Tennessee Code Annotated, Title 6, Chapter 54, Part 10. This TML-sponsored legislation was passed to offer municipalities another tool in enforcing building and property maintenance codes. As the Tennessee Constitution limits judicial fines to $50 where no jury is sitting, cities were severely limited in code enforcement efforts, especially in large commercial projects. The act, relying on cases suggesting that the $50 fine limitation did not apply to administrative bodies, created an administrative hearing procedure that cities can adopt by ordinance. Such programs grant cities the authority to levy fines of up to $500 per day.

Pursuant to the act, a municipal employee such as a building inspector issues a citation to the alleged violator. The citation is then remitted to the administrative hearing officer who makes an initial determination as to whether a violation exists and, when applicable, levies a fine and sets a time period for remediation. The alleged violator can then pay the fine, correct the violation within the allotted time frame, or request an administrative hearing on the matter. It is the latter option that gave rise to concern — specifically, whether the same hearing officer making the initial determination also conducting the subsequent administrative hearing is, in and of itself, a violation of due process.

Due process, the opinion says, is essentially “the opportunity of the party charged to be heard at a meaningful time and in a meaningful manner, before an impartial tribunal.”² A tribunal does not have to be completely uninformed of the matter at

¹Op. Tenn. Atty. Gen., No. 12-78 (July 27, 2012)

²*Id.* quoting Cooper v. Williamson County Bd. of Educ., 803 S.W. 2d 200, 202 (Tenn. 1990)

August 15, 2012

ATTORNEY GENERAL FINDS ADMINISTRATIVE HEARING OFFICER ACT
PROVIDES ADEQUATE DUE PROCESS

hand to be impartial. In fact, it is common for an administrative tribunal to serve in an investigatory and an adjudicative role. This dual role poses no problem unless “the risk of actual bias is intolerably high.”³ Such a threshold is high and only met in extraordinary circumstances such as a hearing officer with a financial interest in the outcome or direct participation in the matters at hand. The act, however, contains numerous procedural safeguards to guard against bias or the appearance thereof. Furthermore, the outcome of the hearing has no bearing on the hearing officer’s compensation.

In light of these procedural safeguards, an alleged violator must demonstrate an actual bias to make a successful due process claim against a municipal hearing officer program.

This opinion should provide cities so inclined with the confidence to move forward with an administrative hearing officer program. However, it should also be fair warning to participating cities that strict compliance with the statutory safeguards is imperative to keeping a hearing officer program impartial and constitutionally sound.

Should you have any questions, contact MTAS.

A copy of the opinion can be found at <http://www.tn.gov/attorneygeneral/op/2012/op12-78.pdf>.

³*Id.* citing Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. 35 and Martin v. Sizemore, 78 S.W. 3d 249

MUNICIPAL TECHNICAL ADVISORY SERVICE

Knoxville (Headquarters) . . . (865) 974-0411	Martin (731) 881-7055
Jackson (731) 423-3710	Nashville (615) 532-6827
Johnson City (423) 854-9882

The Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS) is a statewide agency of the University of Tennessee Institute for Public Service. MTAS operates in cooperation with the Tennessee Municipal League to provide technical assistance services to officials of Tennessee’s incorporated municipalities. Assistance is offered in areas such as accounting, administration, finance, public works, ordinance codification, and water and wastewater management.

MTAS Hot Topics are information briefs that provide a timely review of current issues of interest to Tennessee municipal officials. Hot Topics are free to Tennessee local, state, and federal government officials and are available to others for $2 each. Photocopying of this publication in small quantities for educational purposes is encouraged. For permission to copy and distribute large quantities, please contact the MTAS Knoxville office at (865) 974-0411.

www.mtas.tennessee.edu

The University of Tennessee is an EEO/AA/Title VI/Title IX/Section 504/ADA/ADEA institution.

MTAS4443 • E14-1050-000-010-13