II. Recruiting

Faculty

'Supply and demand' is the principle under which the School operates for faculty recruitment purposes. It aims for a faculty of doctorate persons.

Students

At the time of the interview, the School had an enrollment of approximately 129 persons, half of whom were part-time students. Of the full-time students, four were Black.

Aside from contacts with Fisk University, the School had not committed itself to the active recruitment of Black students. This inactivity is somewhat predicated on the fact that not much general recruitment had taken place because of the School's lack of accreditation.

Staff

The question of Black staff recruitment is not addressed. The respondent expressed concern about instituting Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action. This concern had been focused upon not offending the perspective minority employee by appearing to make him/her a token Black.
