2012 Excellence in Academic Outreach

BECKY JACOBS

This year's award goes to Becky Jacobs. Jacobs joined the faculty in 2002 and has taught a wide variety of courses and made significant contributions to the academic field. Her commitment to service is demonstrated in her work as an experienced mediator of civil cases in the Tennessee judicial system—work she does to help alleviate the overburdened court system. She also works closely with the Knox County Mediation Center to organize and facilitate training for attorneys pursuing Rule 31 mediator certification. As director of the college's Mediation Clinic, she helps students receive the same intensive mediation training.

The Excellence in Academic Outreach honor is awarded to a faculty member whose extraordinary contributions to the public have occurred as an outgrowth of academic pursuits and are related to the University's academic mission.

The land-grant mission of the University of Tennessee directs us to use our intellectual capital to benefit the state's citizens. The Academic Outreach Award goes to a faculty member who exemplifies this part of the university's mission.
