ANNOUNCEMENTS AND INTRODUCTIONS

Establishment of Quorum (S. Kurth)
S. Kurth confirmed that a quorum was present.

Announcements (J. Nolt)
J. Nolt introduced President-Elect T. Boulet, Co-Parliamentarians B. Jacobs and C. Pierce, Secretary S. Kurth, Information Officer, S. Ohnesorg, and Past-President D. Patterson. He requested that caucus chairs send their contact information to S. Simmons (ss@utk.edu). He alerted faculty to a number of events that would be held for “Make Orange Green Week.” Athletic Director M. Hamilton is scheduled to speak at the October 20 Senate meeting. Senators were encouraged to send questions in advance of the meeting to Athletics Committee Chair M. Holland (msholland@utk.edu). He announced the goal of keeping the Senate paperless as much as possible.

Senate President’s Report (J. Nolt)
J. Nolt noted the University’s financial woes had led to various actions. The Faculty Senate objected to the program terminations proposed in late spring on the basis of the Senate’s designated authority to approve actions on academic programs. Consideration of the program closures was delayed until the Board of Trustees meeting on October 23 and 24. Interim Chancellor Simek announced in August that the Audiology and Speech Pathology programs would be continued in some form, although not necessarily as part of the Knoxville campus. The bodies delegated academic program review authority, the Graduate and Undergraduate Councils, were engaged in the process of reviewing the programs proposed for termination. The councils are scheduled to report the results of their reviews at the October 20 Faculty Senate meeting.

Nolt depicted the budget situation for the coming year as dire. The Chancellor asked the Deans to consider various scenarios. Additional program closures might be proposed. A new task force was scheduled to begin meeting to establish criteria for identifying programs for closure. Nolt noted that Past President Patterson had proposed differential tuition for UTK in his comments to the Board and the Senate would continue to advocate for it throughout the year. Also, in concert with the campus administration the Senate would advocate for increased energy efficiency, as the campus is particularly vulnerable to rising energy costs. He noted again the energy conservation program, called “Switch Your Thinking” being initiated later in the week. Former Chancellor Crabtree committed the campus to the long-term goal of climate neutrality. Under that plan, ideas about energy conservation would be introduced into the curriculum.
The search for a new Chancellor was underway. Senators were encouraged to attend the public forums that would be held for all candidates or to listen to the webcasts. Nolt suggested that Senators consult with their colleagues at the candidates’ home institutions.

The last Faculty Senate meeting ended in controversy. A debate over conducting a survey to evaluate the President ended when a quorum was lost. Nolt said in his view and the Executive Committee’s it would be counterproductive to pursue conducting a survey as relations with the system had improved. Under the leadership of J. Poore, IT problems were being resolved. The appointment of L. Hendricks as Vice President was another helpful step. Some consultation about the future of Cherokee Farm has taken place. Nolt and Patterson consulted with Vice President Zacharia, although much remains unclear. Nolt expressed concern that a new master plan may represent a weakening of institutional commitment to sustainability, that the planning committee meets irregularly, and that resources might be diverted from fulfilling the campus mission to developing the Cherokee Farm.

A new initiative involves evaluation of the Senate, as the Senate does not do some things well. At the suggestion of C. White, Nolt appointed a Task Force on Senate Effectiveness over the summer. White serves as Chair of the Task Force composed of faculty and administrators. The Task Force has met and the goal is to have it report to the Senate before the end of the academic year. To keep accurate records Senators need to pick up their nameplates and alternates need to sign in and indicate for whom they are substituting. Senators were encouraged to limit making impromptu resolutions from the floor after committees have extensively worked on proposals and to express their concerns prior to Senate meetings (e.g., via e-mail and the listserv). Written copies of any such resolutions should be given to the Secretary.

President’s Report (J. Petersen)
The President commended the Chancellor’s Search Committee for the excellent job it did. At the request of the Search Committee he would be meeting with the candidates to answer questions during their visits. He said he was glad to see the Senate’s paperless agenda. He noted that J. Poore was doing a great job with IT supporting the assessment that the problem was not the quality of UT’s IT personnel, but rather one of leadership.

The budget is an issue. Petersen indicated he was an advocate of strategic cuts. He concurred that the proposed program cuts represented a rushed issue and that pulling the trigger on reductions was a complicated matter. This year the University was out in front of the curve already making plans for a base budget reduction for next year. He noted that the question of differential tuition had been brought up. He suggested that talking about percentages was probably not a good tactic as the percentage was low this year. He recommended looking at states like North Carolina to formulate the differential tuition argument. Comparable institutions that are funded through state appropriations constitute the best comparisons. The University cannot manage another year with a 6% tuition increase and the legislature has been informed that that is the case. He announced that the next day he would be meeting with various constituencies around the state and letting them know that the University’s people were not receiving competitive compensation packages.

He lauded Oak Ridge National Laboratory noting that it was an asset that other institutions would like to have. The current strategy is to build larger projects. Emphasis should be on the fees being generated by projects, as they are not taking away resources but rather adding them. Currently, partners in Memphis are being connected with ORNL.
He said there was a commitment to make Cherokee Farm a sustainable green campus. Gresham Smith would look into that and might bring in a consultant. The project needed to be underway. Three buildings are planned with additional buildings possible. The University needs to promote research, i.e., it was flat the past three years. B. Fenwick has been working on it.

He reviewed various personnel changes. Everyone knows what J. Poore has done. L. Hendricks brings a different orientation to Human Resources, an emphasis on helping units look forward through strategic planning. He was sad to lose B. Levy.

The University faces many challenges, but there are opportunities. Most community colleges in the state are jammed. The University needs to a better job of getting those students into UT. Articulation needs to be improved. Differential tuition is something to consider. There are a number of different unique pieces. One year there was differential tuition. Compared to other states, Tennessee is actually in the minority in that UT’s tuition and Board of Regent schools’ tuition are so closely bunched. The state has a history of making higher end enterprises (e.g., UTK and Memphis) less or under compensated. He cautioned against invoking the lottery scholarships in making an argument for higher tuition as legislators see it as an aid.

T. Wang asked about articulation, specifically whether a task force would track what happens to transfer students after they arrive on campus. She then requested that such tracking occur. Petersen replied that based on anecdotal information the students transferring from Pellissippi State do as well as other students, noting that not all community college students are admitted to UT. Governor Bredesen has been concerned about transfer students wasting time retaking credits.

Interim Chancellor's Report (J. Simek)
J. Simek addressed the environment/energy issue noting the “Switch Your Thinking” campaign aimed at voluntary conservation. He elaborated that it would probably be followed by mandatory changes. He explained that if energy costs were not controlled they would serve as permanent budget cuts. The new coal contract was effectively a 1 or 2 million dollar budget cut. The recent TVA rate increase represents another substantial problem.

R. Leon asked why the Senate meeting room and others on campus were freezing. Simek explained that the monitoring system was archaic. D. Barlow said they were concerned about what to do. There is a need for energy managers to evaluate buildings. P. Crilly said some buildings like Ferris Hall were hot in the winter. J. Kovac pointed out that control problems notwithstanding, the current situation in part reflected years of deferred maintenance (lack of caulking and replacement windows). Simek replied that planned renovations include energy saving changes, e.g., replacement windows. He noted that people have made all kinds of personal comfort accommodations (e.g., heaters, fans, refrigerators) that consume considerable energy. Nolt encouraged people to send comments to him and M. English, Co-Chairs of the Committee on the Campus Environment.

Simek encouraged Senators to go see the Chancellor candidates. He asked that Senators be positive in their comments, while communicating a clear picture to candidates.

Interim Provost’s Report (S. Martin)
S. Martin noted that as a member of the Chancellor’s Search Committee, she would like for Senators to provide their opinions on the candidates. Student retention is important. This summer a new program prepared 55 academically qualified students who face some challenges. She also noted the new Haslam Scholars and study abroad efforts. She reported the Enrollment Management Committee is going to focus on transfer students, i.e., articulation. S. Gardial is working with the Faculty Affairs Committee and the task force focused on program reductions.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES

Faculty Affairs Committee (J. Heminway)
Last spring the Senate approved substantial changes in the Faculty Handbook with reference to the Ombuds position (e.g., three part-time faculty members to one full-time non-faculty person, a service for staff as well as faculty). J. Malia has served on the search committee. Malia reported that there had been 9 telephone interviews. Three people will be invited to campus with the goal of having someone no later than the beginning of the next term.

Heminway stated that the Committee had three focuses this year:

- One was examination of the Faculty Handbook and the Manual for Faculty Evaluation to address issues such as department head evaluations. She noted that any changes would require two readings, so Senators would have ample opportunity to submit their comments before any changes would be voted on.
- The annual evaluation process would be another focus.
- Cumulative Performance Review is the third focus as the Faculty Handbook does not conform with the Board of Trustees’ guidelines.

NEW BUSINESS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

Differential Tuition Resolution (D. Patterson)

D. Patterson introduced a differential tuition resolution. The proposal would be from the Faculty to the Chancellor and President for the October Board of Trustees meeting. He corrected Nolt saying that he did not make the differential tuition proposal to the Board of Trustees.

J. Malia pointed out that President Petersen noted the need to collect data and asked what had been done. Patterson replied the Chancellor's office would collect the data. A question was raised about whether the wording should be about differential tuition or differential rate of tuition increase. Patterson said he had Googled the topic and found both wordings. The resolution passed unanimously.

Subject: UT Announces Graduation Success Rate for 1998-201 Classes

I received this communication from Tiffany Carpenter and wanted to share it with the faculty senate so I'm forwarding it to you. I would appreciate it if you would include this information with the material you send to faculty senators in preparation for the Oct. meeting.

I'm still unable to access the listserv which is the reason I'm sending it to your rather than sending it out myself.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
(865) 974-1361
October 14, 2008
tcarpent@utk.edu
The University of Tennessee men’s and women’s athletics departments announced Wednesday a graduation success rate of 78 percent for student-athletes who entered the university from 1998-99 through 2001-2002.

In 2005 the NCAA rolled out a new graduation success rate (GSR) calculation to measure the academic success of student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. The graduation success rate for University of Tennessee student-athletes in the 1997-2000 cohorts, which was released last year, was 73 percent.

The GSR allows institutions to add transfer students on scholarship that fit into the 1998-2001 freshmen classes and delete those students that choose to leave and are academically eligible according to Progress toward Degree Requirements.

UT also announced the student-athlete federal graduation rate for the 2001-02 freshman class was 61 percent and the student-athlete federal graduation rate for the four year average was 58 percent, compared to a graduation rate for the general student body of 58 percent for the same time periods.

The University of Tennessee’s graduation success rates and federal rates for individual sports were:

The University of Tennessee already had an internal system in place to measure the academic success rate of its student-athletes. The success rate is similar to the GSR, but does not take out students based on transfer. Rather it looks at all scholarship student-athletes in the 2001-2002 freshmen class and then calculates the rate based on their eligibility to be a student at the University of Tennessee. Instead of removing students from the calculation based on leaving the university, which would include athletes who leave to pursue professional careers or transfer to another college or university, it simply looks at the percent of students that were eligible to be students at the University of Tennessee. The academic success rate for this group was 90.5 percent, meaning 90.5 percent of the 2001-2002 freshmen scholarship student-athletes were eligible to return to the university and complete their degrees.

“I am pleased with the success our students have in the classroom. The new graduation success rate is a better indicator than the federal rate of the academic success our students have. The Thornton Center staff works hard to help our students move toward graduation,” said Eric Brey, director of the Thornton Center.

“I am very proud of the accomplishments our student-athletes have made. The Thornton Center staff has done a great job keeping our student-athletes on track to graduate,” said Joan Cronan, women’s athletic director.

The university encourages former athletes who left in good standing to return to the university to achieve their degree. The Renewing Academic Commitment (RAC) Program works with former student-athletes by assisting them with advice on degree requirements remaining, course scheduling, tutoring, employment and internship opportunities offered through the CHAMPS/Life Skills Office, and use of the Thornton Center for their every day needs.

“The RAC program has been a great way for former athletes to return to school and finish their degree,” said Mike Hamilton, men’s athletic director.

There are currently more than 20 former student-athletes that are working with the RAC Program. In 2007-08, there were six graduates in the RAC Program.

prepare them for real-world experiences. In 2001, the University of Tennessee opened the Thornton Athletics Student Life Center to provide student-athletes with superior academic support programs and personal and career development assistance. Since the creation of the Thornton Center, Tennessee’s student-athletes have achieved increasing academic success:

- During the 2007-2008 school year, 80 current and former Vols and Lady Vols graduated from the University of Tennessee, continuing Tennessee athletics’ tradition of commitment to the classroom.

- Tennessee had 226 student-athletes who achieved a GPA of 3.0 or higher in the fall of 2007 and 233 student-athletes who achieved a GPA of 3.0 or higher in the spring of 2008.

- Twenty-nine former student-athletes have returned to earn their bachelor’s degree through the RAC program since fall 2003.

With the recent changes to NCAA rules for academic progression, the role of the Thornton Center is even more important. The new academic progress towards degree requirements require a student-athlete to complete various percentage toward degree requirements, specific grade point averages, and other requirements to remain eligible to compete.

“The Thornton Center has been very active in the NCAA’s academic progression discussions and has put in place a great framework to make sure our athletes stay on track,” said Hamilton. “If our student-athletes aren’t winning academically, they won’t be competing.”
