CONTRIBUTORS

Ali A. Abdi is Professor of Education and International Development at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Canada, and president of the Comparative and International Education Society of Canada (CIESC). His areas of research include Comparative and International Education; Globalization, Citizenship and Human Rights Education; and Colonial and Postcolonial Studies in Education. His articles have appeared in such academic journals as Comparative Education, Compare: a Journal of Comparative Education, and Western Journal of Black Studies. He is the author, co-author or co-editor of several books including Culture, education and development in South Africa (2002), Education and the politics of difference (2004), and African education and globalization (2006).

Bijoy Barua PhD, (Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, University of Toronto) is currently an Associate Professor at East West University, Dhaka, Bangladesh. He has worked as researcher, program manager and consultant in Bangladesh, India, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Vietnam, Ghana, Switzerland and Canada. His research interests include: international development; comparative education; participatory research; ethnic minorities; indigenous knowledge; engaged Buddhism; community health; and gender, development and civil society. He has published in academic journals such as the Canadian Journal of Development Studies, Medicus Mundi (Switzerland), Managerie (Germany) and the Parkhurst Exchange (Canadian Medical Educational Journal for Doctors).

Aziz Choudry is completing his doctorate at Concordia University, Montreal, Quebec. He is involved with GATT Watchdog (Aotearoa/New Zealand) and is on the Board of directors for the Global Justice Ecology Project (USA). (www.globaljusticeecology.org)

Dip Kapoor is Assistant Professor in the Department of Educational Policy Studies, University of Alberta, Canada and President (and founding member) of a Canadian voluntary international development NGO that does work in India. He is a volunteer Research Associate at the Center for Research and Development Solidarity (CRDS), Orissa, India and his scholarly/applied interests include: Education and Development; Popular Education, NGOs and Social Movements; Global Education; and Qualitative/Participatory Action Research (PAR). His articles have appeared in the Journal of Postcolonial Education; Gender, Place and Culture; Convergence; Adult Education and Development; and Canadian and International Education.

Kristin Norget is an associate professor of anthropology at McGill University. She has conducted on popular religion in the Mexican state of Oaxaca for the last fifteen years, including the role of the Catholic Church in social movements. Recently, she has become interested in state-sponsored violence in indigenous communities in Oaxaca. She is the author of Days of Death, Days of Life: Ritual in the Popular Culture of Oaxaca (ColumbiaUniversity Press, 2006).

Teresa Strong-Wilson is Assistant Professor in the Department of Integrated Studies in Education in the Faculty of Education at McGill University, Montreal, Quebec. She has published in such journals as: Educational Theory, Journal of Curriculum Theorizing, Changing English, Reflective Practice, and Children's Literature in Education. She has a forthcoming book entitled, Bringing Memory Forward: Storied Remembrance in Social Justice Education with Teachers (published by Peter Lang).