IPS Staff Meets with Sen. Corker’s Staff

Dr. Mary H. Jinks, vice president of public service; Chuck Shoopman, assistant vice president of public service; and Dr. Paul Jennings, executive director of the UT Center for Industrial Services (CIS) recently met with members of Tennessee Sen. Bob Corker’s field staff.

The meeting was organized by David Leaverton, senior field director for Corker.

The Institute for Public Service (IPS) contingent talked to the staff about the role of IPS and the assistance it provides to statewide business and industry, as well as to city and county governments. Nearly 10 staff members from Corker’s six Tennessee field offices met with Jinks, Shoopman and Jennings.

MTAS Invades the City of Athens for Visioning Session

What is better than having a UT Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS) consultant come to help? Try having 12 MTAS staffers, a MTAS retiree and an Institute for Public Service (IPS) graduate student come to town.

The city of Athens requested assistance in facilitating its community visioning process. Invitations were sent to every citizen, community group and organization to participate in Athens Alive in 2035, a process to determine what the city needs to address to be successful in the year 2035. MTAS responded by sending a host of facilitators including Steve Thompson, Jim Thomas, Pat Hardy, Margaret Norris, Warren Nevad, Dana Deem, Gary Jaeckel, Rick Whitehead, David Angerer, Kurt Frederick, PJ Snodgrass, Frances Adams-O-Brien, retiree Mike Tallent and IPS graduate student Leah Festa.

The process involved meeting two Saturdays in February. The first day was spent working in eight small groups discussing the same five questions on the topics of the environment, education, recreation, transportation, education, planning, public safety and communication. The second day had participants hearing about the common themes among the categories from the previous week and Knoxville Area Elected Officials Attend Municipal Government Overview Course

More than 20 municipal government officials recently participated in Level I of the Elected Officials Academy in Knoxville.

The Elected Officials Academy is a program designed for elected officials. The curriculum was developed to give municipal officials an overview of the varied aspects of their role as municipal leaders.

The purpose of the academy is to provide officials an overview of municipal leadership responsibilities and to offer networking opportunities with other local officials to share ideas and gain new insight from their peers.

Topics included the following: Foundations and Structure of Tennessee Municipal Government; Municipal Charters, Codes and Open Records; Ethics and the Open Meeting Law, Municipal Finance; and How to Be an Effective Council.

The academy is a component of the comprehensive municipal training program provided by the UT Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS). MTAS, an agency of the UT Institute for Public Service, provides technical assistance and training to cities and towns across the state — their governing bodies, mayors, city managers, city recorders and city department heads.

“Our meeting with the staff went very well, and we appreciate that we were able to sit down with them and tell them about IPS,” Dr. Jinks said. “They were very interested in the work of each of our agencies and were impressed with the volume and range of our work.”

In addition to the overall presentation, staff members were given an IPS annual report and a fact sheet explaining the role of each of the agencies. Field staff members also asked for a map outlining the territories and listing field staff for CIS, the Municipal Technical Advisory Service and the County Technical Assistance Service.

then voting on the issues they thought were most important for the city to address over the next 20 plus years.

The top five items in order were: add new recreational facilities; attract diversified industries and businesses; address the need for more parental involvement in education; encourage schools to put less emphasis on standardized tests; and build bypasses.

The city council held a strategic planning session at the end of February and used the report and information from the visioning process to set its goals and objectives for the upcoming year.
How Much Should Organizations Budget for Training?

By Gary Petree, MTAS

To say the least, strains and limitations on budgets during the past few years have been extraordinary. Many leaders of organizations saw training budgets as the quick and easy cut to make in response to hard times.

Now, fortunately, with some change in economic conditions for the better, many organizations, public and private, are beginning to think about how much they will allocate to restore training programs for their employees.

How much should and organization budget for employee training in your organization? The 2011 American Society for Training and Development (ASTD) State of the Industry Report provides the following information that may help with the decision:

- Average expenditure per employee — $1,228
- Average training hours per employee — 32
- Average expenditure as a percentage of payroll — 2.66%

Organizations should also consider the facts that these numbers reflect a year during a multi-year period of a stressed national economy and that many leaders are now looking to ramp up their training to pre-recession standards or better.

Managerial and supervisory training amounted to 13 percent of training programs for employees, followed by 11 percent for professional or industry specific training, 10 percent for training on processes and procedures and 10 percent for training on compliance issues.

Georgia Law Enforcement Attend LEIC Crime Scene Mapping Course

By Matthew Coleman, LEIC

The UT Law Enforcement Innovation Center (LEIC) recently completed the first Crime Scene Mapping course of the new year in Lawrenceville, Ga., hosted by the Gwinnett County Police Department. Troy Wilson and Philip Vandygriff, instructors from the Texas Ranger Division of the Texas Department of Public Safety, conducted the training for 22 local law enforcement personnel.

The 40-hour course, funded by a grant from the National Institute of Justice, taught law enforcement personnel the various methods for collecting data, sketching, diagramming and mapping methods of documenting the crime scene. The course activities included hands-on practical exercises using the various techniques discussed to document crime scenes and participants demonstrated proficiency in the use of AutoSketch to diagram the scenes.

From the final evaluations of the class, one student said, “Instructors were experts in this subject matter and hands-on accurate. I applaud their patience with all the students. This is a challenging course.”

Another student said, “I truly enjoyed this training class. The teaching approach was outstanding, which allowed me to grasp the information quickly and effectively. I would definitely recommend the course to anyone getting into computerized crime scene sketching.”
Smeltzer and Damewood Present Paper at Self-Directed Learning Symposium

Becky Smeltzer, library assistant with the UT Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS), and Andi Damewood, information technology coordinator with the UT Law Enforcement Innovation Center (LEIC), represented the Institute for Public Service at the 26th annual International Self-Directed Learning Symposium recently in Cocoa Beach, Fla.

They co-presented a paper titled “Self-Regulation or Self-Direction? An Investigation of Learner Personality.” Smeltzer also co-presented a paper titled “Citation Patterns in the International Journal of Self-Directed Learning 2004-2010.”

Scholarship Applications to Be Accepted in March

The UT Institute for Public Service (IPS) will begin accepting applications in March for the Mary and Jack Jinks Scholarship and for the Jim and Marie Murphy Graduate Scholarship.

The Jinks scholarship is open to children and family members of IPS employees who are undergraduate students attending a UT campus.

The Murphy Scholarship is available to graduate students who are children of the County Officials Association of Tennessee employees and to children of County Technical Assistance Service employees.

For more information on the scholarships, contact Development Director Rhonda Campbell at rhonda.campbell@tennessee.edu.

Both presentations were well received and will be submitted for publication in a peer-reviewed journal later this year. The symposium featured such topics as the “The Dark Side of Self-Directed Learning,” a presentation on how criminals may use self-directed learning to become better criminals, and “Do We Have Gatekeepers?” a discussion on factors and attitudes that can diminish self-directed learning in some individuals.

By attending the symposium, Smeltzer and Damewood were accepted into the International Society for Self-Directed Learning.

Call Center Can Answer Employees’ HR Questions

Many employees are still not aware of where to turn for human resource questions, such as ‘what if I am subpoenaed for jury duty,’ ‘how many bereavement days am I entitled to,’ and ‘who should I call to verify employment?’ One call to the UT Human Resources (HR) Call Center can answer all of these questions. You can also contact the staff for inquiries about benefits, policies, employment and training opportunities.

The Call Center was started in 2010 and is available from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. (EST), Monday through Friday. In 2011, the Call Center answered 22,290 calls from employees with questions about employment verification, deferred compensation, health insurance, pension and retirement plans, educational assistance and recruitment. The Call Center was able to provide immediate responses to 82 percent of all the calls received and referred other calls to the appropriate offices for a response.

The telephone number is (888) 444-8847 for employees across the state. Knoxville and vicinity employees can call 946-8847. Dan Trentham, team leader, and Michelle Whited, call center specialist, are the primary responders. Together they offer more than 50 years of experience with the university to offer the best service in assisting employees.

UT Celebrates Boling’s 90th Birthday

Dr. Edward J. Boling, who recently turned 90, served as UT System president from 1970 to 1988. His tenure was the longest term of any UT president in the university’s history. Boling also was instrumental in the establishment of the Institute for Public Service.

Under Boling’s leadership, the university saw expanded enrollment and physical growth, particularly on the Knoxville campus. Boling heavily promoted private fundraising and relationships with alumni and was instrumental in providing support for women’s athletics at UT.

In honor of his 90th birthday, UT produced a video tribute that can be found at www.tennessee.edu/boling. Visitors to the website also are invited to leave a message for Boling.

I just returned from the PV 201 course in Kingsport this past week and wanted to express my appreciation for the school. It was well done, and the instructors were top notch. (Earl) Pomeroy and (Russell) Toone were well-versed and were patient with the many questions. They deserve commendation. I would like to thank all involved who planned and paid for this further education, including the Tennessee Solar Institute, the University of Tennessee and the United States government for their kindness and generosity. I hope to continue my education in this field and would like to seek employment in the solar industry and see solar energy fill a greater part of this country’s energy needs.

Thank you for all you did to make the Association of County Mayors’ Strategic Leadership Conference a tremendous success. I got stellar comments from people who usually complain about something. Everybody in the association loves you and recognizes the work you put into the meeting.

I just wanted to pass on to you that I believe e-Li is proving to be one of the most exciting products CTAS has developed yet. I have had positive feedback from many of my members about how helpful this website is in performing their duties. I know a great deal of hard work and effort was put into the development of this program. It is certainly becoming a useful tool to search many previously printed manuals with a keystroke. Again, give a pat on the back to whomever came up with this idea. I look forward to seeing other products that make the lives of our members easier.

The illustrations of key budget elements and concepts that you created (for our MPA students) were especially appropriate since they highlighted what managers need to know about the process and practice of budgeting in a contemporary small community. I appreciate all the time and effort that you invested, and the students really connected with your management approach to the material.

Bonnie (Jones) and Dennis (Wolf) did a nice job collaborating to provide the city with the resources it needed to make recommendations and communicate with employees and city council in clarifying FLSA guidelines and reviewing the fire department’s work policies.

To: Gary Jaeckel and Richard Stokes, MTAS

We are very grateful to you both for your demonstrated expertise, concern, dedication and hard work in making this important (police chief) selection process so successful for the city of Springfield. MTAS has earned the respect and confidence of Tennessee’s municipal governments because of the quality and dependability of its professional consultants, and I wish to congratulate you on a job well done.
