RECOGNITIONS

Kristina Coop Gordon, associate professor of psychology and associate director of the clinical training program, has been recognized as one of two consulting editors of the year for 2010 by the Journal of Family Psychology, a publication of the American Psychological Association. Gordon studies how couples react to and resolve major interpersonal traumas in their relationships.

Andrea Meltzer, a graduate student in experimental psychology, received a first prize in the student category for her poster presentation, "Tell me I'm Sexy...But Stay Forever": Interactive Effects of Objectification and Commitment in Relationships." Meltzer was among 248 posters in her category at the yearly meeting of the Society for Personality and Social Psychology in San Antonio. James McNulty, associate professor of psychology, was coauthor of her paper.

Meltzer and McNulty also received attention from the Wall Street Journal recently in a story about their research on the relative weights of husbands and wives soon to appear in Social Psychology and Personality Science.
