Note from the Symposium Editor

In September 2017, Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law hosted a symposium at the University of Tennessee College of Law titled “Business Law: Connecting the Threads.” The symposium was a collaboration between contributors to the Business Law Prof Blog; affiliates of the University of Tennessee Clayton Center for Entrepreneurial Law; and members of Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law. Symposium participants endeavored to connect distinct business law issues, and thereby encourage legal scholarship and benefit law teaching and law practice.

Each symposium panelist contributed a written piece to this issue. Each primary speaker wrote a substantive paper discussing the issue he or she presented during the symposium. Each substantive paper in this issue is followed by two comments, one written by a University of Tennessee College of Law professor and the other written by a College of Law student. The faculty and student authors in this issue spent considerable time and effort in researching their primary speaker’s materials and in preparing his or her response. The symposium’s success was due, in part, to their hard work and diligence.

On behalf of Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law, I would like to sincerely thank the individuals who contributed foundational materials to the symposium: Mr. Kevin Conboy; and Professors Joshua Fershée, Joan MacLeod Heminway, Ann M. Lipton, Douglas K. Moll, J. Haskell Murray, Stefan Padfield, and Marcia Narine Weldon. The symposium would not have been possible without your scholarship and expertise.

Finally, I would like to extend my deepest gratitude to my fellow members of the Board of Editors; our entire editorial team; Professor Joan MacLeod Heminway; Professor George Kuney; Ms. Micki Fox; Ms. Sophia Brown; and the other members of our administration, faculty, and staff at the University of Tennessee College of Law who played an integral role in executing the symposium and this issue. None of this would have been possible without your assistance.
