Under the terms of legislation passed by the 1951 General Assembly, cities and counties in Tennessee have been authorized to levy a tax on the retail sale of beer, effective April 1, 1951. This bulletin has been prepared as a guide for city officials in the preparation of necessary local legislation and in the establishment of essential administrative procedures.

Administrative procedures presented herein have been based on the experience of other cities levying a similar tax, including Tennessee cities which have imposed the tax under authority granted previously in special legislative enactments. Adoption of uniform tax provisions and administrative procedures may simplify enforcement problems in connection with the tax. This will permit closer cooperation between cities and their respective counties, especially if joint agreements are made to cover collection and other administrative details. However, it is recognized that some modification of these procedures may be required to meet particular local conditions.

The sample ordinances, suggested rules and regulations, and forms in this bulletin were prepared by Anders O. Hustvedt and Porter C. Greenwood, MTAS Consultants. Other MTAS staff members have contributed to the various steps required to bring this bulletin to its final published form.

INTRODUCTION

A new source of revenue is now available to Tennessee cities. Legislation passed this year (Chapter 37, Public Acts of Tennessee, 1951) authorized municipalities to levy a tax on the retail sale of beer. Widespread interest in information regarding a local beer tax indicates that many cities will adopt the tax. To assist these municipalities, sample ordinances, rules and regulations, and report forms for administering the tax are presented in this bulletin.

Two sample ordinances are given. One authorizes the levy of a 10 per cent tax on the retail sale of beer. The second ordinance provides for the licensing of beer establishments. Accompanying these sample ordinances is a compilation of regulations governing the sale of beer and the operation of establishments selling beer. The last section of this publication contains a suggested report form for administering the beer tax and copies of additional forms which may be useful in enforcing the tax.

The sample ordinance levying a retail beer sales tax is based upon the enabling Act cited above (pages 25 and 26). The rate is established at 10 per cent of the retail sale price, the maximum allowed by the Act. Retailers are responsible for the collection of the tax from purchasers and are required to pay the amount to the city recorder at the end of each month. They are given 10 days to file a return and pay the tax. To reduce unfair price competition, prices of beer products must be posted on the premises. Certain records must be kept by the retailer and be available for inspection. Retailers must also file a bond with the city insuring prompt payment of the tax.

The sample ordinance levying the tax does not provide for joint cooperation with the county and other municipalities in the collection and administration of the beer tax. Such a procedure is permitted by Section 7 of the Act (page 26). Because local conditions vary greatly with respect to (1) precedence for joint cooperation, (2) personnel available and trained for auditing, (3) trade channels for distribution and sale of beer products, (4) location and numbers of beer distributors and retail outlets, and (5) cooperative attitudes between public officials and the local businesses affected, it appeared desirable to leave the terms of an agreement for joint cooperation to be drafted after a study of local conditions. The costs of administration under a joint agreement may be apportioned among the participating units according to (1) the tax earned in the respective unit, (2) time spent by personnel on specific assignments, (3) number of establishments in respective units, (4) population, or (5) other equitable basis. A program of joint collection and administration is particularly advantageous to the small cities. For maximum effectiveness, the local legislation and regulations of participating units should be uniform.

The locally adopted ordinances and local conditions will determine the most effective administrative procedures to collect the tax. To assist local officials in developing an effective method, MTAS has designed a "Retail Beer Tax Report" (pages 16 to 17) based upon the provisions of the sample ordinances and regulations included in this publication. Each section of the form is described in the accompanying text.

The majority of small cities will find the record provided by the beer tax report sufficient to administer the beer tax. For this reason, no additional forms are suggested. Through the years, most cities have established a record keeping system and procedures for handling licenses. Rather than suggest changes, it is recommended that the existing beer license procedure be modified to fit the tax routine. The separate beer license ordinance was prepared with this in mind. Additional forms may be prepared as they become necessary.

A number of the forms used by the City of Chattanooga are included in this publication. These forms include an application for license (page 21), audit form for data from wholesalers (page 22), letter notice of deficiency determination (page 23), and surety bond form (page 24). The letter notice of deficiency determination and surety bond form have been modified to fit the provisions of the ordinances and the rules and regulations included in this publication.

Upon the adoption of the retail beer sales tax ordinance, the city recorder should get in touch with all affected establishments. He should remind them of the effective date of the ordinance, the rate of tax imposed, the time and place of payment, and should furnish them with copies of the report form. At this time, the beer retailers may also be furnished copies of the ordinance together with the rules and regulations governing the sale of beer.

Municipalities with a well established licensing system governing beer establishments will find the first ordinance sufficient to begin collecting the beer tax. In fact, some cities have proceeded to adopt a tax levying ordinance immediately on passage of the enabling Act in order to start collecting the revenue as soon as the law became effective. There is no need to delay the adoption of the beer tax to modify existing licensing ordinances, except to amend provisions requiring inspection fees or substantial license fees. Under the terms of the enabling Act, additional taxes or inspection fees on the retail sale of beer are prohibited. This does not, however, preclude the levy of a modest fee to process an application for a license to operate a beer establishment.

The second sample ordinance provides for the licensing of establishments engaged in the business of selling beer at retail. Local officials in cities that have not previously licensed beer establishments will find the regulation of such businesses more difficult than other retail businesses. The major problems in the regulation and enforcement of beer licenses involve the dispensing of draft beer in taverns. The control of bottled beer in other retail outlets, such as grocery stores or hotels, is relatively simple. Local officials in cities permitting the sale of beer for the first time should give careful consideration to the problems involved in the protection of public safety, morals, and general welfare. The city's ordinances and other regulations must be strictly enforced. Frequent inspections of beer establishments, necessary to insure compliance, will require the personal services of police officers with the attendant budgetary support.

The sample ordinance licensing the manufacture and sale of beer establishes a basic procedure for regulating the operation of beer establishments. Cities already licensing the sale of beer may find a number of the provisions useful and incorporate such sections into their present code. Before a license is granted, the applicant must submit information concerning certain facts of his personal history and his place of business. He must consent to a number of conditions as a prerequisite for the license. These conditions cover the manner of operation, dispensing of beer, sale to minors, gambling on the premises, and employment of certain persons. Definite hours of sale are established. The license may be suspended or revoked for violation of the regulations.

The compilation of additional rules and regulations supplements the two ordinances. As provided in the ordinance levying the tax, these regulations may be adopted by a resolution of the governing body without the formality required of an ordinance. The purpose of the regulations is to prescribe in detail the requirements for collecting the tax and the conditions for operation of beer establishments. Adoption by resolution increases the flexibility of making changes.

Price per glass of draft beer

Please attach copies of inventory on hand at beginning and end of period covered.

The retail beer tax is levied pursuant to Ordinance No. , Section 2, which provides:

1. Every person selling beer at retail shall collect from the purchaser thereof a tax of ten (10) per cent of the purchase price and hold same in a separate fund until paid to the city on or before the tenth (10th) day of the succeeding month. Each month the retailer shall submit to the city recorder copies of the "Retail Beer Tax Report" in duplicate together with the amount of tax due. Retailers neglecting or failing to collect the tax shall be liable for the full amount which should have been collected and shall pay the tax themselves. Failure to file the report and pay the tax is cause for suspension or revocation of retailer's license.

unnecessary to address the forms. Chattanooga has 350 licensees reporting to the treasurer monthly. In addition to preparing copies of the monthly beer tax reports in advance for each licensee, Chattanooga also prepares a receipt form, filling in the name, address, and period of anticipated returns. When the tax is paid, the amounts involved are indicated and the original copy of the receipt is given to the taxpayer. The treasurer's office keeps these preaddressed receipts in a special file until called for by the licensee and paid. After the tenth day of the month following the period covered, the unclaimed receipts become the file of delinquent taxpayers. In this manner, prompt enforcement measures may be started against any one of the large number of licensees who becomes delinquent in his payment of the tax. The smaller cities with only a few licensees will not require such a procedure because the outstanding reports will be known by the city recorder by checking over the receipt ledger. For this reason, the suggested report form was designed to permit the extra copy to serve as a receipt. The space near the lower right-hand corner was left for this purpose.

Computation of tax. The large space in the center of the form is used for the computation of the tax. Lines provided for each day in the month are intended to be used to report daily sales of beer and the tax accruing thereon. The daily tax accruals may then be added to obtain the amount of tax due from the retailer.

The retailer is instructed to report beer sales exclusive of the tax. Because of the manner in which records are kept by the retailer, however, the sales figure may include the beer tax paid by the consumer. In this case, the amount of tax due the city is 1/11 of the total gross sales reported. However, if the retailer absorbs the tax himself and does not record the tax in the sales receipts, the tax due is 1/10 of the total beer sales reported.

Use of the 1/11 ratio in place of the 10 per cent figure for retailers absorbing the tax will result in a loss of tax collected amounting to 10 per cent.

For computation of the tax by another basis, such as the quantity (number of cases and barrels) sold, the space at the right center is provided. Retailers of draft beer who do not keep separate sales records of such transactions may use this space for computing the tax on the basis of the number of barrels or kegs sold. The volume of beer consumed is easily translated into the number of glasses, which can be converted to the tax due. Capacities of containers may be translated by the following equivalents:

1 quart contains 32 ounces.
1 gallon contains 4 quarts or 128 ounces.
1 keg (1 barrel) contains 1/2 gallons. This is equivalent to 240 8-ounce glasses.
1 barrel contains 31 gallons or 480 8-ounce glasses.

EXPLANATION OF THE SUGGESTED RETAIL BEER TAX REPORT FORM

Form. The suggested report form (pages 16 and 17) is designed to obtain information concerning the daily beer sales, amount of tax due, and prices of beer products. Additional space is provided for the retailer to report his computation of the tax by other methods, should the figure for daily sales not be available. An extra copy of the report may serve as a tax receipt. The reverse side of the report form (page 17) is designed to obtain supplementary information.

Filing. At the top of the suggested form, the retailer is instructed to file the return and accompanying tax with the city recorder. If another official is designated in the tax ordinance to receive the report and tax, this instruction line may be changed to indicate the proper official with whom the return should be filed. In Chattanooga, for example, the report is filed with the city treasurer. The treasurer's office of that city issues a receipt for the amount of the tax paid and forwards the tax report to the beer tax inspector.

Identification. The name of the city has been left out so that local officials may insert the name of their city to properly identify their form. This name should also appear just below the space for indicating the amount of the tax as a part of the instructions to the retailer, "Make all remittances payable to the City of___."

Name and address. Space is provided at the top of the form in the upper left-hand corner to indicate the name and address of the firm or licensee submitting the return. One return is required from each retail premises selling beer. A firm with a number of retail outlets will submit one for each outlet. An additional space is provided below the line for indicating the license number so that the address of the premises may be shown, where different from that of the licensee.

The arrangement of lines for the firm name, address, and license number permits the use of mechanical addressing equipment. Some cities will prefer to provide each licensee with a supply of the tax return forms and depend upon the individual proprietor to submit his return promptly. This is the practice in Dayton. Chattanooga, on the other hand, prepares a form for each licensee on mechanical addressing equipment. In addition to printing the name and address of each licensee on the form, the month covered by the return is stamped on each form. These forms are then sent to each licensee just before the end of the period for which taxes are due.

Preparation of report form. The question of supplying blank copies of reports or of preparing the name, address, and period covered by the reports in advance will be influenced by the number of establishments. With only two licensees, Dayton finds it unecessary to address the forms. Chattanooga has 350 licensees reporting to the treasurer monthly. In addition to preparing copies of the monthly beer tax reports in advance for each licensee, Chattanooga also prepares a receipt form, filling in the name, address, and period of anticipated returns. When the tax is paid, the amounts involved are indicated and the original copy of the receipt is given to the taxpayer. The treasurer's office keeps these preaddressed receipts in a special file until called for by the licensee and paid. After the tenth day of the month following the period covered, the unclaimed receipts become the file of delinquent taxpayers. In this manner, prompt enforcement measures may be started against any one of the large number of licensees who become delinquent in his payment of the tax. The smaller cities with only a few licensees will not require such a procedure because the outstanding reports will be known by the city recorder by checking over the receipt ledger. For this reason, the suggested report form was designed to permit the extra copy to serve as a receipt. The space near the lower right-hand corner was left for this purpose.

Computation of tax. The large space in the center of the form is used for the computation of the tax. Lines provided for each day in the month are intended to be used to report daily sales of beer and the tax accruing thereon. The daily tax accruals may then be added to obtain the amount of tax due from the retailer. The retailer is instructed to report beer sales exclusive of the tax. Because of the manner in which records are kept by the retailer, however, the sales figure may include the beer tax paid by the consumer. In this case, the amount of tax due the city is 1/10 of the total gross sales reported. However, if the retailer absorbs the tax himself and does not record the tax in the sales receipts, the tax due is 1/10 of the total beer sales reported. Use of the 1/11 ratio in place of the 10 per cent figure for proprietors absorbing the tax will result in a loss of tax collected amounting to 10 per cent.

For computation of the tax by another basis, such as the quantity (number of cases and barrels) sold, the space at the right center is provided. Retailers of draft beer who do not keep separate sales records of such transactions may use this space for computing the tax on the basis of the number of barrels or kegs sold. The volume of beer consumed is easily translated into the number of glasses, which can be converted to the tax due. Capacities of containers may be translated by the following equivalents:

- 1 quart contains 32 ounces.
- 1 gallon contains 4 quarts or 128 ounces.
- 1 keg (1 barrel) contains 15½ gallons. This is equivalent to 240 8-ounce glasses.
- 1 barrel contains 31 gallons or 480 8-ounce glasses.
Chattanooga has resolved questions involving the tax due on draft beer by accepting no less than $2.10 in tax per keg (\(\frac{1}{2}\) barrel). Whatever the basis of computation, the total sales and/or amount of tax due is entered on the lower line of the computation schedule.

Receipt. At the lower right of the computation schedule is a box provided for the use of the city recorder. This space is intended to be used as a receipt where separate receipts are not issued. The lines may be signed or stamped upon payment of the tax. The duplicate, after being checked to agree with the original, may be stamped for a receipt.

Signature. The name of the person completing the tax report, his title in the organization, and date of the return appear at the bottom of the suggested report form. The sample ordinance levying the beer tax includes a provision (Section 11, page 5) to give the report the force and effect of law. This precludes the necessity of having the report notarized.

Supplementary information. On the reverse side, space is provided for the retailer to indicate the price of the different brands of beer in the various quantities commonly stocked. The names of the leading brands of beer have been listed to facilitate completing the data. Additional lines are available to list other brands. The price of draft beer and quantity dispensed in each glass are also listed. Last, the retailer is instructed to file complete copies of his inventory along with the report form. The purpose of gathering the information on this side of the report form is to simplify verification of the report from data relating to the delivery of beer to the retailer.

Instructions. Accompanying the instructions at the bottom of the page is a brief excerpt of the ordinance levying the tax. The proper number of the ordinance levying the beer tax should be inserted in the space indicated.
