RE: Collaborative Agreement Among Three Institutions, Follow-up to Letter of February 9, 2017

Dear Dr. Sightler:

We received your letter of February 9, 2017 regarding the Master of Science in Supply Chain Management, a collaborative arrangement with two other universities, Tongji University, Shanghai, China, and Kühne Logistics University, Hamburg, Germany. You asked that the disclaimer statement be added to the Memorandum of Understanding.

As discussed with you on Friday, February 24, the program is truly a collaboration and not a dual degree program nor is it a transfer credit articulation agreement. Students from the three universities will be taking classes together, however, they will receive only one degree from their home institution. We have credentialed the faculty from the collaborating institutions. Students from UT will be enrolled in UT courses while in Germany and China. They will receive instruction from credentialed adjunct faculty at the partner institutions. No course work from either of the partner universities will be applied to University of Tennessee, Knoxville transcripts.

The arrangement is akin to international study abroad. The program consists of 39 graduate semester credit hours with 12 taken at KLU (Germany; 31 %), 9 taken at Tongji (China, 23%), and 18 taken at UT (USA, 46 %).

Attached to this letter is the addendum to the memorandum of understanding among the three institutions that includes the disclaimer as required by SACS COC. Each of the institutions signed and sent in separate signature pages, hence there are three signature pages. I did not attach the original memorandum or other documentation previously submitted to your office.

Anticipated Start of Program: Fall Semester 2017 (August 23, 2017)
