SCULPTURE TOUR 88
This exhibition marks the fifth edition of The University of Tennessee Campus Sculpture Tour. Each succeeding tour has grown in quality and scope, and this year it has attracted both national and Canadian participation. Now an annual event, the arrival of each new collection is greeted by our campus community and our visitors with increasing interest and appreciation. While the arrival of new works graphically reminds us of the power of outdoor sculpture to campus buildings like on new meanings and personalities as a new group of sculptures interacts in these places. This power to elevate and change our perceptions of our familiar daily environment, our walkways, plazas, and sculpture interacts in these places. This power to elevate and change our perceptions of our familiar daily environment, and to stretch our aesthetic research university. Each sculpture, in its own way, punctuates our campus with intriguing combinations of form, color, and content that sit and refresh our spirits above the distracting concerns of the day.

Many people made this exhibit possible. In particular, we are grateful to the artists and to our campus community for their support in the transportation and installation of the sculptures. The artists' generosity and trust in our ability to interpret their work is deeply appreciated. The Curator/Coordinator of the Sculpture Tour, Jack E. Reese, ably assisted by Mr. Dennis Peacock, Loyd Hulette, and Voyd Keck and all of the selected crew members who do the work, the Tour could neither function at its present level nor reach its present level nor reach for future possibilities.

The 5th Annual Sculpture Tour on the campus of the University of Tennessee, has placed twenty-six pieces of sculpture in the Knoxville landscape. With this many large outdoor works, each by a different artist, it is the spectator who does the designing. Without the help of Mike Sherrell, Francis Dyer, voyd Keck and all of the selected crew members who do the work, the Tour could neither function at its present level nor reach for future possibilities.
