Susan and Sandra,

I didn’t start out with the intent of doing the enclosed study. After the spring term was over, I was reviewing the minutes for possible items for the Networker, and I came across Gail’s request for help with historical information about women administrators. Since I have been here during the time when women became administrators in Arts and Sciences, I thought that I could do that part for her. I remembered that Sarah Blanshei had been Head of History so I went to the Library to search for dates. Looking for that information sparked my curiosity about other positions, and the scope of my research just grew.

I hope that the information will be helpful to the Equity Issues Committee.

Background on the Status of Women as UTK Administrators

The beginning date for the period covered by this research is the 1970-71 academic year. That year was the basis of the information on which a class action suit was filed that charged the University of Tennessee, Knoxville with sex discrimination. Statistics on women as administrators were included as part of the evidence of sex discrimination. They were reported in the 20 June 1972 Daily Beacon as follows: "Only 24 of 198 people who serve in the ranks of administrative officers, deans, directors, and associate deans and directors are women" (McGinnis).

The Task Force on Women 1972 Report also provides data indicating the usefulness of the early 1970s as a starting point both for the historical record and for tracing progress. They reported that "[n]o member of the Chancellor's staff (Executive Assistant and Vice Chancellors) is female and there is only one female dean (College of Home Economics) and two female directors (one of whom is in the School of Social Work at Nashville)" (90). Further, their analysis of academic-professional employees with faculty rank noted that women department heads were in "traditionally female departments" (71).

A report by the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights documents the status of UT women at the end of the 1970s. An article in the Daily Beacon on 21 May 1982 at the time of the release of the report summarized the findings of the 1979-80 investigation which found both minorities and women to be underrepresented. Overall, the study found "that white males 'clearly dominate' all non-secretarial-clerical occupation categories at UT in both numbers and salaries earned" (Walker). More particularly, "[w]omen held 58 of the executive-administrative positions ... in 1979," from a total of 248. The report also described recent hiring patterns: "'Despite affirmative action plans and assertions of commitment from officials, in just one year (1978), 70 percent of the executives hired were white men.'"

The conclusion of underrepresentation of women in UTK administration also appears in the mid-1980s. An article in the Winter 1985 issue of the Networker stated that although women were 27% of administrators, "[o]nly five percent hold traditionally-defined line administrative positions, such as dean, department head, vice-chancellor" (Mertz).

The most recent information on UTK women in administrative positions comes from a study by the Commission for Women. The statistics, which appear in the Commission minutes of 5 March 1998, are as follows: "1) Chancellor and Vice Chancellors: total 10 positions--70% M and 30% F, 2) Executive/Administrative: Total
Perspective on how the status of UTK women compares to that of women in higher education generally is provided in the Report Card on Title IX at 25 prepared by the National Coalition for Women and Girls in Education. The Report describes the status of women in administration at the enactment of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, in part, as follows: "When Title IX became law, women were noticeably absent at the administrative level in educational institutions across the country. Women reached the rank of department chair at the absurdly low level of less than one percent" ("Employment"). In describing the current status, the Report draws the following conclusions:

Women administrators are more likely than men to hold positions in external affairs and student services than in executive, administrative, and academic affairs. Within each of these administrative categories, women on average are employed at lower ranks and earn lower salaries than their male counterparts.

SECTION I

Administrative Officers for the Campus and Its Colleges/Schools:
Catalog Listings from 1970-71 through 1997-98

A list of administrators is published annually in UTK catalogs. It currently is divided into three categories: Administrative Officers, General Administrative Officers, and Colleges and Schools. A fourth category--Other Educational and Public Service Units--was included through 1992-93. The information below is from those listings.

The dates listed are the dates of the General Catalog or the Undergraduate Catalog in which the information appears. Because of publication deadlines, the lists may not reflect all changes that occurred, thus making some dates inaccurate indicators of the actual term of service. Corrections for such changes were made for 1997-98.

Catalogs for 1970-71 through 1997-98 were checked. The two years before the beginning of the semester system (1986-87 and 1987-88) are combined in a single catalog, and there may have been administrative changes during the second year that do not appear in this record.

Associate Deans and Directors of Colleges and Schools:
Catalog Listings for 1970-71 through 1997-98

Associate Deans or Directors were checked for the same catalog years as for Section I. Listings by full names usually made identification of women possible. In addition, Assistant Deans are noted in brackets when they may indicate the beginning of women’s history in administration in a College or School or when they may indicate a career path for women to a higher administrative position. Dates are catalog dates and may not correspond exactly to appointment periods.

Academic Department Heads

Catalog listings make identification of women department heads difficult because most listings use initials with a last name. Faculty and Staff Directory listings were consulted in some cases as a further source of information.

Research for this section was limited to Colleges and time periods where women's history indicates some possibility of a woman department head. Based on the information in the Task Force on Women 1972 Report, it was assumed that women did not serve as department heads in non-traditional departments prior to the 1970s (71). Additional evidence that women department heads would be found in non-traditional Colleges only in more recent years comes from the status of women faculty in those units. In 1970-71, there were no full-time women faculty in the College of Agriculture or in the College of Engineering and only one in the College of Communications (McGinnis).

Research about the College of Liberal Arts/Arts and Sciences, the largest and oldest of the Colleges, was conducted from two historical markers: 1973 for the first woman department head in the College and 1978 for the second ("Dean's" 1).

The College of Education has recently reorganized into units with Unit Leaders. Only information on those divisions is included, beginning with its history in 1994-95. There were, however, some women department heads under the former structure, but additional research is needed to identify all of them.

Only recent listings were checked for the College of Engineering as only five women were on the faculty in that College as of 30 September 1996, according to the Affirmative Action Plan for 1996-1997 (University 36).

Since women have traditionally held administrative positions in the College of Home Economics/Human Ecology, their complete history is not included here. There have been changes in departments within the College, however, which are reflected in the time period covered for this unit: 1991-92 through 1997-98.

Although this research was not comprehensive, the list is probably complete with the exceptions noted for past years in Education and Home Economics/Human Ecology. As with other sections, the dates of the publications in which the information appears may not parallel the actual dates of the appointments.

Summary

This section presents the research findings in a larger context in order to clarify both the current status and the history of women as UTK administrators. Catalog listings of administrative positions for 1997-98 are used as the basis of the summary. If a woman is listed for an administrative position in 1997-98, an x appears under 1997-98. If the position was not held by a woman in 1997-98 but had been in some previous time period, an x appears under Previously. If a position held by a woman in 1997-98 had also been held by another woman in the past, an x appears in both columns. Because of possible limitations on the data listed in catalogs, the record of previous service should be regarded as tentative.
