Defeated in his 1841 bid for reelection to the Tennessee governorship, Polk retired to his home in Columbia to wait out his two-year sojourn in the political wilderness. He firmly turned aside suggestions that he stand for election to the United States Senate. By pairing his election with that of a prominent Whig, such as John Bell or Ephraim H. Foster, Democrats in the 1841–42 Tennessee legislature hoped to fill both vacant seats and thereby neutralize Whig charges of partisan obstructionism by the Tennessee Senate's "Immortal Thirteen" Democrats, who refused to meet in joint convention with the Whig-controlled lower chamber. Although Whig members of the legislature wanted to fill both U.S. Senate seats with members of their own party and although they could control by a narrow margin any joint convention of the two houses, they took full advantage of the election deadlock to divide the Democracy and ridicule its obstructionist and novel opposition to holding a joint convention. Of course, the Whigs avoided pairing Polk with one of their own leaders, for to do so would unite the Democrats and release them from their untenable position. Polk welcomed a compromise solution to this politically explosive issue; but the leader of Tennessee's Democracy neither desired nor needed to hold high elective office to secure his political future.

As principal executor of Andrew Jackson's political legacy to Tennessee, Young Hickory inherited the frustrating task of conserving the Old Democracy's future at both the state and national levels. If he would defeat the opposition at home, he must stress sectional and state issues at the expense of his mentor's long-standing coalition with the northern Democracy. On the other hand, if Polk focused attention on those questions that transcended sectional and state interests, he would render Tennessee Democrats vulnerable to Whig charges of being too radical, too impractical, and too insensitive in their anti-consolidationist approach to the general government. Many of Polk's advisers urged him to moderate his opposition to economic relief proposals such as those for a more protective tariff, a federal bankruptcy act, and a new national bank. It was ironic that the two major factions in the Tennessee Democracy, the Jackson loyalists and the John C. Calhoun nullifiers, both espoused Thomas Jefferson's radical political creed, but could not agree on the extent to which they might be bound by philosophical considerations.

Calhounites in Tennessee fought every effort to raise a protective tariff and on that issue could pass for Jeffersonian radicals without apology or exception. On the question of founding another national bank, they worried in private, but in public often chose to speak more quietly, if at all, against the measure. Calhounites preferred to talk about local and state issues in their contests for office. Polk had courted and won their support in his 1839 gubernatorial race. As governor he had named Calhounites to interim appointments in the United States Senate. He had brought them into the inner circle of political decision making in Tennessee. Those efforts at party unity notwithstanding, Polk would not support Calhoun for the 1844 presidential nomination. On the other hand, the Calhoun faction in Tennessee could unite with Polk on state issues, but would not back his coalition with Van Buren. It was one thing for Polk to sacrifice himself politically for the redemption of Van Buren's place in history; it was quite another to ask Calhoun's friends to do so. The harsh political reality was that Jackson would not assign his political movement to a former turncoat, and Tennesseans would not accept Jackson's choice for the assignment. Indeed, they had rejected the leader of the northern Democracy in four of the last five elections.

Almost evenly divided in its partisan preferences, the Tennessee electorate's voting habits encouraged office seekers of both parties to hold to the center of their party's ideological spectrum. Because election campaigns at the county and state levels were intensely partisan contests, their outcomes usually rested on arousing party spirit and getting party members to the polls, not on securing support from the small numbers of independent voters or on changing voters' party affiliations. The art of winning elections in Tennessee had become the artifice of avoiding divisive issues and at the same time exciting every member of the party to do his duty. In large measure the partisan mummery of the campaigns sought to innervate the faithful, not to convert the heathen. Stump speeches, torchlight parades, and newspaper propaganda changed the minds of but a few voters, for most party members knew their political arguments in great detail and often with as much sophistication as the candidates themselves. The decisive question in every poll was how many of each party would vote, and to that end party organizers staged mass rallies to reinforce the individual member's will to stand before the election judges and put his ticket in the box.
Voting in the early years of the young Republic was both a very personal and public act of familial pride. Sons generally voted for the party of their father and his father; and although party names might change from one generation to another, political perspectives passed intact from one generation to the next. Many younger voters traced their partisan inheritance back to their grandfathers and took great pride in affirming their family's political tradition. Political preferences, like those of religion, were more often than not questions of birth or marriage; backsliding generally proved more popular than converting to a new creed, particularly so if the lapse of faith could be redeemed in the next canvass by a happier choice of candidates.

Whigs in Tennessee could count themselves fortunate indeed that their party never nominated non-westerners for the presidency. The sectional distrust and conflict that regularly threatened to split the national Democratic coalition barely touched Polk's political adversaries, most of whom had left the Old Democracy in favor of the politics of moderation. By avoiding discussions of national issues Tennessee Whigs could concentrate on holding the middle ground in state elections and thereby could avert party schisms of the sort that had induced many Democrats to stay home on the past several election days. Martin Van Buren and James K. Polk were the two best friends against whom the Tennessee Whigs every campaigned.

Like so many young men of his day, Polk was born and bred to his partisan heritage. That he was dogmatic about his political convictions probably expressed something more of his temperament than his schooling. The content of his political creed closely followed that held by his grandfather, Ezekiel Polk, whose radical rejection of governmental control and religious conformity had led him to the Tennessee frontier. Like many radical partisans of the American Revolution, Ezekiel Polk never overcame his deep distrust of a strong general government; nor did his grandson, James K. Polk, who held to the same republican ideology with such tenacity that he devoted the whole of his adult life to the cause of diffusing political and economic power. Whether in office or not, Polk set aside the counsel of moderation, caution, and convenience, for Young Hickory was too self-disciplined, too self-righteous, and too self-willed to bend to the winds of political opportunism. He would defeat the Whigs on his own terms or not at all.

During his two years in the political wilderness Polk adopted a double-edged strategy for redeeming Tennessee and holding together the aging Jackson-Van Buren coalition. Political lieutenants throughout the state assumed that having come so close to reelection in 1841, Polk would run again for governor in the August 1843 election. His refusals to consider election to the U.S. Senate or solicit an appointment in John Tyler's administration suggest that he wanted another chance at defeating the Whigs of Tennessee. Of course, he could do no further combat in the political arena until he had arranged his personal financial affairs, which were greatly compromised by debts from his 1841 gubernatorial bid. To that end he asked friends in Congress to secure loans and requested agents in Tennessee to sell parts of his landholdings in the Western District. In the summer of 1842 Polk traveled to Cincinnati, Washington City, Philadelphia, and New York in search of cash loans as well as currency of a more directly political nature. Financial pressures in the money markets had not abated since the bank suspensions of late 1839; Polk’s loan applications met with failure in almost every quarter. He likewise learned no more about Martin Van Buren’s 1844 presidential election plans than he had on the occasion of the ex-president’s visit to Columbia in early May. Polk had wanted assurances that if Van Buren were nominated for president, he would insist that the convention settle on a nominee for second place. In 1840 Van Buren had declined to name a vice-presidential running mate; and the National Democratic Convention had failed to make a selection for fear of dividing the party. As early as 1842 it was clear that Polk planned to run for governor in 1843 and for vice-president in 1844; and no one had a more vital stake in Polk’s success than did Van Buren.

By the most deliberate of choices Polk continued to insist that Tennes­see Democrats would conduct the 1843 campaign on national issues. He did not wish to talk about James C. Jones’ record as governor; nor did he wish to promise economic recovery through governmental works proj­ects. By focusing attention on federal questions Polk would identify him­self and his state party with the Jackson-Van Buren coalition and its return to power over the general government. The 1843 governor’s race would be run as a referendum on the 1844 presidential question. By defeating the Tennessee Whigs, Polk would prove that Van Buren was yet “available,” that is, “electable,” in a two-party, slave state. The example must be made, or Van Buren’s standing must remain at the bottom of the South’s list of “available” candidates. In short, Van Buren’s credi­bility as a presidential candidate in 1844 rested largely on the question of whether or not he could win in the South.

Polk’s interest in running for second place on the party’s 1844 ticket involved political calculations of both state and national consequence. His prospects for the vice-presidency could be used to maintain the loyalty of the Tennessee Calhounites, whose votes in the 1843 state elections would be needed and might be secured by holding out the possibility of an 1844 Calhoun-Polk ticket. Although party strategists understood that both nominees could not come from slave states, the idea would appeal to parochial prejudices, however improbable it might be. If Polk were to carry Tennessee in 1843, he would render Van Buren's nomination all but certain and thereby demonstrate his own claims to a place on the ticket, not to mention future preferment. If Polk were to fail in his efforts to redeem Tennessee, he might yet through his vice-presidential bid so position himself as to become every faction's second choice for first place on the presidential ticket, should sectional divisions block the convention from making a choice. Above all other considerations, Polk needed to preserve the old Jackson-Van Buren coalition, for apart from it neither he nor any other leader of the party could hope to bridge the widening chasm of sectional jealousy and distrust. The one unavoidable risk assumed by Polk's strategy was that he and others loyal to Andy Jackson might lose control of the Tennessee Democracy should the Whigs win the state in the 1843 elections. He took that gamble; and had Van Buren's friends in the North financed Polk's third race for the governorship, they might have been more pleased with the results.

Although ostensibly at the close of his governorship Polk retired to private life and resumed the practice of law, he remained the working leader of the Tennessee Democracy. Of course, he would no longer give daily oversight to legislative and party affairs in Nashville, but he continued to offer a guiding hand in making major policy decisions. Unfortunately for his party the Whigs chose the legislative issues and labored successfully to force Democratic members into a corner on two important questions raised in the 1841-42 session. Playing on personal rivalries among the Democrats, the Whigs floated various unlikely compromise tickets for filling Tennessee's two vacant seats in the U.S. Senate. Frustrated by the threat to party unity, Democratic leaders in the upper house fell upon the unhappy expedient of arguing that the traditional mode of selecting senators in joint convention should be abandoned. Whig members answered the argument by turning the principle of majority rule against the Democrats, who could hardly deny the fact of Whig victories in the state elections of August 1841. With an equal measure of self-serving argumentation the thirteen Democratic members of the Tennessee Senate refused to investigate charges of fraud in the management of the Bank of Tennessee. Even worse, they declined to confirm the governor's appointments to the Bank's board of directors. The fraud charges had no basis in fact, but the rejection of Jones' appointments gave credence to more damning allegations of concealment and obstruction. Had not radical Democrats always opposed Whig programs for relief and improvements by raising the double phantom of minority rule through government corruption? The Whigs argued with great glee and some effect that the people need only turn the Democrats out of office to avert such spectral prophecies of republican doom.

Aware that obstructionist tactics might translate into Whig gains in 1843, Polk and his chief aides decided upon the strategy of securing conditional resignations from Democratic members of the legislature and challenging their Whig counterparts to do likewise. The resignation scheme would have required calling special legislative elections throughout the state to determine the electorate’s specific wishes for ending the deadlock over choosing Tennessee’s U.S. senators. Whig members countered the Democratic proposal with the argument that the previous year’s elections had settled the question by giving their party a clear majority in the lower house and returning a Whig governor to office. The plebiscite plan went nowhere, and of necessity new stratagems surfaced when the legislature met in special session on October 3, 1842.

Tennessee’s General Assembly gathered to consider legislation for the relief of debtors, to fill the state’s two vacant seats in the U.S. Senate, and to draw new boundaries for legislative, senatorial, and congressional districts. Several experienced observers thought it unlikely that the legislature would agree on any measures, and predictions of an addled assembly came close to their mark. Majorities in both parties rejected banking and judicial schemes for easing credit and postponing foreclosures for nonpayment of debts. The “Immortal Thirteen” Democrats in the upper house refused to meet in convention with the Whig majority that controlled the lower house. Only on the redistricting questions could the arts of compromise be practiced with any concluding effects. The most efficient piece of management came in drawing off the congressional boundaries, and with a quick sleight of hand Andrew Johnson, chairman of the Senate congressional redistricting committee, gerrymandered three members of his own party out of their seats in Congress. By separating Abraham McClellan, Hopkins L. Turney, and Harvey M. Watterson from political alliances in neighboring counties, Johnson so arranged the new first and fifth districts as to facilitate congressional nominations for himself and his close friend, George W. Jones. Although Johnson and Jones both won their seats in Congress, the dislocation of incumbents occasioned severe intra-party fights in the new first, fourth, and fifth districts. The pattern for resolving those conflicts repeated itself in almost every instance: Van Burenites gave way to Calhounites for the sake of party unity and the hope of local and state victories.

As in previous state elections since 1835, Polk determined party strategy and directed party organizational efforts prior to the crucial canvass of 1843. Working in the Tennessee House through his brother, William H. Polk, and in the Senate through his closest confidant, Samuel H. Laughlin, the “retired” former governor arranged for the Democratic members of the special session of the legislature to hold a caucus and adopt a platform around which the party might unite. The resolves favored rigid economy in the general government and literal construction of the federal constitution; they denounced adoption of protective tariffs and internal improvements, creation of a national bank, distribution to the states of federal revenues from the sale of public lands, and provision for federal bankruptcy proceedings. Recounting the origins of the Whig party, these lengthy resolutions quoted a previous General Assembly's declarations alleging that in 1825 John Q. Adams and Henry Clay had made a corrupt bargain to steal the presidency; the platform then listed by name and current party affiliation those who had voted in 1827 to condemn Adams and Clay. The argument that many prominent Whigs initially had opposed the founders of their party was further supported by embarrassing quotations from letters written and published in 1827 by John Bell, then a strong supporter of Andrew Jackson. Taken together, the platform addressed national issues and called the party to unite against Henry Clay's election to the presidency. The caucus urged that Democrats hold their nominating convention six months earlier than usual and recommended that primary meetings be organized in each county to make plans for the 1843 elections. No mention was made of Polk's running for governor or for a place on the national ticket; however, the call for an early meeting in Baltimore passed for an informal endorsement of Van Buren, whose friends had taken that tack in several other states. Calhoun partisans discouraged the idea and held firm for a gathering of delegates in May of 1844.

Early in 1843 Polk launched new organizational efforts for promoting and financing party candidates in the forthcoming August elections. He used the Maury County Corresponding Committee as a model for building a more effective network of communications among party workers at the local and county levels. Within every civil district the county's corresponding committee would target and solicit prospective donors, identify by name and party preference each voter, and circulate campaign literature as might be generated locally or supplied by the Central Committee in Nashville. Polk urged the Nashville Union to publish a separate newspaper during the campaign, but projected costs proved prohibitive. Instead, the Union devoted its weekly edition to the state elections and offered it to subscribers at a special rate of $1 for those issues appearing between March 15 and election day. Having placed his party's election machinery in motion, Polk made his formal announcement for governor on February 10, 1843.

The 1843 gubernatorial campaign would take Polk and his opponent, James C. Jones, from the swamp lands of the Mississippi to the mountains of Carolina and Virginia. The candidates would debate in more than eighty counties during the four-month canvass, which opened on March 24 in Springfield, a small village just north of Nashville. The schedule called for visits in the Western District before the onset of the summer heat and for appointments in the higher regions of East Tennessee during late June and July. Traveling by horseback in the morning hours, the candidates arrived at the speaking site by mid afternoon, debated for some five to six hours, dined with local politicians, attended to their correspondence, and retired late in the evening. The physical demands of riding and speaking, coupled with a chronic deficit of rest, rendered both men susceptible to recurring respiratory and intestinal complaints. Surviving the campaign with health intact represented something of a victory in its own right.

By the end of the first week of engagements either candidate could have made the other's speech, including anecdotes, hand gestures, and emphatic pauses. Smiling congenially through Jones' light-hearted discussion of serious issues, Polk tried relentlessly to expose the shallowness of Jones' facile explanations of complex questions. Only on rare occasions did Polk display his considerable talents for repartee and joke telling, skills that he had used so successfully against Newton B. Cannon in 1839. Whig newspaper editors proudly claimed that "Grinnin' Jimmy" Polk was but a poor match for "Slim Jimmy" Jones' power to entertain the large assemblies of fun-loving Tennesseans. Democratic polemicists generally decried Jones' showmanship and praised their candidate's definitive refutations of Whig doctrine and practice. As there were but few surprises in the daily rehearsal of this traveling debate, it must be assumed that the principals deliberately adopted and retained those roles that best served their election strategies. Polk probably played the straight man to his comic opponent because neither approach, nor any combination of the two, would have turned any large number of Tennesseans around in their opinions of Martin Van Buren. Perhaps Polk hoped to win an improbable victory; perhaps he did not. In any case, he changed neither the manner nor the substance of his oratory in his long journey to defeat.

Polk had made Henry Clay the straw man of his 1839 campaign for the governorship, and he did so again in 1843. At every opportunity, some ninety speeches in all, he pointed to Jones' open endorsement of Clay for the 1844 Whig presidential nomination and denounced the Sage of Ashland's projects for banking, taxing, and spending. A vote for Jones would be a vote for a national bank, a protective tariff, a larger federal debt, and a greater consolidation of power in the general government. Polk displayed the dreaded chains of tyranny at every stop and urged his hearers to free themselves from the lure of Whig promises to legislate the good life into existence. Unwilling to settle for a superficial statement on Clay's measures, Polk detailed each piece of Whig legislation since 1841 and catalogued its most onerous provisions. Jones repelled Polk's arguments with barnyard humor and clever escapes to down-home issues. He hit hard at the obstructionist tactics of the "Immortal Thirteen," whose partisanship had prevented the election of U.S. senators, blocked examination of bank fraud charges, and denied appointment of new directors for the Bank of Tennessee. Jones demanded to know whom Polk would support for president in 1844; when Polk declined to make a public endorsement prior to the convention, Jones predicted that his opponent would be run for vice-president on a Van Buren ticket. Polk linked Jones to Clay, and Jones tied Polk to Van Buren. Thus the outcome of the race would rest largely on the size of the Democrat vote, for the Whigs were unified and the Democrats divided. Polk ran hard on his most vulnerable issue and lost.

Jones defeated Polk by a majority of 3,833 votes in an election that saw over 110,000 white adult males exercise their franchise. Although the Democrats held their ground in East Tennessee and registered small gains in the Western District, they failed to produce sufficiently large majorities in Middle Tennessee to carry the state at large. The General Assembly elections went against Polk's party as well, as the Whigs won control of both houses of the legislature. Only in the congressional results could Democrats take consolation, for in those races they won six of the eleven seats, a minimal gain considering that the Assembly would send two Whigs to the U.S. Senate. The Tennessee vote demonstrated rather convincingly that Van Buren could not carry the state in 1844 and that Tennessee Democrats must detach themselves from the Loco Foco influence if they would avoid future defeats.

Explanations and reactions to the Whig victory varied widely among Democratic leaders in Tennessee. On August 18 Polk wrote Van Buren that Tennessee Democrats had been "greatly embarrassed and weakened by local causes and questions of State policy." Polk labored with abandon to paint over all traces of the underlying causes of factional divisions in the Tennessee Democracy. Within weeks of the August election party newspapers in East Tennessee endorsed Lewis Cass of Michigan for president. Calhoun Democrats in Nashville organized a pro-Cass club that would appeal to younger voters impatient with the issues that had brought their party down. A. O. P. Nicholson, a Calhoun advocate of the Young Democracy, attempted to wrest control of the Nashville Union from the Van Buren wing of the party. Only by the strongest of exertions were Polk and his friends able to retain power over their most influential newspaper. The tide of disaffection crested in November at the state convention, which chose an anti-Van Buren slate of delegates to attend the presidential nominating convention. For most practical purposes the 1843 defeat had brought the Jackson party in Tennessee close to the edge of dissolution. All that remained of Jackson's influence rested with Polk's greatly embarrassed candidacy for the vice-presidential nomination. Incredulous that Tennessee Democrats might abandon the father of the Second Democracy, many Whig editors claimed that Polk had orchestrated the Cass movement in order to get Van Buren's attention and force his way onto the New Yorker's ticket. For his part, Van Buren wrote on December 27 that he viewed as "incomprehensible" Tennessee's rejection of its Jacksonian traditions, which had "within the last two or three years brought all the rest of the old Democratic States into their former, & true positions." Van Buren dryly concluded that "in good time" Polk must "seek out the cause and apply the remedy."

Polk's course of action in the fall of 1843 followed a narrowing channel of political choices that could not be widened or redirected. He turned his fullest attention to the task of making himself everyone's first choice for second place on the presidential ticket. Letters from the Hermitage and emissaries to party leaders in other states urged Polk's vice-presidential nomination. All factions of the party in Tennessee were asked to don this one remaining mask, behind which their divisions might be hidden. Several of Polk's closest advisors dared to hope that their efforts might place their friend in position to become everyone's second choice for first place on the national ticket. Inadvertently or otherwise, Polk's loss in Tennessee had enhanced Henry Clay's presidential prospects and diminished those of Martin Van Buren. In his defeat Polk had forced difficult questions of "availability," lost control of the Tennessee Democracy, and gained renown for his intrepid and uncompromising defense of political principles and alignments that would win but one more time the approval of the federal electorate.

This Volume

With this volume the reader will find one important addition to the series format. Fearful that diminished grant support might force suspension of the series, the editors have introduced a retrospective calendar of all Polk letters written from the earliest date, 1816, through the terminal year of the present installment, 1843. Entries for letters published or briefed in the series appear in Italic type and include only the documents' dates and addressees. Entries for unpublished letters appear in Roman type and include the documents' dates, addressees, classifications, repositories, and verbal précis. The use of brackets in the date column mark those elements supplied by the editors; the use of a question mark within a bracketed date indicates that some part or all of it is problematical. As in the assignment of captions to documents published or briefed, designations of addressees reflect the editors' styles of identification and not necessarily those of the signatories. Again, brackets signal an editorial hand in supplying information unstated in the documents. Letters, names, and subjects included in the calendar are indexed with the rubric c added to their page citations.

Continuing under the assumption that their primary responsibility is to assemble and make available the significant correspondence of James K. Polk, the editors have made no important changes in the editorial procedures adopted for the first five volumes. Selectivity has been necessary, but otherwise the editors have continued in their efforts to reproduce the correspondence in a form as faithful to the original text of each letter as possible; original spelling, punctuation, capitalization, and grammar have been preserved except where slight alterations have been required for the sake of clarity. Lowercase letters at the beginning of sentences have been converted to capitals. When it has been impossible at other places to determine whether the writer intended a capital or a lowercase letter, current style has been followed. Commas and semicolons have been inserted sparingly in sentences that lack clarity or are deficient in punctuation. Superfluous dashes have generally been deleted, and those that appear at the ends of sentences have been converted to appropriate punctuation marks. Words unintentionally repeated by the writers have been deleted. These minor changes have been made silently, without editorial indications of where they occur. Letters that were particularly difficult to decipher or those written by semiliterate persons have been given special attention, and that fact is indicated in the footnotes. Reliance on the ever-useful sic has been severely limited.

As all the letters printed are either to or from James K. Polk, his name will seldom be included in the headings that appear above the documents. Regardless of their position in the original manuscript, the salutation, provenance, and date will ordinarily appear on a single line just below the heading. Except in rare instances, complimentary closings have been omitted. An unnumbered note at the end of each letter or summary gives the document's classification, repository designation, place of address, authorial notations, endorsements, and notice of previous publication.

Numbered annotations follow the unnumbered note. Ordinarily a brief explanation or identification is given upon the first mention of a person or special subject. Later appearances of such persons or subjects are not usually accompanied by editorial comment. To identify everything is, of course, impossible; some items have been identified only tentatively. The editors thought that these tracings, however slight in some cases, might prove useful to the researcher. The names of some persons are marked "not identified further" either for want of sources of for lack of textual clarity as to which of two or more persons by the same name was intended. Unusual cases of the latter kind have been explained briefly. The index will be helpful in sorting references in which only a surname is given and in finding the location of the original explanation or identification.

The annotations often have been assembled from several sources. Frequently the sources are so obvious as to need no identification. These considerations, coupled with a desire to insure that the footnotes do not overwhelm the presentation of the textual material, have persuaded the editors to forego the citation of sources in footnotes.

Acknowledgments

In dedicating this sixth volume of the series to James F. Hopkins and Mary Wilma Hargreaves the editor respectfully celebrates the historical scholarship and professional dedication that his editorial mentors have brought to the first six volumes of The Papers of Henry Clay. Serving under their tutelage in the preparation of their fourth and fifth volumes provided invaluable opportunities for learning the purposes of their work as well as its erudition. That they gave more than they received in training their assistant attests to the depth of their concern for the future of our nation's program in historical editing, a commitment to which they have devoted a large part of their careers and of which this present Polk volume serves as letters testamentary.

It is again this editor's great pleasure to acknowledge the enormous contributions of those colleagues whose skills and labors have sustained the Polk Project through the last three years: Carese M. Parker, associate editor, has brought her critical insights and meticulous care to every page of this volume; research associates David W. Bowen, James P. Cooper, Jr., and Earl J. Smith have assisted, each for a year or more, in researching and annotating select portions of the correspondence; John H. Reinbold has worked parttime researching and bringing the note files up to date; and Leta R. Cutler, staff assistant, has seen the calendaring of documents through their several stages of composition and assembly.

Together we single out our collective thanks to the very able staffs of the Vanderbilt University Library, the Tennessee State Library and Archives, the National Archives and Records Service, and the Library of Congress. For their generous sponsorship of the Polk Project, special thanks go to members of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission and its staff, headed by Frank G. Burke; to members of the Tennessee Historical Commission and its staff, directed by Herbert L. Harper; and to members of the Polk Memorial Association and its Auxiliary. We also express our appreciation to the director of the Vanderbilt University Press, John W. Poindexter, and to members of his staff, Jane C. Tinsley and Gary G. Gore, for their continuing support of this series in matters of both production and distribution.

Perhaps our largest debt of gratitude belongs to the many friends of history who have urged public officials to sustain their commitment to the nation’s cultural heritage. Countless expressions of public and private endorsement of the national and state programs in historical editing have encouraged the Polk editors to hold a steady course against the current drift of uncertain and inadequate funding for agency sponsors. To all who have spoken in behalf of the Polk Project, we extend these words of deep appreciation.

Correspondence of James K. Polk

VOLUME VI, 1842–1843
FROM JOHN CATRON

Dr Sir: Washington, Jny. 2d 1842

I have been here two weeks and learned very little else than you have heard through the newspapers, other than this, as I think, that say, Benton, Buchanan, Calhoun, and a few minor men, have taken ground against Mr. Foward's Treasury-Bank project, & pretty much against every part of it. Why they did not let the Whigs lead off, they best know. The rank & file, I feel well assured thought differently to a great extent, and you are aware, that my opinion for five years has been, that amongst that rank & file were our safest thinkers, if they were allowed to think. My friend, I am no prophet. Still I'll hazard the opinion, that if the Dem. party aid the Whigs in breaking down Mr Tyler, and drive to the old Whig set, the Tyler Whigs, we will again be beaten for the Presidency: and 2d, if our party, rejects all plans of a Bank, or Fiscal agent, and attempts to fight the Bank party with nothing, or with the memory, of that defunct shadow, the Sub-Treasury (a feeble thing, never felt by the People, known, nor cared for) we shall again have a triumphant Bank party in power, and in four years we will have a U.S. Bank of the old stamp. The large majority of the American People look for something; and if the Democratick party could agree to a Fiscal Bank, pretty much as Mr Tyler, & the Secy. of T. recommend, striking off the Bill of exchange feature, of course, and do Battle on it against a U.S. Bank, I feel very sure, we would be safe. The circulation of Treasury checks is not obnoxious to the Constitution, nor fraught with any danger of a serious character, as it seems to me and they would furnish a satisfactory circulation, of equal value everywhere, and one that would be felt, & recognized by the People as National, and one that a U.S. Bank would not be allowed to supplant. A forestalling substitute, is what we want, & I think must have, as a repelling force. To Tennessee friends I may talk plainly, without being suspected of Bank tendencies. The idea, of uniting purse & sword, is an absurd scare-crow. The people at large cannot keep the money—their agents must—and Human agents must be trusted: and where they are Subject to Congress, to the People, for Congress is the people, in this regard there can be as little danger of abuse, as there is in the Custom Houses, land offices &c. It is the best that can be done. The Whig party hold, that the money of the Nation cannot be entrusted to the hands of the Executive, or the agents of the Governmnt, but should be kept by a private Corporation, distinct from the Executive, & Congress. In short, that the people dare not be trusted with their own money, nor its management in the Treasury. Such a distinct Treasury the Whigs offer. We offer nothing & with this nothing, set up to fight a system well understood & which will be taken, unless something else as a substitute is offered. That substitute must furnish a circulating Government paper; specie we have not, nor can we create it, nor draw it from the State Banks, nor could we circulate it over our wide-spread country if we had it. Paper we must have, & a paper backed with the credit of the U.S.; nor will less than fifteen millions answer. Less, would not be felt; & more would be useful, if the deposits of individuals, & the revenue should furnish a basis for the circulation.

I think the plan should be tested by a trial, and reformed, if it does not answer. Of one thing there can be no doubt, something should be done; nay, something must be done, or a U.S. Bank is the consequence.

The hard money plan is a Theory, & deemed a feeble, & exploded theory, by the People. It cannot longer be a principle of successful action by the Democratick party: Theory can never with numbers, be a principle of continued action. It is sapped by langour, & will fade into contempt, because it is an empty nothing in practice, and common-sense is asked to steadily to pursue a shadow, and firmly to maintain—nothing! This is indisputably, our present position; and the question for our friends to solve is, will they change their position? Mr. Tyler invites the trial, and submits himself to any change of the plan he proposes, that Congress may deem adviseable; & within limits that the democratick party would of course not transcend. I am often asked, “What Sort of a party is this of yours, that rejects all plans of a fiscal agent, and offers none for itself?” A question so pertinent, & so withering, is unanswerable, unless we fall-back on the Sub-Treasury plan, and found ourselves on that infant scheme buried in its swaddling clothes, & if reproduced, would again die on our hands, & we again be laughed at, as idle dreamers: Can any thinking man doubt it?

Of one thing I have no doubt, the party that originates a Treasury Bank (I will so call it, for such it must in a degree be) and founds itself on such a Bank, with a paper circulation of 15 millions, or more, will scatter to the winds the old U.S. Bank party, & will maintain itself with ease, and with credit before the People. A U.S. Bank they do not want (I mean the agricultural majority), but a substitute they will if possible have and ardently desire, not, at the hands of the Whigs, but furnished by their own natural friends, the democrats. And if these do not act, apathy, and eventual dispair, will overcome the sparse, & undisciplined majority; they will pursue the plough in peace, & let the Cities & Towns act, & Set up a U.S. Bank. Do you doubt it? A Treasury Bank may be an evil if you please. I dont think so, but it will resist a greater evil, and may be, the only means; it is, certainly an appropriate means, and one within our reach.

You know how I dislike extremes, how dangerous they are, we have learned, & the other side has learned, during the past summer. A moderate plan, & a strong plan, can be moulded out of Mr. Tyler's proposition. I pray you to think of it. But remember, our choice is, between something, & nothing.

Our Senators. On this subject, you know my opinion is, that the election in the ordinary form by convention should be gone into risking the consequences if no better could be done,\(^6\) 2d, that a whig & democrat should be elected if possible & this is all that is possible, & 3d, that Tom Brown & Foster\(^7\) be taken if this is the alternative, & I supposed such to be the fact when I left.

It would be very bad, for our friends to be thrown off, in the great contest in Augt 1843,\(^8\) from the issues the calld. session of Congress furnished,\(^9\) & to battle over the new issue of senators, or no senators from Tennessee. Who can support the new theory, that an election by joint ballot is unconstitutional? The assumption is nonsense, and the ground that Mr. Foster refused [to] answer questions, to 13 senators is one of no force;\(^10\) certainly wholly unfit for a party to rest itself upon. I have not conversed with a single man of our friends who resided out of Tennessee, that did not feel sorely aggrieved, and alarmed at the position of our friends in the Senate. They all urge an election at any hazzard.

J. Catron

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia under the frank of Aaron V. Brown.

1. A strong political ally of Polk, Catron was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court in the last days of the Jackson administration. A Tennessean, Catron helped the Nashville Union financially and served occasionally as an editorial writer.

2. Thomas Hart Benton, James Buchanan, John C. Calhoun, and Walter
Forward. Forward, a lawyer from Pennsylvania and former member of the U.S. House, 1822-25, headed the Treasury Department for almost two years, 1841-43; he frequently differed with President John Tyler in political and economic affairs. The administration's "Treasury-Bank" plan, submitted by Forward on December 21, 1841, called for the establishment of a Board of Exchequer at Washington City with agencies at important commercial centers as Congress might direct. Public creditors would hold the option of receiving payment in Treasury notes or in specie; note issues in excess of $15 million would be made only with specific legislative sanction; and notes would be convertible to specie only at their place of issue. The board and its agencies would receive private deposits of specie, issue certificates of deposit thereon, and sell domestic bills of deposit, redeemable at the place of issue. For additional details, see House Document No. 20, 27 Congress, 2 Session.

3. Proposed first by President Martin Van Buren in 1837, the Independent Treasury plan for excluding the banking industry from custody and management of U.S. Treasury funds became law on July 4, 1840. Whigs and Conservative Democrats combined in Congress to repeal the Independent Treasury by Act of August 13, 1841.

4. Section 11 of Forward's draft authorized the Board of Exchequer and its agencies to purchase and sell domestic bills of exchange; however, neither the Board nor the agencies could deal in discounts or accommodations.

5. Forward indicated in a cover letter transmitting his Exchequer proposal to Congress that the president would accept revision of the details, though not the general outline of the plan.

6. Tennessee's two seats in the U.S. Senate went unfilled for the period from February 7, 1842, until October 16, 1843. The "Immortal Thirteen" Democratic members of the Tennessee Senate held a majority in that branch of the 1841-42 General Assembly and refused to hold a joint election convention with the Whig-controlled House of Representatives. Knowing that on a joint vote two Whigs would be chosen, the "Immortal Thirteen" argued that the traditional joint-convention method of electing U.S. senators was unconstitutional and that a concurrent majority in both houses was required for election.

7. Thomas Brown and Ephraim H. Foster. Brown represented Roane County for two terms in the Tennessee House, 1817-19 and 1821-23; in 1839 he failed to win the Whig nomination in Tennessee's Fourth Congressional District. A Nashville lawyer and one of the founders of the Whig party in Tennessee, Foster served three terms in the Tennessee House, 1827-31 and 1835-37. Appointed to the U.S. Senate following the resignation of Felix Grundy in 1838, Foster won election to a full six-year term beginning March 4, 1839. Having pledged to resign should a Democratic majority be elected to the next legislature, he redeemed his promise in November of 1839.

8. Tennesseans would elect a new governor and a new legislature in August of 1843.

9. Controversial issues arising during the called session of the Twenty-seventh Congress, held in the summer of 1841, included the expense of the extra session itself, creation of a national bank, distribution of land-sale revenues, preemption rights on public lands, and provision for bankruptcy proceedings in federal courts.

10. Democrats in the Tennessee Senate addressed a circular letter to the several U.S. senatorial candidates and requested their views on the principal issues raised at the special session of the Twenty-seventh Congress. The "Immortal Thirteen" specifically inquired if the candidate admitted the right of the legislature to instruct U.S. senators.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNLEY

Washington City. January 2, 1842

Turney states that he has learned of a Whig scheme, devised in the spring of 1841, to prevent at that time the election of U.S. senators from Tennessee. Nicholson had informed Brown late last spring that the Whigs would not attend a special session of the legislature, should one be called to provide senatorial representation in the called session of Congress. Turney adds that he is willing to yield his election to any other "Good & True democrat," but that "N. is not that man."

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia.

1. A lawyer from Winchester, Turney served four terms in the Tennessee House, 1825–37; three in the U.S. House; 1837–43; and one in the U.S. Senate, 1845–51. He was Polk's political friend and spokesman in the Mountain District.

2. Aaron V. Brown and A. O. P. Nicholson. A resident of Pulaski, Brown was Polk's former law partner and longtime friend. He served in the Tennessee Senate and House, 1821–33, in the U.S. House, 1839–45, and in the governorship, 1845–47. From 1857 until his death in 1859, Brown was postmaster general in the administration of James Buchanan. A Democratic member of the Tennessee House from Maury County, 1833–37, and of the Tennessee Senate, 1843–45, Nicholson served an interim appointment in the U.S. Senate from December 1840 until February 1842. He moved to Nashville in 1844 and edited the Nashville Union before being named president of the Bank of Tennessee, 1846–47.

TO ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON

My Dear Sir: Columbia Jany. 4 1842

I addressed a letter to Genl. Jackson on yesterday; accompanied with the copy [of] one written by him to me in February 1838. My letter to him will explain its own object; I think it probable that he may desire your assistance in preparing his answer. In that event I wish you to note the suggestions contained in my private letter to him, which accompanied the one designed to call him out. He will I have no doubt show them both to you.
I see that his opinions continue to be quoted in favour of a Bank of some kind, and as I have said to him, I think it due to his own future fame, as well as to his principles, that he should while living put an end to all cavil or doubt in regard to them. It is the more especially necessary that he should do so now, because I see it insisted upon in some of the newspapers, that the Bank he suggested in some of his messages, was similar to Mr Tyler’s Exchequer Bank.

I hope you will assist him in preparing his answer. It should be done with studied care.

JAMES K. POLK

ALS. DLC–AJD. Addressed to Nashville and marked “Private.”

1. A nephew of Rachel Jackson, Donelson served as private secretary to Andrew Jackson while he was president, 1829–37. Donelson later guided negotiations for the annexation of Texas and was minister to Prussia.

2. Letter not found.

3. See Andrew Jackson to Polk, February 1, 1838.

4. Letter not found.

5. See Polk to Jackson, December 31, 1841.

6. On January 7, 1842, Jackson wrote that he had received Polk’s three letters and would attend to them as soon as his own health would permit. ALS. DLC–JKP.

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK¹

Nashville Tennessee Jan’y 6th 1842

The resolutions as introduced in the Senate by Mr. Laughlin electing Hopkins L Turney & Thomas Brown United States Senators,² come up for consideration in the House on yesterday. They were voted down. The resolutions were divided, and by that means we forced the Whigs to vote down the distinct proposition for compromise. On the Resolution nominating or electing Turney, the whole Party stood firm; but on the Resolution selecting Brown, three of the Democrats bolted. Rogers & Reece of Lincoln and Oglesby of Overton,³ and I regret to say that Col. Dew⁴ compromised the character of the democrats of Old Maury, by running out of the House and thereby dodging the question. He returned into the Hall as soon as the vote was announced by the Speaker,⁵ I moved that he have leave to record his vote. He declined, stating that his object in leaving the House was to avoid voting. There can be no difficulty in understanding the influence which operated on him.

The Whigs to day when the Resolution was taken up, to go into the election of Comptroller and Treasurer, inserted an amendment, as was anticipated to elect United States Senators—which Resolution passed in its amended form. No difficulty is anticipated, with regard to the action on the part of the Senate. They will strike out the provision relating to U.S. Senators, and concur in the Resolution as originally introduced in the House. Our whole object is, to place them in the position of refusing to elect State officers, necessary and essential, to the proper administration of our State Government, because we prevent them from placing in the Senate men who stand Mum, virtually controverting and denying the right of the people to know the opinions and political views of their public servants. They will stand in the indefensible attitude, of having clogged the wheels, and prevented the necessary operation of our State Government, because we would not passively surrender up the rights of the people, by permitting the election of Foster and Jarnigin. If we can succeed in placing them in this light before the country our conquest will be easy. I will write you again in a few days.

WILLIAM H. POLK

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia.

1. The only surviving brother of James K. Polk, William H. Polk practiced law in Columbia and served three terms in the Tennessee House, 1841–45 and 1857–59, and one term in the U.S. House, 1851–53. Young Polk went to Naples for two years as U.S. minister to that court, 1845–47; and he fought with the rank of major in the Mexican War.

2. Samuel H. Laughlin, a McMinnville lawyer and farmer, served three terms as a Democrat in the Tennessee Senate, 1839–45. On December 20, 1841, Laughlin introduced in the Tennessee Senate resolutions that the legislature should choose two U.S. senators and that those senators should be Hopkins L. Turney and Thomas Brown. The resolutions passed in the Senate on December 31, 1841, but failed in the House on January 5, 1842.

3. John C. Rogers, Joel L. Reece, and Hardin P. Oglesby. A Lincoln County lawyer and Democrat, Rogers served a single term in the Tennessee House, 1841–43. Reece, a Lincoln County farmer, served one term as a Democrat in the Tennessee House, 1841–43. Oglesby represented Overton County as a Democrat for a single term in the Tennessee House, 1841–43; he won election as sheriff of Overton County in 1844.

5. Burchett Douglass represented Wilson County for four terms in the Tennessee House during the period from 1821 to 1833; after moving to Fayette County, he won two additional terms in the House, over which he presided when that body was controlled by Whigs, 1837–39 and 1841–43. Douglass also headed the Somerville branch of the Bank of Tennessee and served as a Whig presidential elector in 1840.

6. Ephraim H. Foster and Spencer Jarnagin. Jarnagin studied law under Hugh L. White and practiced in Knoxville until 1837, when he removed to Athens, McMinn County, and became a leader of the Whig party. A Whig presidential elector in 1840, Jarnagin failed in his efforts to win a seat in the U.S. Senate in 1841. Two years later, however, the legislature elected him to that body; and he served from 1843 until 1847.

FROM JOHN H. DEW
Nashville, Tennessee. January 10, 1842

Dew reports that on January 8 the House voted 37 to 34 in favor of resolutions requiring the resumption of specie payments by the three stock banks and the Bank of Tennessee.\(^1\) He predicts that these banks will resume without a court contest. Dew notes that on January 7 the House rejected the tippling bill because some of the repealers “would not agree to such an increase of tax . . . as would satisfy the party that were called modifiers. Consequently the modifiers united with the anti repealers.”\(^2\) Dew considers both House votes to be important victories. Also the House rejected a Senate resolution “choosing” Turney and Brown for the U.S. Senate.\(^3\) Turney’s defeat came on a strict party vote. Dew adds that he and several other Democrats opposed Brown because they had promised constituents not to vote for a Whig.

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia and delivered by William H. Polk.

1. On December 28, 1841, Dew introduced a set of five resolutions aimed at forcing the resumption of specie payments by the state’s three stock banks, the Union Bank, the Planters’ Bank, and the Farmers and Merchants’ Bank. The Internal Improvements Act of 1838 established the Bank of Tennessee and made it the government’s agency for issuing some $4 million in internal improvements bonds; the first one-hundred thousand dollars in annual bank profits would go to the support of the state’s common schools.

2. The 1842 House liquor bill, sponsored by Democrat Hugh L. W. Hill of Warren County, would have repealed an 1838 ban on retailing liquor by the drink and revived the acts of 1831 and 1835, which had provided for the taxing of liquor sales and licensing of saloons, commonly known as tippling houses. Radical “wets” amended Hill’s proposal by removing all sales taxes on liquor produced in Tennessee; that provision led the “modifiers” to unite with anti-repealers who favored keeping the 1838 quart law, so called because it prohibited the retailing of liquor in quantities of less than a quart.

3. See John Catron to Polk, January 2, 1842, and William H. Polk to Polk, January 6, 1842.
FROM J. GEORGE HARRIS¹

My Dear Sir, Nashville [Jan.]² 11. 1842

I have just opened and read yours of the 7th inst.³—and notwithstanding the weakness of my right arm occasioned by a lancet-letting of nearly a quart of blood within the last three hours, hasten to reply. You were right, of course in attributing the non-receipt of the Union⁴ to the inadvertency of the clerk. He will forward back-numbers.

Yes; all our attempts to elect U. S. Senators have failed, and at present I see no light in prospect.⁵ We ought to be represented, if possible—we ought at all hazards to elect men who will obey or resign. If I have religious devotion to any one principle of right, it is to that of the representative's unqualified accountability to his constituents.

A proposition has been secretly made by Bell's⁶ friends, of which no doubt you are privately apprised. But it calls for too great a sacrifice of feeling. Perhaps you may not think so; at all events I give it you in confidence as it came to me—and respectfully ask your opinion at length.

Bell, through his friends (the delegations of Wilson and Rutherford) intimates that if the democrats will join them in electing him to the Senate, he will answer all the questions, and his friends will vote for any democrat in the State that the democrats may agree to run. This is the proposition as I understand it.

Now what are the considerations? We have a battle to fight next year for Governor. We can beat them—but be assured they are not intending to suffer it to go by default. The Senatorial Question is to be met on the stump. If we could now settle it by compromise, the question of itself falls, and the State is represented by one demo. & one whig, elected by the demo. party and a fraction only of the whigs. Thereby Foster is not only dead but forgotten. But this putting Bell in the foreground—there's the rub. Yet cannot we match him with an equal—and by elevating him under the promise to obey, shall we not increase our power to instruct him out? If you could only be his checkmate in the U. S. Senate, I should not fear him. I have received this through a private source and upon hearing it gave no opinion—for while I saw that many points could be made by us in acceding, still the price seems to be almost too high to pay. What do you think.

You will see that the Banks have been halted up to law at last⁷—and I rejoice at it. No measure of our party in the legislature will prove more popular before the people.

The old hero⁸ was here a day or two ago, and spent twenty-four hours in town. He was in high spirits. He gives a Bear Dinner to a few friends to-morrow, to which I have an invitation and shall attend. Gen Armstrong⁹ & family go up.

FROM JAMES WALKER¹

Dear Sir,

Nashville Jany 13. 1842

I have seen Armstrong, Laughlin & Hardwicke² upon the matter we talked of. I find the Democrats will in no way or shape take up Bell³—they say it would be rewarding apostasy, and whitewashing the traitor who has caused all the trouble in Tennessee politics. In all this I heartily concur, and am satisfied that it is better to make no election than to take Bell under any circumstances. This is my feeling and judgement as to our political interests.

I find there is also a very great aversion to taking Foster under any circumstances, and it will be very difficult to induce the Democracy to agree to that compromise, even if he agrees to answer⁴ & the election to be by concurrent vote. There is more difficulty on this subject than I apprehended. Laughlin talks about the impossibility of giving up Turney—to this I replied hold on to Turney, if he is most satisfactory to our party.

I have not, nor will I use, or allow your name to be used, unless it can be done without in the least compromising you. The matter is very uncertain. Make no calculations on it. It is more than probable that no election will take place. I will however stay here several days, be governed by circumstances, and move as prudently as my judgement may dictate.

TO SACKFIELD MACLIN

My Dear Sir. Columbia Jany. 17th 1842

I learned some days ago that overtures had been made by some of the friends of Mr Bell, to compromise the Senatorial question by electing him (Bell) and any Democrat who might be offered, and in any mode which might be preferred. I am glad to learn that it met with no favour from our friends. It would not do to elect Bell by Democratic votes. It would not only be placing him in a position to do mischief but it would be rewarding his apostacy. This evening I learn that similar overtures have been made by some of Mr Foster's friends, and if this be so, it is a grave question what ought to be done. To no man in the State would it be more grating, than to myself, to be driven to the necessity of making a compromise by which he might obtain a seat in the Senate, and yet it is not impossible that our safety as a party in the State might require such a sacrifice. Having long since withdrawn any use of my name & being wholly out of the question, you will of course understand me as speaking solely in reference to our future ascendancy in the State, and without the slightest reference to myself personally. It would be a bitter pill to take Mr F. even upon a compromise, and yet if nothing else can be done I have been brought very seriously to doubt, whether we had not better take him with some good & true Democrat than to leave the State unrepresented in the Senate, & thus raise up a perplexing and troublesome issue of Senators or no Senators in the State, which may and probably will be the test question in our elections in 1843. Before you could compromise at all, either with him or any other Whig, they must yield to your mode of election & agree to obey instructions. If they will do this and agree to give us a Democratic Senator with him, my conviction is, that it is the course of safety to yield to it. I have no doubt if you adjourn without choosing, that a decided majority of our party will sustain you in the course you have taken: still I know some and fear there may be others who will not. It would be most unfortunate if by our divisions upon this local issue, when we are perfectly safe on the Federal issues of the Extra Session, we should be overwhelmed in the State in 1843. A small fragment of our party, seceeding on this question & uniting with the Whigs would affect our overthrow. If a compromise is affected by which the Whigs choose their favourite candidate from the Middle Division of the State, then according to former usage, the Democratic candidate should come from East Tennessee. It would break down either party who would disturb this usage. If both parties, upon a compromise unite, for the time being in breaking down the mountain such would not be the effect. We have in East Tennessee among others John Blair, Andrew Johnson of your Senate, Dr. Ramsey & Dr Lide of Athens, either of whom would make respectable Senators. If both Senators are taken from Middle Tennessee, then I think after what has occurred that the Democratic party are bound by every honorary tie to Mr Turney. It is true that he often said to me before he left & so has written since, that if the success or good of the party required it, he would cheerfully yield to any other good & true Democrat. He always made an exception of one man & has so written since. He does not regard Mr. N. as being with us in heart, or further than it is his personal interest to be. He frankly declares that he would consider himself degraded and badly treated by his party, to be dropped for such a man as N. You know I agree with him in his opinion of N. and of his true position. Every day convinces me more and more, that he (N) is now travelling in the broad road, that John Bell travelled for several years before his apostacy, whilst he was making loud professions of his adhesion to our principles. We all know where John Bell now is. And mark what I now say to you, that five years, perhaps not one will pass, before he is found where Bell now is unless it shall be his personal interest shall make him seem to be otherwise. I am not mistaken. I speak from no personal or indignant feeling. I would prefer to day, an open opponent, to a hypocritical friend in disguise. Under no circumstances therefore would I compromise on him. I hope our friends may not be so far deceived as to think of such a thing for a moment.

I write you frankly and without reserve. My opinion is, that the course of safety is to choose Senators, provided you can do it, without a compromise of our principles or an abandonment, of the ground which the Democratic Senators have taken. God grant you a safe deliverance. When will your session close? Write to me.6

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Dear Brother, Nashville Tennessee Jan'y 17th 1842

I this evening received your letters of the 15th1 and was disappointed somewhat in the verdict as rendered in the case of Redding; though I doubted very much his innocence.2 When you wrote me, you of course was not advised, of the proposition made by Mr. Foster, expressing an entire willingness to do “anything” or accede to any terms the democrats, might choose to prescribe, so as to enable him to obtain a seat in the U.S. Senate. Maj Hardwick wrote you, he informed me, fully on the subject last night.3 I did not show your letter to any one but Mr Walker, and will consult him in the morning as to the propriety, under the new state of circumstances, of showing it to Johnson, Hardwick or Laghlin or McLin.4 If any thing occurs to-morrow, I will write, and keep you fully advised of every movement.

Barkely Martin5 returned from Columbia this evening; and informed me that there would be a meeting of a portion of the people of Maury County this day, in Columbia, to express their opinion, relative to the propriety of forcing a resumption of specie payments on the part of the several Banks in Tennessee. I did not give him to understand what would be my course, on the subject, in the event that the meeting should instruct the Maury delegation, and will not commit myself in any way, until I am clearly satisfied, as to the character of the meeting. But my impression is at this time, that some sinister design, on the part of certain individuals is at the bottom of the movement, and I will most certainly, unless differently advised, disregard the instructions emanating from a Town meeting, composed principally of the indebted portion of the community. I believe it to be my duty to force the Banks to act in good faith, so far as my individual exertions are concerned, and will so shape my course unless instructed to the contrary by a majority of the people of Maury County. Mr Martin advocates the propriety of requesting, but not forcing the Banks to resume, by Sci. Fa.⁶ against them, thereby occupying the position, in an inexplicable betweenity—and is in favour of extending the time for resumption until the first of January 1843. If I could discover any good or advantage that would arise from a postponement, until Jan'y I would willingly consent to the delay—but no advantage can be desired from delay, and much inconvenience and danger may be incurred, if the predictions of the opponents of Resumption are correct, that hard times and an increased oppression in the money matters of Tennessee, will necessarily follow such a movement on the part of the Banks. If the Banks resume in July, and this prediction is correct, the depression will have spent its force, and confidence will have been restored, before the August elections 1843. But if we delay the time of resumption until Jan'y we will have to fight the battle of 1843, in the midst of a panic.

Write to me by return mail, concerning the mee[ting]⁷ and advise me in full view of all the facts [what] course it would be best to persue. My own impression is, that the only course I can persue is to go Jackson like for what I believe to be for the best interest of the state, adhering to principle, and not governed by any circumstances, which may exist at the time. I will oppose any alteration of the resolutions as they passed the House of Rep. unless you advise me to the contrary.

TO JAMES WALKER

My Dear Sir.

Columbia Jany 17th 1842

On yesterday I wrote a full letter to William & directed him to shew it to you. This evening I receivd yours of yesterday's date, and also one from my friend Hardwicke. I have answered Hardwicke's. He speaks of the possible necessity of my going to Nashville, to prevent my own immediate Representatives from compromising with Mr F's friends by taking him & N. I have no doubt, that Mr N. is now in the broad road that John Bell travelled—for several years, before his apostasy became manifest; and in less than five years he will be where Bell now is, unless it is his personal interest to be otherwise. I would rather today see a Whig elected than him—for the reason that I have more respect for an open opponent, than a hypocritical friend in disguise. The course of M. & D. is strange indeed, and I would think it not only proper but important, that you should before you leave Nashville have a plain talk with them. It can make matters no worse & would probably prevent them from doing mischief. If you know Genl. Maclin, it will be important you should talk freely to him as also to Fentress, Laughlin & Hardwicke. If necessary stay a day longer to do this. The time has come when our friends should be undeceived as to N. You should see Armstrong & put him in motion. He can see confidential friends & do much. Mr Rowles is my friend & unsterdands him well. So does Mr McGinnis of Savannah. Hardwicke thinks the party, may in the last resort be thrown back upon me. I have said nothing in my reply to him on that subject. That is a point on which I ought not to be consulted. Turney writes to me that he would cheerfully yield to any good & true Democrat but not to Mr N. (because he has no confidence in him)—if the good of the party requires it. If a compromise is made & Mr F. is the Whig candidate from the west, then the Democratic candidate should come from E. Tennessee. If in the compromise both parties, should agree for the time-being to break down the mountain & take both Senators from the West, then the Democratic party, are bound in honour to adhere steadfastly to Mr Turney, & brother William can do this, with out any hazard to himself at home. I say they are bound to adhere to Turney, unless some as good and true a man, as he who will be more available can be united upon. Mr N. is not that man, & I repeat that I would rather have an open opponent than him.

Show this to William. I enclose it to him lest you may have left & have said to him he could open & read it if he choses.

FROM JONATHAN P. HARDWICKE

Hardwicke thinks that the Tennessee Whigs led by Foster have abandoned all expectation of electing a U.S. Senator during this session of the legislature. The Democrats must either "unite with the Bell party" \(^1\) or try to elect Adam R.

FROM SACKFIELD MACLIN

My dear Sir, [Nashville] January 26th 1842

I had the pleasure of receiving yours of the 17th inst. in relation to the Senatorial election. It is true as you have heard (as I am informed) that some of Bell's friends made some overtures to the Democratic party. It is equally true, (as I am informed) that Foster is willing to go to the Senate of the U S under any circumstances consistent with private honor. Consequently he would not object to an election by the separate action of the two houses of the General Assembly.

Our friends are determined under no circumstances to vote for Bell, and it would be with much difficulty that they would vote for Foster.

Since the receipt of your letter I have talked with many of our friends upon the subject. I am well satisfied that the Democrats in the Senate would be willing to elect Foster and some good and true republican, provided he would answer those interrogatories submitted to him at the beginning of the session, and pledge himself to be governed by instructions. But it seems that no one will move in this matter. I would do so if there were not so many older members, who must know better than myself the proper way to commence this matter.

I am pretty well satisfied that you are right when you say, that our safety may depend upon the election of Senators. However, my democratic friends in my District will stand firm, notwithstanding a few of the most consumate partisans that ever breathed condemned my course in the Senate. Yet, if the Whigs should succeed in making the question Senator or no Senator, we might be defeated.

I conceive that it is a matter of very small moment either to myself or my country, whether I am defeated or not. But my great concern is in relation to your success. It will not do for you to be defeated. I think it would be proper for you to visit the seat of government before we adjourn, and you can make these older members move upon the subject. If you think I am correct, I shall look for you in a few days. We will adjourn

FROM THOMAS FLETCHER

My Dear Sir,

Jackson Miss Jany 28th 1842

Last evening, there was a political meeting at the capitol, and Martin Van Buren and R M Johnson were nominated for President and Vice President. After the committee had reported, it was moved to strike out R M Johnson, and insert your name, which was after much confusion, and discussion, lost. I do not think that this meeting, expresses the true feeling of the people of the State, in regard to the Vice Presidency. Genl Foote injured you by stating privately, that you had in your message condemned the course of Mississippi, in relation to the State bonds.

As I feel much solicitude in your political elevation, I will thank you to inform me, if in any message you have condemned the course of Miss. in regard to the State bonds. Such a report, industriously circulated among the anti Bankers, who constitute a large majority in this State, might affect your popularity, and I should be pleased to have it in my power, at a suitable time, to contradict it. I should be glad to hear from you, at Natchez.

3. Henry S. Foote, a Mississippi lawyer and 1844 Democratic presidential elector, won election in 1847 to the U.S. Senate as a Unionist; he resigned from the Senate in 1852 to become governor of Mississippi.
4. In the election of 1841 Mississippi Democrats advocated solving the state's fiscal problems by repudiating $5 million worth of state bonds issued to the Mississippi Union Bank. Although Polk made no Mississippi references in his legislative message of October 7, 1841, he did argue that interest on Tennessee state bonds should be paid even if such payments required the levying of additional taxes.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Senate Chamber, Nashville, Jany. 29, 1842

By letters from H. L. Turney and Cave Johnson,1 we learn that Mr. Johnson will arrive at home on this day. He wrote to Maj. Hardwicke from Louisville. I hope you will be here in a few days, and that you will write to Mr. Johnson to meet you here. For the cause, it is important. To me, personally, it is still more important. Mr. Johnson wrote me from Washington on 16th instant, that not having heard from me on the subject, and having also expected to hear some suggestions from you after your return from Mississippi, and which he had not received, that he had directed his friend T. H. Fletcher, that unless I gave security for the money advanced by him to Long, through me, to establish "Union," to sue me for the amount here on the spot.2 Fletcher has called on me, and I promised him, which I must do, to acknowledge the service of a writ. The money was paid in the purpose of the original stock of the paper, the greater portion of which was burnt in Green's House.3 That I was personally to be bound to pay it never entered my mind when I received it unless it was to apply it to purpose intended. Yourself, Grundy4 and Donelson, to make more certain for my security, gave releases in 1837. The office, and its debts receivable passed out of my hands, and not a cent has been paid me of proceeds, by any subsequent holder of the books, leaving my loss over five times as much as Mr. Johnsons. Now, sir, he has elected to take his course, and to every other oppressive screw which has been put on me here during the session, as I wrote you, is now added the hostility of every bank striker on account of my course on resumption.5 All these matters come well nigh driving me to madness. The political arena6 in which I receive nothing but hard blows, has become too hot for me. I must be off, and I most devoutly pray God to hasten the end of my service in this assembly, so that I may with honor, and justice to my constituents, retire to hard work, where I may ruminate at leisure upon my own past folly.

approval, except of a few individuals, on either side. You will see the list. They will be rejected in the lump.

The latest scheme here in relation to senators, is a hope of electing Col. A. R. Alexander and H. L. Turney.9 Dr. Hodsden has gone home.10 Miller is about to go.11 If we get clear of another, and East Tennessee dont ruin every thing, as she is likely to do,12 and as she has done in regard to state debt and river bonds,13 we may, possibly be able to elect this ticket in our own way, by concurrent seperate vote.

All these things premised, I do hope you will come to Nashville as early as possible, and that, if it meets your views, you will write to Mr. Johnson, or try to meet him here.

I see by the papers, that you are engaged in professional pursuits, I hope profitably, and that you find pleasure in it. Please make my respects to Madame Polk.14

Upon completion of his term as governor in October of 1841, Polk visited his cotton plantation near Coffeeville, Mississippi. Thomas H. Fletcher, a Nashville lawyer and unsuccessful merchant in his early years, represented Franklin County in the Tennessee House, 1825–27, and served as secretary of state from 1830 until 1832. Medicus A. Long published several newspapers in the 1830’s, including the Nashville Union from 1835 until 1836.

3. Alexander Little Page Green, a Methodist minister, was instrumental in locating the Southern Methodist Publishing House in Nashville. Details about the fire, which destroyed the original press and paper stock purchased for the Nashville Union, have not been found.

5. On January 8, 1842, the Tennessee House passed resolutions requiring that Tennessee banks resume specie payments on July 1, 1842; see John H. Dew to Polk, January 10, 1842. A few days later, however, the Tennessee Senate rejected those resolutions by a margin of one vote; the Senate favored a later resumption date.

7. James Chamberlain Jones, a Wilson County farmer and one-term member of the Tennessee House, 1839–41, served as a Whig presidential elector in 1840. In 1841 and 1843 he defeated Polk in the Tennessee gubernatorial elections. In 1850 Jones moved to Shelby County and became president of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad. He served as a Whig in the U.S. Senate, 1851–57, but supported Democrat James Buchanan for president in 1856.

9. See Jonathan P. Hardwicke to Polk, January 26, 1842.

10. Robert H. Hodsdon, a Maryville physician, won election as a Whig to two terms in the Tennessee House and served from 1841 until 1845. In 1844 he moved to Sevier County and subsequently sat for one term as a Union Party member in the Tennessee House, 1861–63.

11. A lawyer from Sevierville, Isaac A. Miller won election as a Whig to the Tennessee House in 1839 and 1841.

12. Adam Rankin Alexander and Hopkins L. Turney were both from the western half of the state; Laughlin suggests that state sectional considerations might transcend partisan interests and thus defeat the compromise.

13. On January 25, 1842, five Democrats joined nine Whigs in giving Senate approval to legislation that cancelled some $300,000 in state bonds for river improvements authorized by the Internal Improvements Act of 1838. Under the new law, dated January 31, 1842, river projects in the Western District and in East Tennessee would receive a total appropriation of $200,000, funds for which would be advanced by the Bank of Tennessee pending receipt of a like amount from the general government under the Distribution Act of September 4, 1841. Senators from Middle Tennessee, sensitive to the termination of their section's share of the program, voted nine to four against the river bonds bill, senators from the Western District and East Tennessee voted ten to two in favor of it.

FROM JAMES M. HOWRY

Oxford, Mississippi. February 15, 1842

Howry reports that a recent Democratic meeting at Jackson nominated Van Buren and Johnson. Its course of action "was all arranged and the Committee packed." A motion to substitute Polk's name for that of Johnson's failed, as did a proposition to postpone the nomination of vice-president. R. J. Walker directed the meeting, the proceedings of which did not meet the approbation of "the rank & file." In northern Mississippi Calhoun's friends are mustering their forces. If Calhoun wins the nomination for president, the party will choose a northerner to balance the ticket.

2. Pennsylvania born, Robert J. Walker moved to Natchez, Mississippi, in

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

Dear Gov'r,
Nashville Feby. 23d 42
Willo. Williams will I think be Elected President of the Bank in the morning. Carroll is again disappointed. You see from the Rejection of Barker, that the Whigs of the Senate are united and will reject any Democrat offered. Claiborne will go by the board and they are determined to unite their party and fight.
Harris wants stirring up. With Van Pelt & Eastman to back him we ought to be able to Keep the State in Ship Shape. No News. In haste.
R. Armstrong

[P.S.] Respects to Mrs. P. When will you be up?

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia.
1. Directors of the Bank of Tennessee met in Nashville on February 24, 1842, and elected Willoughby Williams president in place of William Nichol, resigned. A Nashville lawyer and former sheriff of Davidson County, Williams had served briefly as president of the Union Bank of Tennessee in 1837.

2. William Carroll, an elder statesman of the Tennessee Democracy, served as governor for six terms, 1821–27 and 1829–35.

3. On February 11, 1842, the U.S. Senate rejected the renomination of James N. Barker as first comptroller of the Treasury. An ardent Jacksonian, Barker served as mayor of Philadelphia, 1819; as collector of that city's port, 1829–38; and as first comptroller of the U.S. Treasury, 1838–41.

4. On January 18, 1842, Tyler nominated Thomas Claiborne to be U.S. marshal for the Middle District of Tennessee; the Senate rejected the nomination on March 9, 1842.

5. Henry Van Pelt and Elbridge G. Eastman. Van Pelt, who began his editing career with the Franklin Recorder in 1821, assumed direction of the Democratic Memphis Weekly Appeal on April 21, 1841; he remained with the Appeal for some ten years. Eastman established the Knoxville Argus, a Democratic newspaper, in 1839; he edited the Nashville Union from 1847 until 1849.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNERY

Dear Sir

This I believe is about the first time I have marked a letter to you private and my reason for doing so now is this. I am about speaking to you freely about certain of our prominent political friends. Before I do so, permit me to say I will send you as soon as it is printed the report & bill of the select committee on currency.¹ The Tyler men are willing so to amend the bill as to make it the Sub Treasury, with the deposite feature. This I think our friends ought to agree to, but I fear that Benton, Buckhannon,² and the other aspirants for the Presidency with a view to destroy Tyler, will then oppose the bill. After this bill shall have been thus amended would it not be better for us as a party to support it than to pursue a course of policy, that will leave things in the present deranged and disorganized condition. Upon this subject I would be glad to have your opinion. I believe our friends here from Tennessee all agree, but I will not seperate from my party unless there should be a division in our ranks. Then of course I cannot be with both divisions, which I fear will be the case on this important question. These leaders of ours, with a view to promote themselves, or which is the same thing, to prostrate Tyler to make way for themselves, will I fear do an essential injury to the country. It is certainly a verry small business, to make war on such a man. I would as soon make war on a woman in labour. If you were now here to lead off in this matter you could make yourself the prominant man of our party—Calhoun may lead off. I do not know what course he will take, but I think it likely Benton will carry the leaders in the Senate with him. Wright\(^3\) with a view of promoting the views of little Van, Buck, and others are afraid, to set up for themselves in opposition to Benton and his forces. A majority of the democrats in the House if left to themselves would support the bill, but many of them have their favourites of the leaders whose prospects they desire to promote for the Presidency and will not therefore be likely to separate from them unless they had some prominent man to lead off. This is one of the prominent questions that separates the two parties and I shall regret very much to see our party divided on it, which I fear will be the case. Let me hear from you on this subject.

1. The U.S. House’s Select Committee on Finance and the Currency, appointed on December 10, 1841, reported on February 17, 1842, a bill proposing a plan of finance similar to that recommended by Treasury Secretary Walter Forward. For details of the House bill, see House Report No. 244, 27 Congress, 2 Session. For the particulars of Forward’s Exchequer Board, see John Catron to Polk, January 2, 1842.

2. James Buchanan.

3. Silas Wright, U.S. senator from New York from 1833 until 1844, backed Martin Van Buren for president in 1844, declined the second place on Polk’s ticket, won election to the governorship of New York, and served from 1844 until 1846.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Washington Feb’y 27th 1842

Your two letters of the 7th & 9 inst.\(^1\) I rec’d at Clarksville on the 16th just as I entered the Steamboat for my departure to this place. On my way I had no opportunity of writing. As to Laughlins debt to me\(^2\) I had heard of the surrender of your & other claims & was applied to, to surrender mine thro Mr. G\(^3\) which I declined doing & delayed pressing the claim upon Laughlin simply because I heard of his embarrassments & did not wish to press him. He now denies any personal responsibility & treats it as an advancement by me to the support of the paper. The original transaction was a mere loan to him of the money. Hearing of his embarrassment, I first wished security & you assured me it should be made safe by a lien on the establishment & you took from Laughlin a statement in writing that he would have the money secured by a lien on the establishment which was not done. I cannot afford to loose the money if it can be avoided & so soon as I found that Laughlin did not contemplate its payment I directed suit.

I do not consider it a hard case on Laughlin. He might & ought to have made money and his negligence ought to be visited on no one but himself.
I regret his situation is such as to be harrassed by his opponents & to avoid any thing of the sort directed Mr. Fletcher to give indulgence upon the debt being secured. I have sacrificed much more than I ought to have done in these political contests and had I been as imprudent as Laughlin should have been as much embarrassed. I have today written him that I cannot surrender & shall collect it if I can. I regret to press him because I like him personally as well as his politics but I am too poor to make such a sacrifice & besides I have Hickman & Dickson to provide for as well as myself [and] wife.4

I do not think we have much to dread in the next election from the course of the "immortal thirteen." It seems to be approved rather than condemned in the section I was in. Fosters folly in refusing to answer5 excuses it with all democrats & his weakness in answering after the adjournment only renders his position more ridiculous. An election of Senators6 at the call session which is probable will make the whole pass into oblivion.

I approve your course in going to the Law tho you have some danger to apprehend from it. Your absence from the bar & devotion to other subjects will demand great exertion on your part to sustain your high reputation. You should have a partner to perform the drudgery & only appear in great cases. I have met none of the publications to which you allude except Fosters address.7 Should not Turney8 answer it?

I have yet met but few members & know but little of what has been going on in my absence. I think the Ten. democrats will vote for the fiscality if buying & selling Bills be stricken out.9 I find that the inclination of their minds now. I have not had leisure as yet to examine the Report & Bills. All the Senators it is understood go against it, & it is now thought [it] will have but few supporters from either of the great parties.

It seems probable that Claiborne will be rejected—I suppose because Genl. Jackson recommended him.10 If he does we shall again present Childress.11 Tyler will do for us all he can I am sure. Yet he is so betwixt the parties that he is often troubled to know how to act. Houston of Alabama12 says Tyler has played all his big cards without making a trick
& now he wishes to comp.13

My health is better than it has been for years.

FROM ARCHIBALD YELL

Sunday Evening
Little Rock 6th March 42

My Dear Govr.

I wrote you some few weekes since on the subject of the sale of your land in Arkansas.2 The pressure is so deeply felt here by all Classes that no sales Can be made at any price and our only Currency is Arkansas rags, at ten for one.

But thank God at the next session of the Legislature we shall be able to put them into Liquidation. I have been heretofore in advance of public oppinion upon the subject of Banks & the Currency, but now I am overtaken & I fear shall be th[r]own in the back-ground. The people now see
March 6 1842

& feel their Condition and they will act rather from feelings than Judgmt. My Doctrine has been from the start, "Pay up or Wind up." Nothing has been so fortunate to our party and so disastrous to the Feds as the blow up of the United Stats Bank. It has & will tend to establish the Bentonian Doctrine, for I am very sure myself that, we must have either a Sub-treasury or some other Regulator to keep those rotten & Corrupt State Institutions from ruining the Country if it is not already done. I have no quarters to ask or give to the Banks either National or State; so its "War to the Knife." The politics of Arkansas is Democracy on the increase. We shall have no difficulty in our State elections except we become Weak from our strength by too many anxious aspirnts for office.

She is as true to the needle in National Politics and she will support the Candidate of the Party be he whom he may; we will no doubt be as well Contented as any other State to take the Regular Nominee of a Convention. From Consideratns which I need not mention to you I think their first Choice would be R M Johnson. Next, Yourself, Benton, Buchannon & they will take VanBuren but not as a matter of Choice. Mr. Van Buren has the Confidence of our leading men here but they have no grate love for the man. They think him rather Cold blooded.

Should VanBuren be Selected by the Convention I am enclined to think they will also Nominate Johnson for Vice President so as to harmonize & to present the old and defeated ticket.

If it should be Mr Buchannon, then I think your Chance will be first for Vice President. Should however a man be Selected South of Masons & Dicksons line for Prest. then I presume we shall have to look to the Free States for a Vice President. Buchannon, Wright or Woodbury would be very acceptable no doubt to our Party. What is Mr Calhoun about? Is he not in expectency, and will not he feel disappointed if not run? Is there any probibility or Contingency which would bring our party to Nominate Mr Tyler? He I believe will Join our Party before the end of this Session and a rumour is now rife here that he is about to reorganize his Cabinet & to bring in a godly portion of Democrats. Can that ultimately lead to his Nomination by our Party. It would seem from the devotion of Mr Clay's friends that they will make an effort to have him Nominated by the Whig Party but I still believe Genl Scott will get the Nomination and that he has more strength than Mr. Clay. Upon all those Subjects I should like to have your oppinion as I have much confidence in your Judgment & Candour.

I became acquainted with Brother Otey of your place who has been preaching to the Sinners of Little Rock. He is a Gentleman of fine Talents and has made a very favorable impreson here. He speaks so favorable of your Female Institute that I have some Idea of placing my little daughters at it. In that event our little Children Can become acquainted and I shall have the pleasure of visiting once more my old friends and acquaintances in Tennessee, and perhaps I may stumble upon some old Widdow who would Come to Arkansas. Tell Madame Polk that If I visited Ten that I shall need and expect her influence in my efforts—so I desire her to look out. If I am to have any say so in the matter I desire them neither too old or too young not over 40 nor under 15. As to size I am not particular—as to appearance I should not be overly nice, as I should have to make profert of myself!

I see you have had a deadly struggle in your Legislature and they have adjoin & gone home to test the Correctness of their Cause before the People. Since they defeated you, I have disown my State—and I now prefer to hail from N. Carolina a State that few will acknowledge to have given them birth.

Let me hear from you and be so good as to present my best & warmest Respects to Mrs. Polk and accept for yourself . . . .

He won election to several terms in the U.S. House, 1836–39 and 1845–46, and served as governor of Arkansas from 1840 until 1844. Yell died in the Mexican War.

2. Yell had detailed his efforts to sell Polk's Arkansas lands in a letter dated January 22, 1842. ALS. DLC–JKP.

My Dear Wife

Jackson March 11th 1842

I reached here on yesterday and will leave this evening. I find the waters so high as to prevent me from visiting some of the lands which I wished to see, until my return from the plantation.¹ I will examine our tract near Denmark on tomorrow, & go to Dr Caldwell's tomorrow night.² On the next day (Sunday) I will go to Bolivar, & from there to the plantation. I will be back here, at the meeting of the Supreme Court, on the 1st Monday in April, and in about ten days after that time I will probably be at home. I will write you again as soon as I get to the plantation. Let Elias³ sow the oats & clover seed as soon as you return from Murfreesborough. It is time that they were in the ground.

FROM JOHN C. CALHOUN

My dear Sir

Washington 12th March 1842

I regret to inform you, that our most strenuous effort to save Mr. Claiborne failed. Party feelings triumphed over every other consideration. He was rejected by a strict party vote, every Whig present voting for the rejection, & every Republican against it. It will, however, be some consolation to him & his friends, that not the slightest effort was made to impeach his character.

You are right in supposing, that nothing that could be said would arrest the Whigs in their course. They seem bent on their own distraction and the country's too. Instead of holding back in consequence of the depressed state of the treasury, they appear more intent than ever on spending money. We already notified, that the five million of treasury notes\(^1\) are exhausted, and an addition of several millions more are required; all this too when the paper of the government is under protest in N. York! To me it seems more like madness, than any thing I have ever witnessed in publick life.

In the mean time, the Republican party is quiet and composed, making no movement of its own, and supporting or opposing the measures proposed by their opponents, just as they accord with, or are in opposition to their principles & policy. During the long period I have been in publick life, I have never seen the party sounder in principles, or more harmonious in feelings. I hope it may continue.

I am glad to learn, that the indications are favourable with you. I do hope that you will be able to reverse the majority at the next trial of strength. There is much interest felt here to see Tennessee in her true position.

I send enclosed a copy of my speech on the veto.\(^2\) It was well received by our friends and even a considerable portion of the Whigs. With kind remembrance to Mrs. Polk.

2. On February 28, 1842, Calhoun made a Senate speech against Henry Clay's proposal to restrict the veto power of the president; enclosure not found.

FROM E. G. EASTMAN

Knoxville, Tennessee. March 18, 1842

Eastman recalls that when he was in Nashville the previous fall, Polk volunteered to visit East Tennessee. Eastman suggests holding a grand rally of the Democracy at Rogersville, which would be the best place because "friends in old Hawkins put more energy into a thing of this kind." Early August would be the best time, for that is "when the farmers have most leisure." General Fain\(^1\) has consulted leading Democrats in Hawkins; all earnestly favor the idea. Sullivan, Washington, and Greene counties would each "turn out their thousand" to welcome Polk. Eastman confesses that he earlier feared the failure of the Senate to elect U.S. Senators "might produce a wavering among the weak." He is pleased to report that such is not the case. Eastman adds that he will be in Nashville for two weeks in May and hopes to see Polk at that time.

FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington March 22nd 1842

I have to enquire whether you have amongst your old congress papers, the claim of Maj Jno. & Capt Alexander Nelson for bounty land. Robt J Nelson has written me about it & I have searched the Pension office & the office of the clerk of the house for the papers in that case.1 If you can find them please send them to me.

We have to day passed Resolutions of censure on the notorious abolitionist (Giddens) from Ohio. Where uppon he rose, passed through the Hall, shook hands with his friends & will be off in the morning.2 I suppose his resignation will be handed in in the morning. The vote was a very strong one against him3 several of our Southern Whigs thinking it was a fine opportunity to wipe off the stain of suspicion attached to them for former votes on the subject. Leave was unanimously given to him to speak in his defence, but being determined to be a martyr he remained obstinately silent. I suppose he will be a candidate for reelection & as his is a strong Whig district the only plan to beat him will be, for some acceptable Whig to become his opponent not an abolitionist & by the Democrats voting for him Giddens may be beat. Old Adams4 and he shook hands—long & affectionately & it is said the former dropt a few tears at parting. Old Saltonstall5 was quite moved on the occasion. I disliked the proceedings though I voted for them because we had let off old Adams—it seemed too much like worrying the Jackall when we should have hunted the Lion.

You no doubt notice the slow progress of business—without surprise after your Knowledge of such things. There is great disputing about who or which party shall be responsible for the acts of this administration. Tyler has no party beyond “The Guard”6 & can it seems do nothing to augment the number. Mr Clay was to have made his great valedictory to day on his retrenchment resolutions, but it seems Allen during the morning hour, introduced certain resolutions or proceedings against him that so disconcerted him for the time, that he beg [a] day (tomorrow).7 I cant say more because I have not yet seen Allens proceedings but they are said to be important. You will see them.8
Much of the delay & the difficulties here grow out of President making. Parties are evidently in motion, each endeavoring to do something for himself. Clay will be nominated very soon probably in N.C. in order to have the start of all others. It is suspected here that he has bought off Scott some how or other, but not known to be so. Calhoun & Buchanan are looking to it—Benton, if Van Buren dont & if “the old Hero” says it. It is thought Van Buren will. Now my earnest desire is that Genl Jackson will say nothing about it—nothing at all. I have contended valiantly for him twice & if it must be so would again, but he wants availability. It always was and will be an uphill business to sustain him in Tennessee especially. My own opinion is that (Van Buren not offering) Silas Wright is the most available man in our ranks—less could be said against him by our enemies than against any body else. Calhoun would make the best executive officer perhaps of any of them, but I fear (much as I like him) would lack availability. But he has increased his popularity amazingly in the last few years & when the time comes for designating our Candidates, the question of availability may be greatly altered. Old Dick can come it, no where, & if he could I could not exactly confide in him on several points.

As to the Vice Presidency not much is said except in connection with the nomination of Van Buren, Wright or Calhoun, in all of which events your name is freely used. The great mass of our friends still say it is too soon to move in the matter & I think Buchannons friends have ruined him by too early a presentation.

I have passed a very unhappy winter on account of the sickness of my family & I think I shall return somewhat in advance of the close of the Session, which will scarcely take place sooner than the 1st or middle of July.

Your friends will be very happy to see you if you come to this City as you mentioned to be likely, & I think it would be very well to come on about all the month of May. Be pleased to present our best respects to Mrs Polk.

1. On August 20, 1834, Robert J. Nelson had requested Polk’s assistance in filing a claim in the name of his father, Alexander Nelson, who served as a captain of militia during the Revolution. Major John Nelson probably was Alexander Nelson’s brother. A boyhood companion of Polk in Maury County, Robert J. Nelson moved to Mississippi, Arkansas, and then Memphis, Tennessee; he was a surveyor, speculator, and farmer. On March 4, 1842, he again wrote to Polk on the subject of these claims. ALS. DLC–JKP.

2. A lawyer and abolitionist from Ohio, Joshua Reed Giddings served in the U.S. House from 1838 until 1859; during his lengthy congressional career he changed his party affiliation from that of Whig, to Free Soil, and finally to Republican. Giddings resigned on March 22, 1842, following the House’s resolution of censure, but won reelection that same year and resumed his seat on December 5.

3. The censure motion passed by a majority of 125 to 69.

4. John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States.

5. A lawyer from Massachusetts, Leverett Saltonstall served numerous terms in both houses of the state legislature before sitting as a Whig in the U.S. Congress from 1838 until 1843.

6. President Tyler’s small group of followers in Congress earned the sobriquet, “Corporal’s Guard” or “the Guard.”

7. On March 22, 1842, Henry Clay announced that he felt too indisposed to address the Senate as scheduled, but hoped to present his views the next day on his retrenchment and reform resolutions. On March 23 Clay addressed the Senate for nearly three hours, arguing that his resolutions were not a violation of the Compromise Tariff of 1833, answering objections to an increase in tariff rates, and defending his proposed federal budget of $22,000,000. Of the eleven resolutions introduced by Clay on February 15, 1842, only three received Senate approval; they argued that the general government had a duty to provide adequate revenue for current expenses, that the government must abolish all useless offices and practice rigid economy, and that the executive departments should report on what retrenchments could be made.

Clay’s famous valedictory address, unrelated to the retrenchment resolutions, came on March 31, 1842. On that occasion Clay formally announced his retirement from the U.S. Senate, apologized to any members whom he might have offended over the years, and wished the blessings of heaven upon all his colleagues.

8. Senator William Allen’s actions, which reportedly disconcerted Clay on March 22, included presentation of the proceedings of a Democratic mass meeting in Muskingum County, Ohio; those resolutions condemned the measures of the recent extra session of Congress, attacked the general policy of the Whig party, and associated the abolitionists with the Whig members of the U.S. House. A lawyer, farmer, and stock raiser from Chillicothe, Ohio, Allen won election as a Democrat to one term in the U.S. House in 1833 and sat in the U.S. Senate from 1837 until 1849.

10. Winfield Scott.

12. On December 23, 1841, Brown noted in a letter to Polk that “Mrs. B. is in bad health.” ALS. DLC–JKP. Brown’s wife in 1842 was the former Sarah Burruss of Giles County.
FROM J. G. M. RAMSEY

My Dear Sir [Mecklenburg, Tennessee. March 30, 1842]¹

I met several of our friends in town yesterday. The general topic now, is the succession.² Gentlemen that heretofore have maintained a perfect silence on that subject begin to speak out. The visit of several high ex-functionaries to the south & South West discloses its object to be political, & and has forced upon them the immediate consideration of the subject. Should Knoxville be a point in the route of Mr. V.B.³ & those travelling with him we have determined that while he shall receive the attentions due to a great statesman & deserving citizen we will consider him as a retired politician—nothing more. I mingle necessarily freely & frequently with the Whigs & I hear their sentiments & I can assert positively that few very few of them will under any contingency support him. Many—most—of the Democrats believe him to be hopelessly prostrated. I will regret to see him again brought forward. It will throw us into a minority all over the country & especially in Tennessee. Our friends say so in Athens & Jonesboro, & I hear in Nashville too. Could my voice be heard by the Union Harris would say so aloud & at the present time. Such a declaration should be made by all our papers & meet Mr. V.B. on his Western tour. It might yet save us from incurable dissensions. His prospects at Charleston & in S.C. have been any thing but encouraging. The small fragment of the old Union party, still under the influence of Mr. Poinsett⁴ is all that he can count on there. How it is in Ga. I do not hear. But if Al. & Tenn. will discountenance the effort just now he will at once foresee the certain issue of his effort to resuscitate his ruined fortunes. Some of our friends here still say the movement would be premature or before now Knox County would have spoken.

By a succession of failures of the Mail I am without a “Jeffersonian” for several weeks. I could judge from its editorials & selections how my letter was received.⁵ I have but one No. since & it was favorable. More of this hereafter. I write this hasty note principally to acquaint you with the feelings of our friends hereabouts—& that is that we should avoid on the present visit of Mr. V.B. to Tennessee any step that would identify us with the attempt entertained elsewhere with too much favor, to bring him forward again.

I shall occasionally write you or Mr. Walker; but will not of course feel neglected or disappointed if you do not allways reply. Your other engagements & your position will prevent. Tell me tho, when I go wrong.

J. G. M. RAMSEY
FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington April 9th 1842

I enclose you for confidential use a pamphlet of which some 2 or 300 I expect have been sent out in different directions as feelers. It shews one fact that the friends of Mr Calhoun intend to present his pretensions to the public consideration.

Our friends in Tennessee have no objection to such an experiment on the public sentiment, especially if it is not contemplated to forestal the action of our party in its ultimate designation of the man of our choice. I send it to you as one of the occurring incidents of the day in reference to the succession but without desiring any publicity to the pamphlet or wishing any use to be made of it which might seem inconsistent, with a friendly presentation of it to me by one of his friends. It is too soon entirely too soon to bring up the Presidential question.

Wright is sometimes spoken of as suitable for the Vice Presidency on a Calhoun ticket. But I do not understand that he has ever favored any such idea.

Many here apprehend some demonstration of the Old General in favor of Van Buren, during or soon after the pending visit to the hermitage. Our friends here are getting much inclined to adopt the One term System.
in practice & I have heard them run over arrangements like this—Calhoun next 4 years, Wright Do. Vice President. Wright next after & you V.P. & the next turn they designate as yours for the Presidency. But I think it pretty evident that if V.B. is run again that your relative position would most probably bring you up on his ticket the next time. It is said Ritchie & others would try hard to put Stephenson on the ticket instead of yourself. But I tell you there is great aversion amongst our friends in Congress to take up Van Buren again. They do not seem to think favorably of his availability. From all the signs I fear very much that we shall be much divided if not distracted in our next selection. I dash these things down hastily for your own eye, under the belief that you are entitled to know from me whatever is transpiring here on these topics.

Our foreign relations are involved in serious difficulties at the present moment & I learn from one in favorable position to Know that there is not much prospect of a satisfactory adjustment of the pending questions with G. Britain.

7. Brown probably refers to the case of the Creole and the Northeastern boundary dispute. In late 1841 slaves on the American brig Creole mutinied, seized control of the ship, and sailed it to Nassau. British authorities resisted Secretary of State Webster's demand for the return of the slaves and vessel; that incident was not adjusted until 1855. Webster's Northeastern boundary negotiations culminated later in 1842 in the Webster-Ashburton Treaty, which fixed the Maine-New Brunswick boundary along its present line.

Armstrong reports that General Jackson has received a letter from Martin Van Buren at Columbia, S. C., estimating his arrival at the Hermitage sometime between the 20th and 25th of April. A committee will meet on the 14th to arrange a reception. Armstrong suggests that Polk might wish to escort Van Buren from Nashville to the Hermitage.

Dear Sir,

I have seen Doctr McNeill on the subject you wished me. He says he has not the money on hand but that he has a right to expect it from several sources and that his friend Jimmy shall be accommodated, that he will not dispose of any money until you inform him further on the subject. In a few days he expects to be in funds. He spoke of leaving shortly for some place. He is in bad Health.

I think you had better write him a short note yourself. Say nothing of Interest, nothing of time. Only that you want it, so that your crop &c. will meet it & that you wish to pay some different a/cts, & preferd having your debts Concentrated &c &c. I told him you wanted some 3 or 4 thousand dollars. He will do any thing for you in his power.

[P.S.] He says he may not be able to get in his money or collect any. If he does you will get the Refusal of it—write him.

Mecklenburg, Tennessee. April 18, 1842

My Dear Sir

I wrote you some weeks since informing you what I have written to Hampton the editor of the Mecklenburg Jeffersonian. I see from the last No. of that journal that he takes the same views I had expressed—so far at least as Mr. Calhoun is concerned (do you see his paper?) & I have just received a letter from him in which says "I entirely & cordially concur in your views & stand ready to advance them in every honorable way." He then goes on to express his regrets at the conflicting pretensions of several prominent men in our ranks—Col. Johnston &c &c &c—& fixes down upon C. as the only one that can hope to succeed. He then comes to the V.P. & adds "The choice of a candidate for the V.P. (the history of whigery has proven) is of no little consequence. Gov. Polk would please me as well as any other man in the Union. I inclosed you[r] letter to Mr. Fisher of Salisbury. He is cordially with your views. You need not be surprised if Mr. Calhoun is nominated at the Salisbury Convention the 20th May." This letter is a long one & I have not time to copy the whole—but there is an omission in it to which I will call his attention. I will say by the next mail "that Tennessee will not respond to that nomination unless your name is presented at the same time—that with that arrangement C. may succeed—without it he cannot. The West has its claims & can not be expected to cooperate if they are disregarded & that the Sal. Con. may decide Mr. C's fate by coupling him with one not from the West." These views I will present to Fisher & others of the Con—and if Mr. C's friends will destroy him they shall do so with their eyes open. Hampton in his letter say nothing in favor of a Northern man for V.P. but mentions "I see an important article in the Albany Argus which I think means more than meets the eye at a glance. It is a semi-biographical notice highly laudatory of Mr. Calhoun & at the same time coupling with it a very favourable notice of Senator Wright—thus placing them both prominently before the public eye." He does not mention him further as a candidate for anything but I will make an argument against him by saying the South & West must go together or we must fall to pieces. I mention what I intend writing that if Graham or Walker or any other has a single acquaintance in N.C. we should all write in the same strain—before the 20th May. My S.C. correspondents still insist that C. & P. be nominated in Tenn. this spring. We will find it impossible to send our daughter to Columbia—much as we had desired it.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

McMinnville, April 19, 1842

In this quarter, democracy was never more completely in the ascendant than it is at the present moment. The course of the “13,” 1 the course of the democracy in regard to bank Directors, 2 and in regard to the failure of the Representation Apportionment Bill, 3 meets the distinct approval of nearly the whole people of the Mountain District. 4 So far as the Senatorial Election question is concerned, we should have been cashiered to a man if we had suffered the election of Foster and Jarnagin, having the power to prevent it. On that subject the approbation of our constituents is not negative or tacit approval—it is affirmative, open approval by declarations promptly and everywhere uttered by our friends, and tacitly by hundreds of whigs who approve Tyler’s course, and who are sorely disappointed in all the doings of the Called and present session of Congress. Jones nor no other Whig can run in this District in the next gubernatorial contest as well as Cannon 5 did in 1839. Jones has sunk out of all notice, and is only thought of or remembered because he is the acting executive. All men look to you in the next campaign, and all desire to have the privilege of voting directly for you for the office of Governor, though all would with equal zeal give you their votes as a candidate on the republican ticket for a higher office. Whatever you may be out for in 1844, or in 1843, the Mountain goes for en masse.

I am glad to see that Andrew Johnson has published his speech on the Senatorial election question. 6 It is in the Argus, and I think should be transferred to the Union.

Jacobs and his Railroad have gone to the Devil. 7 I have just seen young Brown the Clerk in the House, and he informs me that the New President and present board of Directors are about to press and sue the stockholders upon a call upon stock, and that there is a general repugnance to pay any more, believing what they have paid has been misspent, and that if the call is pressed by suits it will produce a general rebellion among the stockholders. The road was conceived in folly and has been brought forth in sin, and been conducted in fraud and inequity. The LaGrange road is but little better.

When Mr. VanBuren comes to Nashville you will see him of course. Judge Ridley and myself intend to pay our respects to him.

You will see that our old friend John Ford here, keeps up a pretty good war. While we have a press, however retired I may live, I can have every thing straight as a shingle in this district.

Mr. Cave Johnson writes me that he has summoned you as a witness upon his claim against me, or will summon you when the cause is at issue in Davidson Circuit Court. He says he does not wish to distress me but that he must be paid. He admits that I have lost by the business, and that I have done some service, and that when our friends get into power, he will urge that something in the official line shall be done for me. All this is poor consolation to a man stupefied to the eyes, aye, over head and ears in embarrassments—embarrassments incurred in a cause in which Mr. Johnson had so much more at stake than I had.

Dr. Gwin as well as Mr. Johnson have the same kind of demands, except that as to the Doctor, I am personally bound, and for the other I never was and at the time did not intend to be. I wish to be freed from both upon any terms of liquidation in my power, and will write to both on the subject in a few days proposing such compromise as I can make. I will also write to Mr. Turney. I will request them to place their claims in Turney's hands, or empower him to settle and compound the matter with me. I can procure lands, such as our Warren and Cannon County lands, and pay them at the lowest price—lands clear of all incumbrance and held under old perfect titles. I have friends who will furnish the lands, and allow me to work out the pay like a slave by what I can earn hereafter if I live—they running the risk of my dying. Mr. Turney is a perfect Judge of such property, its value and titles. I wish to deal fairly—do the very best I can—and finally. If you could drop a line to Dr. Gwin, Johnson and Turney or any of them, aiding me in my just purpose, you will greatly oblige me. I shall write to them when I return from Van Buren Court, about 27th or 28th inst.

I understand Haskill of Madison has resigned and I learn that McCallahan or McCorry either can most surely be Elected.\(^1\) You Know more about this than I can tell you. One thing I Know that it is very Important that we should Elect a Democrat, and carry Madison. Would it not be well for you to write to those Gentlemen and other friends at Jackson before some of them engage in it and spoil it.

No further accounts of Mr Van Buren. Only that all New Orleans was engaged in giving him a warm Reception.

Our Committee started down this morning in the Hermitage with a party of Ladies and Gentlemen to meet him.\(^2\) Doctr. McNeill is waiting to receive money. If I see him to day I will Know his prospects &c &c. The Genl is well and expects you up when Mr Van Buren arrives. When you come bring all the force you can. I will write you by Monday nights mail if any News from him. Bring all our friends and let us Know when you will be up. I will give you the result of the New York City Elections on the back of this Letter if we receive it by the mail to night.\(^3\)

I should have visited you for a day but I could not get off. Nothing would have been done toward Mr Van Bures reception. It looks well now and their is quite a good feeling even with the Whigs. Our respects to Mrs. Polk.

R. Armstrong

\[\text{[P.S.]}\] You have the correct view of Mr Van Burens visit and what ought to be the course of the Genl. and our friends. I have previously spoken to the Old Genl. and Donelson in the same way. Their is great scheming going on and the sooner it is put down the better. The only fear of the Democratic party, is division and a split up about men. When I see you I have much to say to you.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNERY

Dear Sir Washington April the [26]th 1842

I this day received yours of the 16th of this month and I am pleased to see that you agree with your friends here from Tennessee on the financial question, though I cannot nor will not use your opinion in any way, as it is marked private and besides as there is likely to be a division in the democratic ranks on the question, it would not only be useless to identify you in the division but might at some future period prove prejudicial. For the present I can see no necessity for your giving any public opinion about it. I do not think Congress will adjourn before the 10th or 15th of July next. I would be pleased to see you here. I think A. O. P. N. has put his foot in it. Can it be possible that He can longer deceive the democracy of Tennessee? His course as it seems to me is not only foolish but ridiculous, a mixed meeting to invite the Ex. President and do him honor, a man whom they had denounced as the most corrupt that lives, to honor him for what, true they do not say, but it cannot be for his faithful public services, nor for the measures of his administration—these the Whigs have condemned in the strongest terms. Suppose he was to accept, what would be the character of the Tost, in what sentament of approbation of his public life could the Whigs agree? None.

It is roumerd here that Webster and Spencer are to resign and that their places will be filled by the appointment of democrats. I have no faith in this roumer. Tyler would not appoint demo. even if the places were vacant, which I do not believe will happen.

The committee of the whole on the Union this day filled the blank in the appotionment bill with 50,079 which gives Tennessee 15 members and the house to consist of 288 members. This I think is all wrong; the number ought to have been reduced. I will write to my old friend Moore again shortly, and I still hope he will come right. He certainly cannot be deceived by N. always.

There is now a strong talk here that Van and yourself will be our next candidates; the Idea is I think gaining strength. It is not exactly as it ought to be, but it may be the best we can under the existing circumstances do. You know my feelings and views, and here all agree you would be as strong if not stronger than Van. But if you or any other new man were taken up, there would not be a vacancy for the aspirants for the next eight years. Van can only serve foure. He therefore has the aid of many leading men, which I think gives him much strength in convention which he otherwise would not have.

I am pleased to see we are gaining in Tennessee. I have a corrispondance from one end of the state to the other, and they all give the same account from the differant sections that you give from Jackson. I have no doubt we now have a large majority in Tennessee if we could now have a recount.

Present my rispect to Mrs Polk, and accept for yourself my best wishes.

5. The occasion of Nicholson's proposal to include Whigs on the arrangements committee for Van Buren's Nashville visit has not been identified; probably Nicholson suggested his idea to Polk, who in turn may have mentioned the matter to Turney in his letter of April 16, 1842.

6. Daniel Webster and John C. Spencer. Former legislator, congressman, and secretary of state of New York, Spencer served as U.S. secretary of war from October 12, 1841, until March 3, 1843, when he became secretary of the Treasury. He resigned from the latter post on May 2, 1844.

7. On April 26, 1842, the U.S. House amended the general apportionment bill by allowing one representative for each 50,179 people. The House sent the bill to the Senate on May 3, but the upper house changed the ratio to 70,680. On June 17, 1842, the House accepted the Senate version, which fixed the membership of the House at 233. Under the new formula Tennessee lost two of her thirteen seats.

8. Possibly Richard B. Moore, a resident of Maury County.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,

Washington 29th April 1842

I reced. today your letter & was gratified to learn the prospects of the Democrats in the western district. If we cannot beat the whigs upon their measures we may give up. I consider that result as certain not only in Tennessee but throughout the Union. The Whigs here have recently made a singular movement & one which I think must seriously effet them if these designs should be carried out—an amendment to the apportion­ment Bill, to compel the states to adopt the district system, with ulterior object it is believed, if they succeed in this, of districting the whole U.S. This movement was made by Hallstead & no doubt in consequence of the recent elections in Con., Rhod Island, New Jersey & Georgia—the only states which vote by Genl ticket. Their recent elections indicate the success hereafter of the Democratic party in each & by districting something may be saved & besides the Districts could be laid off here by a reckless Whig majority & something saved in that way. I think it probable they cannot succeed in the first move & of course the latter falls. We voted first in Com. for 60.500, which was very unfavourable to the slave States—the fractions covering 8 members. Of course the southern members made a great struggle to get rid of it & succeeded in substituting 50.178 which is very favorable to us & increases the House to 306 mem­bers. A strong effort will be made in the House to get it to about 70.000.

The Treasury has a new Tariff Bill to substitute in place of Saltonstalls which is said to be much better. We expect it every day. The Whigs by their retrenchment Committees are making strong movements agt. Van Buren, by hunting up all the extravagance in Florida, in removing the Indians & in every other branch of the public service, & making their Reports silently & letting every thing pass without notice & the Reports, one sided, leaving [out] every thing that does not suit them, will come upon us as having had the sanction of Congress. A good thing occurred lately. Great efforts are making to impeach the integrity of Carey Harris while acting as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, & the proof is a letter from Jeff. Porter, proposing a partnership with him in purchasing Indian reservations & Harris to pay the money & decide the Cases & Jeff make the purchases. Jeff is now here attempting to get the Committee to make a new Report so as to exculpate. This is the talk among the members. I have not examined the facts. Something of the sort caused the resignation of Harris. They believe that Van is to be our Candidate & these are the proofs of their former Charges agt him. There is no knowing what such men as Stanly may do. We must counteract the movement in some way & how, it is difficult to say. The extravagance of the officers in Florida & in removing the Indians ought to cause their dismissal. I am now so far behind the economical retrenchment men, tho I pursue my former course, I am hardly regarded as one of them. New Converts are always the most zealous as well as clamorous. What do you think of Briggs making retrenchment speeches! Everett talking of economy! & Slade denouncing the extravagance of the last adm! Their solid effort is at Van Buren & some of our timid friends are afraid to meet their clamors but that we have a decided majority for him in Congress I have no doubt. I know but little of the movements of the friends of others. Now & then I hear a little by accident. An address has been for some weeks written intended to be sent every where privately by Pickens to arouse his friends but rumor says, that they are afraid to make the movement lest the facts should be made public & bring down upon him, all the friends of others who have pretensions & thus break him down—and it is the prevailing opinion that all our aspirants will yield to none but Van Buren. I may also add that I have met with no democrats except a few on the Ohio who does not wish that you should be on the ticket with Van & this will certainly be the case if he or Silas Wright is nominated unless it shall be again thought necessary to reconcile the Col & keep him out of the way by placing him on the ticket. In my opinion there is no doubt of our success unless he should be taken up by the Whigs & Clay dropped. If Col will permit it, my opinion is that it will be done. Clay will be too flat in a year to make any thing of him. I see no reason why you should not call here going to or returning from N. York. Nothing more can be made of it than will be made of your trip to New York.
We had an angry discussion about Poindexters Report, which it is said will implicate Hoyt, Butler & Curtis and all others connected with the Custom House & Wise intimated to day that it would implicate in gross fraud many of the leading manufacturers of New England in a conspiracy with the collector to break up the trade in woolen goods.

The Pres was called on for the Report in Feby. Poindexter never made his Report until the 20th of April to the Treasury. Stanly called for it but could not get it, as it had not been examined at the Treasury or coppied to comply with the call. Stanly summoned Poindexter & got a copy which he presented to the House for printing by order of his Committee. It will be soon published & it is supposed will have a tendency to injure Van Buren.

It is hardly probable that I can screw myself up to make a speech on the Tariff & Brown doubts whether he will. He & Habersham have proposed a counter report which he thinks will answer well for circulation better than a speech.

I suppose Shepherd of Williamson recomended as a Tyler Whig will be appointed Marshall. We recomended the renomination of Claiborne & if he did not do that, we then all united in recomending Wm G. Childress, Genl Clements or Matlock. Genl J's recommodation will carry Shepherd. The Genl ought not to interfere by recomending political opponents to the exclusion of his former & long tried friends. We should have had a democrat but for his recommodation. I think the Pres. is using every means to make capital by his patronage. It is believed, that as soon as Congress adjourns—the Clay whigs in office will be shoved overboard. They are now the most odious to the Pres. of all other cliques or parties. I do not see that he has or can make the slighest impression upon the Democratic. Benton & the Globe are going to extremes agt. him and as I think acting unwisely. We ought certainly to support when we can & conciliate as much [as] possible. It was believed for some time here that Ewings Bank Bill with the assent of the States would be taken up & passed instead of the Exchequer schemes proposed at the present session & make an issue with Clay upon that. The Madisonian has recently denied any such project & so does his friends.

I know Jas M Howry well & occasionally correspond with him, send him documents &c. My impression is that no demonstration at this time in behalf of any of our candidates would operate favorably among our friends. They generally oppose the idea of any movement until next year & I am often censured for speaking freely upon the subject among our friends.

My impression is that I cannot remain longer than the close of the session. I have formed a partnership in the practice of the Law & my personal attention will be expected after this session.
Hardwicke to ascertain his views & wishes on the subject. I am very unwilling to do any thing that would seem unkind toward him or give any advantage to one friend over another. I must try & make some money for Hickman and Dickson & besides we cannot with propriety have them here with us & we cannot leave them.

I should be glad if you & Nicholson could in some way become reconciled & move as harmoniously as here-to-fore, Tho I shall have but little to do with politics hereafter I shall feel as much anxiety as ever for the success of our cause & should deplore any misunderstanding which would tend to weaken us. We ought to bear & forbear much. Concession, harmony, everything for the cause. I have made similar suggestions to him. He speaks in kind terms of you—will support your re-election and is determined to adhere to our party.

The prevailing opinion here seems to be that our difficulties with England will be reconciled without difficulty. Lord Aberdeen you see renounces the right of search & rumor says Ld. Ashburton is ready to give an equivalent in Lands on the Coast for the mountain lands in dispute, which will be a good bargain for the state of Maine and as to the Creole I suppose there will be indemnity offered in the negotiation protracted or postponed. Webster I suppose will settle as much as he can & leave the balance for future adjustment. We ought not settle one until the other is adjusted. Both questions, in the event of war, will unite the North & South. My respects to Madam.

C Johnson

[P.S.] My health is better than you ever knew it.

2. On April 27, 1842, William Halsted from New Jersey moved such an amendment in the U.S. House; that body concurred in the amendment on May 3. The final bill, which became law on June 25, 1842, omitted Halsted’s wording, but incorporated the idea that members of Congress should be elected at the district level rather than state wide. A lawyer, Halsted served two terms in the House as a Whig, 1837–39 and 1841–43.
3. In recent elections Connecticut Democrats carried their gubernatorial and legislative tickets in every congressional district in the state. Early in 1842 Rhode Island’s free suffrage advocates won a plebiscite on the adoption of their proposed constitution; under that authority they elected their leader, Thomas W. Dorr, governor of the new regime and gained majorities in both houses of their new legislature. Although the free suffrage issue cut across party lines, Dorr’s “rebellion” received more support from Democrats than from Whigs. Democrats in New Jersey scored significant gains in state elections held in October of 1841. In February of 1842 Georgia Democrats carried their ticket in a special election to fill three vacancies in that state's congressional delegation.

4. See Hopkins L. Turney to Polk, April 26, 1842.

5. On March 31, 1842, Leverett Saltonstall reported a tariff bill from the House Committee on Manufactures; that bill received little consideration. In response to a request from the House Committee on Ways and Means, Secretary of the Treasury Walter Forward transmitted a tariff proposal to the House on May 9. Forward's draft bill raised duties above the 20 per cent ceiling fixed by the Compromise Tariff Act of 1833, but did not mention distribution of the proceeds of public land sales. The general revenue bill, which was reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on June 10, 1842, proposed tariffs exceeding the 20 per cent level and provided for unconditional continuance of distribution; that bill passed the House on July 16 and the Senate on August 5. Tyler vetoed the legislation four days later and cited reasons similar to those he had given on June 29 for disapproving a temporary tariff bill, which would have extended the life of tariff and distribution laws due to terminate on June 30. Tyler argued that Congress should not violate the 1833 tariff compromise for purposes of distribution; nor should Congress borrow money for such purposes. Under great pressure to enact a general revenue act, Congress dropped its distribution clause, and Tyler accepted the revised bill on August 30, 1842. The Tariff Act of 1842 returned duties to their 1833 level, which had ranged from 23 to 35 per cent ad valorem.

6. Johnson's reference probably included the select Committee on Retrenchment, the standing Committee on Public Expenditures, and the six standing committees on expenditures in the five executive departments and on the public buildings. Johnson himself headed the Committee on Expenditures on Public Buildings and supported efforts to implement government economy.

7. Carey A. Harris, former resident of Williamson County, Tennessee, rose to the rank of chief clerk in the War Department; in 1836 Jackson chose him to head the Office of Indian Affairs, in which post he served until his resignation in late 1838.

8. Thomas Jefferson Porter of Columbia, Tennessee, succeeded his father, Joseph, as clerk of Maury County Court in the 1820's, served as an executor of Samuel Polk's estate, ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1833, and acquired extensive land holdings in Tennessee's Western District.

9. On April 12, 1842, John T. Stuart, Whig member of the House Committee on Public Expenditures, reported committee findings that Harris had used his public office for private gain and that Van Buren had accepted Harris' resignation quietly rather than expose corruption in the administration. The committee report included evidence that Porter and Harris had collaborated to secure certain Indian lands in Mississippi for personal benefit. The contents of Porter's 1838 letter to Harris, upon which the accusation was founded, was known to the committee only through the testimony of government clerks claiming to have read the document. In a letter dated May 16, 1842, and addressed to the chairman of the committee, Porter used evidence from the General Land Office to support his argument that his land claim had required Treasury Department action and had involved no connection with Harris' Office of Indian Affairs. Porter further explained that because of illness he had been unable to travel to Washington City to press his claim in person. See House Report No. 640, 27 Congress, 2 Session.

10. A lawyer from North Carolina, Edward Stanly served several terms as a Whig member of the U.S. House, 1837–43 and 1849–53. In 1857 he ran unsuccessfully as a Republican for the governorship of California; during the Civil War he held the post of military governor of eastern North Carolina.

11. George Nixon Briggs, Horace Everett, and William Slade. Briggs, a lawyer, served as a Whig congressman from Massachusetts, 1831–43; as governor, 1844–51; and as judge of the state's Court of Common Pleas, 1853–58. Everett, a lawyer and prominent Vermont Whig, won election to seven terms in the U.S. House, 1829–43. Slade, a lawyer and editor, served as Vermont's secretary of state, 1815–22; sat as a Whig in Congress, 1831–43; and won election as governor, 1844–46.

12. Francis W. Pickens, a South Carolina lawyer and planter, first won election to Congress as a nullifier and sat from 1834 until 1843. A member of the Nashville Convention of 1850, he served as governor of South Carolina from 1860 until 1863. On Pickens' pamphlet urging Calhoun's nomination, see Aaron V. Brown to Polk, April 9, 1842.

14. On April 28, 1842, Edward Stanly from the House Committee on Public Expenditures submitted to the House George Poindexter's report to Secretary of the Treasury Walter Forward. In 1841 Tyler had appointed Poindexter, a former congressman, senator, and governor of Mississippi, 1819–21, as one of three commissioners to investigate the U.S. customhouse in New York City. Poindexter's minority report concurred with the majority report of Commissioners William M. Steuart and Alfred Kelley in revealing pervasive corruption in the customhouse under Collector Jesse Hoyt, 1838–41. Poindexter's report went further, however, by adding a severe condemnation of the Whig, Edward Curtis, who had succeeded Hoyt. Poindexter also implicated Benjamin Franklin Butler, a former law partner of Van Buren and U.S. attorney general, 1833–38, for his actions as U.S. attorney for Southern New York, 1838–41; Butler served in the latter position again, under Polk, 1845–48. See House Report No. 669, 27 Congress, 2 Session.

15. On May 5, 1842, Richard Wylly Habersham submitted to the House a minority report from the Committee on Manufactures protesting against the high protective duties urged by the committee's majority; Aaron V. Brown and Patrick Calhoun Caldwell of South Carolina joined Habersham in signing the minority report. A lawyer from Savannah, Georgia, Habersham served in the U.S. House as a State Rights Democrat from March 4, 1839, until his death on December 2, 1842.

16. Before serving as U.S. marshal in Middle Tennessee, Benjamin H. Sheppard had co-edited the Jackson District Telegraph and State Sentinel, 1837–38.

17. Thomas Claiborne, William G. Childress, Jesse B. Clements, and, possibly, Gideon C. Matlock. Clements, a planter in Lincoln County, had ad-advanced to the rank of brigadier general in the Tennessee militia in 1836. Matlock took an active part in Democratic party affairs in Wilson and Smith counties.

18. Reference is to Andrew Jackson.

20. Thomas Ewing, an Ohio lawyer, sat as a Whig in the U.S. Senate, 1831–37 and 1850–51. He served as secretary of the Treasury under Harrison and Tyler, March 5 to September 13, 1841, but resigned in protest against Tyler's opposition to a national bank. On June 3, 1841, Ewing had sent to the U.S. House a report recommending repeal of the Independent Treasury Act and creation of a fiscal agent of the United States. As reported to the Senate on June 12, Ewing's "Fiscal Bank" scheme provided for a central bank in the District of Columbia with branches, or offices of discount and deposit, located in the several states whose legislatures did not object. Ewing's plan received the endorsement of Tyler, who had objected to the creation of a national bank on constitutional grounds; Ewing's plan removed these objections. Tyler urged, but failed to receive, Henry Clay's support.

21. Established in 1837 with Thomas Allen as editor and publisher, the Washington Madisonian initially backed conservative Democrats. In the spring of 1841 the newspaper suspended publication, but in September of that year Tyler revived it. Allen retained his post as editor.

22. Johnson's partner is not identified.

23. Reference is to Johnson's sons, James Hickman and Thomas Dickson.

24. Reference is to the Northeastern Boundary Dispute, which was settled by the Webster-Ashburton Treaty in 1842. George Hamilton Gordon, fourth Earl of Aberdeen, was secretary of state for foreign affairs in the British cabinet. Alexander Baring, first Baron Ashburton, served as commissioner procurator and plenipotentiary to the United States; his instructions from Lord Aberdeen gave him authority to settle all outstanding disputes with the United States. See Aaron V. Brown to Polk, April 9, 1842.

FROM LEVIN H. COE

Dear Sir

Your favor of the 19th Apl. was to hand by last Sundays mail. An unusual press of such buisiness as could not be postponed has delayed my reply until to day.

I have mailed a letter written at some lenth to Judge Howry at Oxford—Throwing upon him the onus of a proper move in that state & suggesting that it be made promptly & giving the reasons for it. He will also write to Mr Claibourne.

I have also written to my old Friend James E. Saunders at Courtland urging him to make a move and telling him that his own Statesman K.
stands no chance [and that] to hold back for him will defeat him & you both and saddle us with old Dick. I will hear from him in a few days and write you the result. The first move made elsewhere I think should be promptly followed by the hoisting Van & P.—unconditionally. In this way alone can we hope not to be juggled off. I have written to Judge Howry & Saunders both that to that we intend to come, for that we cannot & will not carry Dick. I have suggested to Judge H. the partiality for Calhoun with some of our Democrats at H Springs so that he might sound there before he leaps.

4. James E. Saunders, a member of the 1840 Alabama legislature, moved from Courtland to Mobile in 1842 and engaged in the mercantile business. In 1845, Polk appointed him collector of the port of Mobile, a position he held until 1849.

5. Reference is to William Rufus King, whose public career included service as U.S. Senator from Alabama, 1819–44 and 1848–53; as minister to France, 1844–46; and very briefly as vice-president of the general government in 1853.

FROM ARCHIBALD YELL

My Dear Sir

Little Rock 30th Apl. 1842

Your verry acceptable letter of the 19th Inst. was received last evening, for which you will please accept my thanks.

The political information Contained in your letter is no doubt a verry Correct history of the movements of the seviral aspirents to the Presidency. It is the first reliable information which I have recieved this winter or spring, but is pritty much in accordince with the impresion made upon my mind, through the mediam of the News Paper and my April 30 1842

Knowledge of most of the leaders of the several aspirants. Things so far are unsettled, and it is extremely doubtful who may be the Nominees of the Party. Each of the aspirants will continue to feel and make interest for themselves until the meeting of the Convention, who will I hope make the most available selection and one that will again ensure our success. But I am one of those who have but little confidence in the patriotism of the greater body of the members of Conventions and they are not always a fair exponent of popular opinion.

Those Conventions are too often composed of political aspirants whose patriotism never extends beyond a good fat office either for themselves or friends. Hence the people's favorite may be mortgaged away. A Combination of Interests may be formed to place the weakest & most objectionable Candidate before the Nation. To make clearer my views I refer you to the Whigs Harrisburgh Convention where Tip & Tyler received the nomination. Our Party are not always exempt from like errors. I their fore consider the prize as now in market. He that bids highest will win; or rather he that can be able to combine the strongest ticket for President & Vice President will receive the nomination.

Buchannon I have no doubt has risked his nominatin upon his & Kings strength and King will stand no chance with any other aspirnt. If Calhoun should receive the nominatin I should think Wright or Woodbury would be united with him from the Free States, and they would form a strong ticket. Uncle "Dick" will take any man that will give him strength & he will strive to coalace with Porter, Wilkins or Dallis of Pensyla; that will tend to weaken both He & Buchannon. Should Mr. Van Bern or Wright get the nominatin, then I consider the contest betwn you & Stevenson of Virginia for the Vice Presidency. Your claims being about equal, it may depend in some degree upon the prospect of your respective states. Tennessee being the most doubtful will not lessen your chance, but it will be important to have in the convention some of your ablest & best Diplomats. I am not sure if I shall not attend myself. I am however so much of a Novice in such matters I may decline the honor. I have a fair prospect in Arkansas to conquer the Soless Corporations here. The next Legislature will settle this matter with the banks. I shall be then content. I have but one other object to accomplish and I shall retire satisfied. It is to give the Indians a good drubing which we will do sooner or later. Have you seen my "Canterous" correspondence with "Earl Spencer." What a scamp he is!

Now for the widdow. I think I recollect her. She was (if I mistake not) with her father in Nashville during the session of the Legislature of 1827. I was also a member. She was large good looking but rather sallow Conplected; she is of good age, First rate Family & pritty enough for me. I have 4 children in Arkansas & one in Tennessee, 5. How many has she? We may be overstocked, but I should not be the first to object. With such advantages would she have me & come to Arkanis? If she would I would then say she is also a sensible woman. Say to Mrs Polk if she expects me to go for you for Presidet or Vice P., she must shew her frindship.

You say Mrs P. is in “good earnest, no Joke,” Nor am I a joking. I Can not come this year to Tennesse. I have this 500,000 acrs of Land to Locate. This must not be neglected. Then our Legislature convenes in Nov., but I Can keep up a correspondence with you & learn sompthig of my prispects. What is the widdars name? Where does she live?

If D Webster was out of the Cabint I should say we stood agood Chance for a War with England & Mexico, but that fellow will Cheat us out of it. I hope the Texians & Mexicans will keep it up until our Indians takes sides & then we will thrash them. Nothing short of a war Can get us out of Debt.

Present me kindly to Mrs Polk and bilieve me as evr . . . .

Dallas, a Philadelphia lawyer, served as mayor of Philadelphia, 1829; U.S. Senator, 1831–33; minister to Russia, 1837–39; vice-president under Polk, 1845–49; and minister to Great Britain, 1856–61.

The use of the title “Earl” probably alludes to the name similarity between the American secretary of war and his contemporary, John Charles Spencer, 3rd Earl Spencer and leader of the Whig Party in England.

FROM HARVEY M. WATTERSON

Dear Sir. Washington City. 2d May 1842

I was gratified to learn on yesterday from our friend A V Brown, that you would probably visit this City some time during this or the next month. I hope you will not abandon that intention. Your friends here would like very much to see you.

You remarked to me in your last letter that you would like for me to inform you from time to time of such matters of general interest as do not make their appearance in the Newspapers. I presume you wish to know what the leaders of the Democratic and Whig parties are saying and doing in regard to the next Presidential election. Thus supposing, I will briefly give you what I have seen and heard, and my own impressions founded upon the same.

It is perhaps needless for me to say that it is now the settled purpose of the Whig party to make Mr Clay their candidate at all hazards, and a Bank or no Bank is to be the main issue. It is the hobby on which he calculates success. President Tyler has "headed" himself by retaining Webster in his Cabinet and his "fishy" course generally and is not seriously thought of for the succession or re-election, or whatever you may call it, by any respectable number of either party. He will "evaporate" at the end of this term a striking monument of the folly of attempting to establish a third or "Patriot Party" as his friends style themselves in this country.

Now for the Democrats. Buchannon is so anxious for the nomination that he has almost turned cross-eyed! But it wont do. He can not even unite the entire Democratic Delegation in the House of Representatives from Pennsylvania. I regard his prospects as peculiarly gloomy, but not more so than those of his friend Col King of Alabama who would like the best of all things in the world to be run upon his ticket for Vice President.

Benton you know has declared for Mr Van Buren, and is considered out of the scrape. This seems to be very disinterested patriotism indeed, and it may be.

Mr Calhoun's friends are pressing his claims warmly. I have seen a small pamphlet said to be and no doubt written by Pickens urging many reasons why he should be taken up as by the Democratic party. This pamphlet has not yet met the "public eye" and perhaps will not, as the move is deemed impolitic by Dixon H. Lewis, and other friends of Mr Calhoun. They think it would be calculated to array against him at too early a period the particular friends of the other aspirants. Personally Mr
Calhoun is very popular with a large majority of the Democratic members of Congress, but many doubts are entertained on the subject of his availability by a number of those who would zealously support him, if he were the nominee of the party. That he will get the nomination—the chances are now against him.

Silas Wright, in my humble opinion, could be nominated by the Democratic members of the present Congress. But his partiality for Mr Van Buren is such, that he is supposed to be out of the question.

The conclusion which I draw from all the signs of the times at present is, that Van, that "used up man" is to be our party candidate. If so no man, I think, has a fairer prospect for the Vice Presidency than yourself.

I would be glad to hear from you.

I am at a loss to know what to say to you. I can learn nothing or understand Donelson; he will go out with Mr Van Buren and continue on to his Mississippi place.

Mr. Van Buren seems disposed to say nothing on the subject we spoke of when I last saw you. I made an effort through Donelson again this evening, but it is all Mum with kind feelings, &c &c. It may be that he will say to you what he will not say to any other person. The old Genl. will Tell him before leaving the Hermitage, to have a conversation with you.

Their is now a Committee here from Huntsville who insist on his going there from Columbia. If he does, our friends in Giles, Lincoln, Bedford &c

My Dear Sir Mecklenburg May 10. 1842

I wrote you recently giving you the substance of an answer I had recd. from the Editor of the Meck-Jeff. & remarked at the time that I would soon reply, &c. This I have since done after the following manner. "I am glad to hear you say that as to the V.P., Gov. Polk would please you as well as any other man in the Union, but you then ask the question "might not a ticket of both Southern men lose us the victory?" This is a most significant & important question, but without entering at length into its investigation I would barely remark that there is little force in the objection that neither of the two candidates is from the North. Considered sectionally our party is in an admitted minority in both branches of the Legislature & it is therefore not unfair that we should have the Executive—but theory aside you will recollect that in 1828 the West & South gave the P. & V.P. & they were sustained not only with unanimity but with enthusiasm. New England now except Mass. & Vt. would do so again, & the question at issue being radical & essential with the Demo. party sectional influences would yield or be inoperative. N.Y., Pa. & the Middle States would unite upon our candidates & blessed with such an administration as has not been since that of Washington the whole country would once more harmonise perfectly. I beg leave to add that my acquaintance with the feelings & preferences of the people of N.C. & especially of Tenn. & her co-terminous Western States, enables me to say who ought to be nominated at Salisbury for V.P. All admit that it will be a close race in N.C. & T. under the most favorable circumstances. We have a majority if the materials can be brought to combine. Gov. Polk is a native of your State & the name is closely identified with the lofty spirit of independence that characterised the Whigs of 1775. He is moreover an adopted son of Tennessee & has added lustre to the State & she is justly proud of his purity—his virtue—his abilities & his services. She appreciates as she ought the manly & self-sacraficing devotion he has manifested for our principles & his disinterested & laborious defence & advocacy of them. These claims of his to the consideration & confidence of his countrymen should not be—must not be over-looked on the 20th May. That day cannot be consecrated to a more hallowed purpose than his nomination to the second station in the Gt. To do otherwise would have a very bad effect elsewhere & especially in Tennessee—upon the prospects of whomsoever is the Pres. nominee of the Bal. Con. That nominee could not but derive a vast acquisition of strength by having Gov. P. associated with him as V.P. I hazard little in saying that thus associated he would certainty carry N.C., Tenn., Al., & Miss. Without this association the result in all these States I consider doubtful—very. You requested me to write fully & freely. I have done so. I cannot be mistaken. You ought at once to nominate Polk. He will help you even in your approaching state elections—more than you have conception of. Especially will you need him as an auxilliary to carry Mr. C. in N.C. & Tenn. These remarks are my own. Take them only for what they are worth. They are neither suggested or authorised by another. They are my honest convictions & I thought some member of the Convention should know them.” Thus for my answer. It will be showed to Fisher, & to others in higher stations. It shows earnestness, but not more temper I think than the occasion required.

Yours of Apl. 16. is recd. The extract you sent me from a Washington Cor. coincides with my accounts from other places & persons. Whether V.B. or C. runs—or if both do you ought to be the V.P. in either case. Ill keep up the fire in the South.

We are much gratified at the arrangements permitted by the Rector & suggested by the kindness of Mrs. P. & yourself in relation to our daughter. At this time we find it impossible for her to attend—desirable as it otherwise would be. She is called unexpectedly to Ky. on an affair of honor with a female friend & she must forego for the present the advantages of the Institute & the civilities of your family. Present our thanks & best regards to Mrs. Polk—& my own to your excellent mother.

I was at Rogersville, Greeneville &c a week ago. Our friends are in fine spirits up there. I expected to have a county meeting to invite you among others in Aug. I will expect the Vol. you mention by Major Graham or Humphreys.

A strong Whig told Bass (J.M.) & myself the other day in town that you were the only one that could beat Clay for the Presidency.

J. G. M. RAMSEY

P.S. I intimated to Bass that the Bank of Tennessee had not been sufficiently cautious in some of its late decisions & doings & that it might thus injure you & your friends.

FROM FRANKLIN H. ELMORE

My Dear Sir

Charleston May 12, 1842

The recent decisive triumphs of our party & principles over the Whigs is a subject of such gratulation to every patriot that I cannot forbear to seek you out in your retirement to express to you the profound satisfaction which we all feel in this quarter on the happy prospect that seems again opening upon our country. The rebukes they are daily meeting a:t
the hands of an abused & repentant people are the most signal ever witnessed in our history. To good old Virginia, the glorious mother of so many states & of that still more glorious creed of principles for which we contend, how much of gratitude do we owe for her last & most triumphant vindication of her principles & the constitution! If North Carolina does but assume a position at our side, never will the whole south have presented so firm & united a front. But be that as it will, Whig folly & wickedness have numbered its own days & nothing can prevent the reestablishment of the Government on true republican principles unless there be a falling out by the way in our own Democratic ranks. So far, harmonious concert has given unity to us & an irrisistible career, but it has also conquered so many into our ranks, that we are in danger of falling to pieces by our own weight. I do not mean in immediate, but prospective danger of it. The Whigs are so sensible of their desperate condition that they already are counting on this hope for Mr. Clays success—so writes Preston to his friends here. As a good cause, holy principles & the irresistible vigor of truth & our friends have won the battle, so it becomes their prudence & patriotism, with forecast & decision, to take timely steps to secure for ourselves & posterity its legitimate results. The battle has been won on Principles not on men & we cannot be too careful not to let its trophies be snatched away in the very moment of victory, by allowing the influence of the latter to modify the support of the former, so as to impair the union & power of our party. It does seem to me that there never opened a fairer prospect for settling, for a long succession of years, the character of our administrations & giving permanent ascendancy to the Democratic construction of the constitution, and of consolidating the prosperity of the whole country. Having secured the almost certain assurance of a victory in the last struggle which ejects the Whigs & restores the Democrats to power, our only danger is in our dissensions in selecting the leader who is to be the exponent of our principles. If we unite on one judiciously selected & fairly chosen, there can be no doubt of a glorious triumph & a long ascendancy—while on the other hand it is impossible to foretell all the calamities that may fall on us as a party or a people, by a mistake in this particular.

In the future movements of our party, much will depend on you & your immediate friends. Your long services & prominent position at Washington & at home, have given you friends & influence that may be exercised for great good. Many of us who have known you, have not forgone the hope of seeing you again performing your part for the public welfare, & giving your services to the country. And if our party is reinstated in power, let who may be chief, I trust your voice will [be] heard in its administration and such I may safely say is the public feeling here.

In the selection of a candidate for the Presidency, you know what would be the voice of So Carolina. The long services & brilliant talants of Mr. Calhoun has for a long time made him her favorite. And his glorious services since Whig ascendancy, have made him even dearer to their affections. The choice of a candidate may be said to rest between him & Mr. Van Buren. On the spot where his talents & service are most seen & felt, there is no doubt Mr. Calhoun is greatly preferred—I mean at Washington, amongst the Representatives who have been fighting by his side, and amongst whom he has been a leader. With the people he has gained immensely & is daily adding to his popularity. He has been in the thickest of the fight & on every occasion has exhibited in the service of the country the most distinguished abilities.

Mr. Van Buren has great claims on our confidence & gratitude. He undoubtedly fell a martyr to our principles & if it were a mere question of reward, he is intitled to all the support we have warmly given him & even more. But to me, it seems, the question is rather, is it wise & expedient to risk a great cause again on him who has lost the battle before? Do we see such prospects of success in his leading, as to induce us to risk all again upon his banner? It cannot be unknown that in all the south he has had great difficulty in procuring a warm support, while he has met with a more unrelenting opposition than any public man of the times. Very many persons of intelligence who agree with us in principles, have never been able to give him confidence or support. The Whigs in the late election gained thousands who felt so while they were Democrats at heart & we had thousands who then voted with us, but who would now resist his being our candidate all of whom could be got for Mr Calhoun. They say that he has had a fair trial & it was clear that he is not one to get up a warm feeling for—that he has too much weight to carry. In short that in the popular feeling there are prejudices too powerful to be overcome & that if he be run, we may look for certain defeat.

It is understood here that Mr. Stevenson of Virginia is to be insisted on as his vice. The Richmond Enquirer it is said stipulates for it as the sine quo non—how truly I cannot say. He then is put in the line of succession, & after him of course a northern man as it would now seem to be necessary to alternate, between the slave & non slave holding sections. The overwhelming rout of the Whigs in that state may precipitate this arrangement & if it is to be counteracted it does seem to me that no time should be lost. If acquiesed in, we cannot know it too soon.

Amongst other matters connected with this subject, is the question of how many terms a man should serve. The Whigs go for one term—Mr. V.B. has had one term. I am not a one term man, but if the Party adopt it, I shall acquiese. I understand that there is a strong disposition that way at Washington, and that Mr. Calhoun is not disposed to be out for more than one, not, at his time of life, having more time to allot to the public service.

In regard to Mr. Van Buren, you know what has been my course. I entered Congress with every prejudice against him, and when I eventually gave him my support, it was you know with every possible reservation. Slowly but surely my convictions were attained on which I gave him my confidence, & I do not know any public man of the day, except Mr. Calhoun, to whom I feel we owe more. I should feel perfectly safe in his hands—and if he is elected President, unless he turn upon his own principles I shall be prepared to do as I have done before, give him both confidence & support. But while I feel thus towards him, I also feel that we owe as much to say the least to Mr. Calhoun, & that we cannot postpone the acknowledgement. I believe too that he will unite far more of the elements of power & success in the coming struggle & that our party will act more wisely to risk the great cause to which we are devoted, on his leading rather than anothers.
I will my Dear Sir be pleased to hear from you, if you have leisure & to interchange views upon these & such other public topics as may be agreeable to you.

I pray you present my most respectful regards to Mrs. Polk . . . .

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia. Polk's AE on the cover states that he answered this letter on June 13, 1842.

1. Franklin Harper Elmore, South Carolina lawyer and supporter of John C. Calhoun, sat in the U.S. House, 1836–39; presided over the bank of the State of South Carolina, 1839–50; and served briefly in the U.S. Senate in 1850.

2. In the Virginia legislative elections of April, 1842, Democrats carried both houses by sizable majorities.

3. William C. Preston, a strong advocate of states' rights, won election to the U.S. Senate in 1833 as a Calhoun nullifier and gained reelection in 1837. Becoming an anti-Jackson Whig, he resigned his seat in 1842 rather than follow the instructions of the South Carolina legislature.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Washington May 20th 1842

Dear Sir,

Yours of the 10th\(^1\) was received this morning. I was somewhat uneasy lest Van Burens appearance might not operate favorably for him in Ten. Our people have so often looked on the old Genl. whose personal appearance was so much better that I thought it probable his trip\(^2\) would be of no advantage. I had supposed Van Buren would have mentioned the subject of the next elections and I think he should have done so and that you & he should have conferred freely. All the injury will arise from such charges without any benefit derived from it, tho it is probable any understanding between you & him would have but little influence on the future movements of our party, without you both had taken a more active Stand for each other than would have been prudent. I think a serious & powerful effort will be made by some Southern Democrats to thrust him aside upon the pretence, that having been beaten, he is not safe for another race—that old charges will be revived—the trouble of explanation &c & he thrust aside there will be room for another. Hence the secret pamphlet was written which I have never seen and which it is said has not been circulated for fear of exposure & the consequences which might result.\(^3\) The Index is supposed to be in that interest, but no developments have been made in that quarter as far as I can see. The prospectus of a New Paper The Spectator has been recently issued, edited by Doct. Martin
(the author of the index who was removed from the Chief Clerkship of the State Department). This it is said will be a Buckhanon paper. These things indicate pretty strongly a settled determination in high quarters to thrust him aside. I should think Gov W—ry of N.H. could not be induced to lend himself in any way to any such project. The friends of Van say openly here, if he is not run that Silas W. is the man. These things will annoy us exceedingly and particularly if another Congress comes here without our candidates being settled on & I think it would be good policy in us to have that matter settled next year.

I shall not be surprised if the condition of Rhode Island should have much influence on the future action of our party. Senator Allen made a bitter speech the other day, denouncing the conduct of the Pres. in strong terms & among other things insisting upon the principle that a majority of the people of any State has the right to alter, to amend &c & to my surprise some of the States right men give into this view. It is said Allen is acting upon consultation with Benton & if the debate goes on in the Senate & the views of Allen are sustained by some of our leaders, it may make a serious division in our rank. I learn that Calhoun will to day or tomorrow make some conciliatory movement & so pass by the difficulty, such as the Senators interposing, urging the adjoining States to do so & thus settle the difficulty or thus delay the action of parties in that State for a while, hoping that reason may regain the ascendancy & that some project may be devised which will be agreeable to both parties. We are expecting every arrival of the mail to bring us intelligence of a battle or row of some sort. The Charter men are urged to a perseverance by the course of the Pres. who most unwisely as I think told them what kind of a case he would act on & how he would act. They are thus induced to persevere under the expectation of drawing their opponents to such a state as will induce the Pres. to act. In my opinion if he had simply said, no case is made out for the interposition of the Executive as Van did to the Buck-shot-war heroes, the difficulty would now have been over. This movement excited the Democracy of New York, who generally act on impulse & without much reflection. They have promised assistance to the other side, who are as much encouraged if not more so by it than the other side by the letters of the Executive. So the matter now stands. The Senate went into Executive session at an unusually early hour as some suppose on the Rhode Island difficulties. I have not seen the official Comments & cannot of course give any opinion. I understand the difficulty to arise in this way. The Original Charter was a corporation of land holders, giving the land holders the right of voting &c and which was fair & equal & gave general satisfaction & on account of this no constitution was formed at the termination of the Revolution. Recently the manufacturing interest has acquired the ascendency in point of numbers & the struggle now is which party shall rule? The latest intelligence says the reform Gov. has possession of the State House & two canons and an attack was hourly expected to be made on the Arsenal in the possession of the old Gov. There is no knowing what influence or to what length, this difficulty may produce. A blow struck may give rise to a civil war. It is a great misfortune to the country that Van is not now the Pres. His coolness, discrimination & good sense would have passed such an event without difficulty.

The Clay men of the West have become thorough reformers, [and] leave me in the shade altogether. I am in hopes we shall now be able to do some good & make some useful reforms. The Navy Bill will be cut down some two or three millions.11 I rather think we could now repeal the Home Squadron which only lost 8 votes at the Extra Session.12

You will regret to learn that Gov Thomas & lady have separated probably forever13—some foolish jealous fit of his, for which there was not the slightest cause—even worse than Houston's.14 I think he is a ruined man in every point of view. I have not seen him. They tell here some strange anecdotes of his conduct. His wife is in Va. I hope you will visit the city. It will be of service rather than injury to you. We shall not probably get away before the middle of Augt. or September. The Whigs never expect to get back & must make the most of their time.

C JOHN SON

[P.S.] No duel yet between Wise & Stanly.15 One is expected notwithstanding Wise is bound to keep the peace in the District. Stanly has been out of the City for a week & rumor says in practising with Reverdy Johnson one [of] his balls rebounded & struck Johnson about the eye & there is some danger of his loosing it.16 The papers next morning said he had fallen from his horse. Brown talks of leaving here next week for Ten. with his family.

2. Reference is to Martin Van Buren's visit to Nashville and the Hermitage in late April of 1842.
3. See Aaron V. Brown to Polk, April 9, 1842.
4. The Alexandria Index (D.C.) began publication in April of 1841 and issued its last number in August of 1842. Chief clerk of the State Department in 1840 and 1841, Jacob L. Martin had declined an offer in 1838 to edit the Nashville Union. In March of 1843 Calhoun interests acquired the financially troubled Spectator and ran it as Calhoun's national newspaper until its demise in late 1844.
5. Reference is to Van Buren.
7. Silas Wright.

8. Popular dissatisfaction with suffrage restrictions led to Rhode Island's "Dorr Rebellion" of 1841–42. In late 1841 a popular, but extralegal convention framed and ratified a "People's Constitution," which provided for white manhood suffrage and called for new state elections. The legislature declared the new constitution illegal and sponsored a regularly scheduled spring election under authority of the colonial charter of 1663. Thomas W. Dorr won the new constitution's gubernatorial election; and the incumbent governor, Samuel W. King, gained reelection under the old charter. Both Dorr and King applied to Tyler for military aid. In a letter dated April 11, 1842, Tyler assured King that if an actual insurrection were raised against the charter government, the general government would furnish that protection guaranteed to each state under Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution. In a private letter of May 9, 1842, Tyler urged King to exercise conciliation and restraint, including a general amnesty and a new constitutional convention. On May 18 the Dorrites attempted and failed to seize the state's militia arsenal; the "rebellion" rapidly lost support thereafter. Dorr received a sentence of life imprisonment, but won release in 1845.

9. On May 17, 1842, William Allen made extended remarks introducing two resolutions affirming the right of Rhode Island citizens to establish a constitutional republican form of government and enjoining the general government from blocking the people's efforts to establish such a government in Rhode Island. On the following day the Senate tabled Allen's resolutions.

10. In 1838 both Democrats and Whigs claimed control of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in a dispute over the election of House Speaker. A threatening mob forced several legislators to flee. Failing to receive assistance from the general government, Joseph Ritner, the governor, called out the state militia and equipped the troops with buckshot cartridges. The conflict ended when Democratic members, aided by three Whigs, organized the House.

11. Congress reduced the 1842 estimates for naval expenses by approximately two million dollars.

12. On July 21, 1841, the U.S. House authorized creation of a Home Squadron by a vote of 184 to 8. Tyler approved appropriations for eight additional naval vessels and contingent expenses on August 1, 1841.

13. Francis Thomas, a leading lawyer from western Maryland, won five terms as a Democrat in the U.S. House, 1831–41; he served as governor from 1841 until 1844. In 1841 he had married Sally Campbell McDowell, twenty-year-old daughter of James McDowell of Virginia and favorite niece of Thomas H. Benton.

14. Married on January 22, 1829, Sam Houston left his wife, Eliza Allen, in April of that same year.

15. On May 7, 1842, Edward Stanly and Henry A. Wise had an altercation in which Wise struck Stanly with a cane; two days later Stanly challenged Wise to a duel. Word of the impending duel led to the arrest of Wise, who was released on bond to keep the peace and remain in the District; Stanly had already left Washington for Baltimore. Seconds for the two men settled the matter peacefully. Wise, a lawyer from Virginia, sat in the U.S. House from 1833 until 1844. Originally a Democrat, he broke with Jackson over the U.S. Bank issue; in 1841 he became leader of the Tyler Whigs in the House. Wise subsequently served as governor of Virginia from 1856 until 1860.

16. Reverdy Johnson's injury resulted in a loss of sight in his left eye. Johnson sat in both the Maryland Senate, 1821–29 and 1860–61, and in the U.S. Senate, 1845–49 and 1863–68. He also served as U.S. attorney general, 1849–50, and as U.S. minister to Great Britain, 1868–69. A noted constitutional lawyer, Johnson argued the Dred Scott case in 1856 for the defense.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir: Murfreesboro' June 1st 1842

I see in the Nashville Banner\(^1\) of Monday last, a communication over the names of four of the Whig Senators, addressed to "The Thirteen," but more especially to yourself Hardwicke, Johnson and Powell proposing that the Senators shall resign and submit the matters in dispute to their respective constituents.\(^2\) They take especial care not to include in their proposition the House of Representatives in which the Whig party hold an accidental majority. They modestly propose that the Democrats shall surrender their power in the Senate, whilst the Whigs shall retain theirs in the House. In this way they doubtless calculate that they have everything to gain and nothing to lose. Suppose the Democratic Senators accede to their proposition, and the elections, to supply the vacant places shall result as they did in August last, with perhaps an addition of one or two Democratic Senators, still the Whig party by retaining their power in the House would be in no worse condition than they now are. Now my first impression is, that the proposition of the four Whigs should be promptly and boldly met by one on our part, that all the members of both Houses, shall resign, and all go again before the people. If they agree to this, I shall rejoice in it, & shall have no fears of the result. If they decline it, it will prove, what I believe to be true—that they do not really mean or desire to submit their cause to such a test. I think they should be told distinctly that the Democratic Senators will cheerfully accept their proposition and resign provided the members of the House will do so also.

By a reply of this character, you will prevent them from making a false impression on the public mind, such as their address unopposed is calculated to make. By that address they manifest a seeming desire, to submit existing differences to the people. Their insincerity will be exposed by their refusal to include the House also. I verily believe if the House resigns that we should gain in another election not less than a dozen members, whilst the peculiar arrangement of Senatorial Districts might make the result more doubtful in that Branch.
It will not do, to suffer the address of the four Whigs to go unanswered. My judgment is that the answer should be forthcoming without delay, and as you are so much dispersed, that it will be impossible for you to be together. I suggest for your consideration that you should prepare and publish over your individual signature a proper reply, such as you are so well able to prepare, & send copies of the paper containing it, to each of the Democratic Senators accompanied by a short note to each requesting him, through the newspaper nearest him, to signify his assent to it, which I have no doubt all would do. If you approve the views herein suggested, the newspapers, should without delay present them to the people. I am so well satisfied of their correctness, that I have written to the Argus, the Union & the Appeal\(^3\) suggesting them. If our friend Ford concurs he can print them through his paper.\(^4\) If in addition to what I have here suggested, half a dozen Democratic members of the House could be got together, & make an address to the four Whig Senators, proposing that all the members of the House as well as the Senate shall resign it would be an admirable movement.

I am here with my wife on a visit to her relations and to attend the marriage of Dr. Rucker's Eldest daughter\(^5\) this evening. I will leave for Columbia in the morning.

TO FRANKLIN H. ELMORE

My Dear Sir: Columbia Tennessee June 13th 1842

My absence from home has prevented an earlier acknowledgement of the receipt of your esteemed letter of the ultimo. I need scarcely assure you, that it gave me sincere pleasure to receive it. I remember with deep gratitude that disinterested act of personal friendship—voluntarily performed on your part—near the close of my service as Speaker of the House of Representatives, when I was violently assailed by a political faction, who could have had no higher aim than to affect me injuriously before the public, and especially in the then approaching political canvass in my own state, in which it was known I was to have a prominent part. I gladly avail myself of this first appropriate occasion which has offered to thank you for the part which you acted on that occasion. I rejoice with you at the increased and increasing strength of the Democratic party, and at the certain prospect that our principles are to be re-established in the Government, at the close of the present Presidential term. How could it have been otherwise. Our opponents succeeded to the possession of the Government by means most extraordinary, and without any common or avowed political principles, upon which they were united. Now that their obnoxious and ruinous policy has been developed, it does not surprise me to witness the overwhelming revolution in the public sentiment which is every where manifest. That the days of their power are numbered if we act with common prudence I think certain, absolutely certain. I concur with you in opinion that the greatest danger which we have to apprehend is, that we may become weak from our great strength, and the divisions which may unfortunately grow up in reference to the succession.
united upon the great & leading doctrines which divide the country, whilst men are but the instruments through whom our views of the public policy are to be carried out. I should feel that our principles were perfectly safe under the lead of either of the two distinguished gentlemen whom you name, and of whom you are of opinion will probably be selected as our candidate. For Mr. Calhoun I entertain the highest personal and political regards. I have been at all times on personal good terms with him, and though for a season, as you know, we did not act together politically, yet the subjects upon [which] we differed either involved no essential principle, or have passed off, and are not now before the country. That he possesses talents and extensive acquirements that fit him for any station is admitted by all, and it gives me pleasure to accord to him prominent public services in the recent and pending struggles of principles, with the common adversary. To Mr Van Buren too I accord talents of the first order, and have unabated confidence in his political firmness and integrity. As you say truly, he "undoubtedly fell a martyr to our principles" in the last contest, and this will naturally attract to him the sympathies of many political and personal friends. Between men of the same principles, either of whom are suited to the station, the question of availability will certainly become material in any selection which may be made. For myself living in retirement, as I have been for near a year past, I have not been consulted by any of the aspirants or their friends, and can only form opinions from what I see passing before the public, and the occasional speculations of correspondents. Mr Van Buren as you know has recently paid a visit to the Hermitage and spent some time in the state. You have doubtless observed the idle speculations of the Whig press in this quarter, in regard to what they chose to consider the object of his visit, and especially as connected with my name; and yet I solemnly assure you, that not a word either verbally or in writing, has ever up to this hour, passed between us on the subject. If he conversed with any other person, in the state, upon the subject I have no knowledge of it, and do not believe that he did. What the Whig press, therefore attributes to him, was undoubtedly no part of the object of his visit to this state. This I deemed it proper to mention, not that it was perhaps of the slightest importance to do so. My great desire is, that in the selection of the candidate who is to be the exponent of our principles there shall be union, harmony and concord. Whoever may be thus freely selected in a general convention in which the body of the people shall be truly represented, I will cheerfully support. The insight and influence which you ascribe to myself and my friends is probably greatly overrated, but whatever it may be, it will I trust be exerted in a manner to promote the success of our common principles. I thank you for the desire which you kindly express, to see me again performing a part in public life. How that may be, is in the future. I have all my life relied for the little political preferment which I have obtained, upon the people and the people alone, unless my station as Speaker of the House may be regarded an an exception. I have never desired or sought place or station from any other power that had it to bestow, and I am very sure I never shall. Should I ever come into public life again, it is most probable that I shall look for my advancement to the same source I have heretofore done.

You give me the first information I had (except from rumour) that Mr S. of Va., was to be insisted on in certain quarters, as the candidate for V.P. if Mr V. Buren was nominated for the first office. This may be so, and it looks probable; still, a few leading politicians cannot & should not control the real choice of the people, should that choice be manifested in their primary assemblies, through their delegates in convention or otherwise. The same remark may be made in regard to the selection of the candidate for the first office also. I have never, Mr Dear Sir, during my whole public life, and much as I have mingled with public men, had any thing to do with political combinations or arrangements, such as are often said to take place among political leaders, by which they seek to produce the desired results, and know nothing of the means in which such things are accomplished. I have no doubt however that a few leading men, do often give direction to the course of their party & perhaps secure their own elevation making that seem to be public opinion, which is really not so. This is all wrong and whenever it is attempted, the people should take the matter into their own hands.

I will add a word only in regard to this state, and her probable future course. Parties have been for some years very equally balanced. I have fought two hard battles, gained one and lost the other, by about equal majorities. I have no doubt however but that the Democracy are now in a handsome majority. The same causes, which have added to our strength elsewhere, have operated here. The Whigs will contest every inch of ground in our next contest; still I am confident we will carry the state, unless indeed we should by possibility be so unfortunate as to be weakened by an unacceptable or unpopular ticket. Our divisions are so equal that a small floating body of voters, such as are to be found in all the states, may control the result.

I shall be pleased, my Dear Sir, to hear from you again and as often as your leisure may permit, and shall take great pleasure in adding you to the number of my valued correspondents.

1. Reference is to Franklin H. Elmore to Polk, May 12, 1842.

2. Immediately prior to the Tennessee gubernatorial canvass of 1839, Elmore introduced a resolution in the U.S. House asking that the thanks of the house be extended to the outgoing Speaker, James K. Polk, "for the able, impartial, and dignified manner" in which he had presided. A few Whigs, led by Sergeant S. Prentiss of Mississippi, tried unsuccessfully to amend the resolution by striking the word "impartial."

3. Here Polk cancelled the following words: "This I think we cannot too soon guard against."

4. Both the Nashville Whig and the Nashville Republican Banner speculated that during his visit to Tennessee Van Buren discussed the vice-presidential question with Polk.

5. Here Polk cancelled the following words: "that I may be in the next administration—whatever may be its shape. I have to say what my intimate friends have long known, that at no period would I have consented to fill a cabinet or other subordinate executive station. I shall certainly never seek such a station and should the tender of it now be made which is not probable, I do not think it likely that my firm opinion and views will undergo any change."

6. Andrew Stevenson.

7. Here Polk cancelled the following words: "My desire in reference to the Vice Presidency as well as the Presidency is that there should be union, harmony, and concert in its selection, and that the people and not a few politicians should make the selection." Polk then interlined above the cancellation the paragraph's last sentence.

FROM SARAH C. POLK

Dear Husband

Columbia June the 24th 1842

I received your letter to day from Louisville and was pleased to hear from you. Leaving home in rather feeble health, I feel much solicitude to hear from you often. We have no news here. Your visit to the East begins to excite some interest. The Observer is out with some of its low wit, and the question is often asked where you are and for what? The Banner has not missed you yet, but is much troubled about your going to East Tennessee to eat a dinner. William has gone to Nashville. I will ask him to write you on his return. I have received a letter for you from Irwin at Savannah containing $50 in Alabama money the balance he says on your note. I suppose half is Knox's though I have not said any thing to him on the subject. If I must give him his portion you must so write me.

You did not write me, or tell me, how often for me to write would be agreeable to you. I am afraid of being troublesome in my communications as I have written twice this week. I hope to hear from you soon.

FROM ARCHIBALD YELL

Little Rock 25th June ’42

I wrote you a long letter some weeks since and have received no answer. As I have a little leisure from the drudgery of the office I have concluded to give you a short history of the doings on this side of the Watters.

We have unfortunately four Democratic Candidates for Congress, which I fear is to give us some trouble. However the moment the Whigs bring out a Candidate we will unite upon Judge Cross who is our most prominent Candidate, and they will unquestionably do so. In our strength we have become weak—too many great men for the few places.

The only question in relation to state policy is the Winding up of our banks. I have been Waring upon them ever since I have been in office; they are difficult to manage as all moneyed Corporations are but if I am not very much mistaken we shall be able to put them into Liquidation, beyond the possibility of a doubt. It will be to me a Victory & a blessing to the Country. Your old friends Col Jo W McKain [and] Genl. A. Whinny will both be in the next Legislature\(^3\) and [are] strong Anti Bank & Yell men—"Distructers as we are called." E H Fletcher\(^4\) is in Ark and one of my Locating Agents to select the 500,000 acres of land. So is Jo McKain another. So you see I am pretty clanish, & so they charge me. Your old friend McKisick\(^5\) is in Washington Co & a doing well. Just as Clever as ever. Old Billy Gilchrist\(^6\) is here driving a way at the Law & a little farm. I accationaly appoint him a special Judge to help him a long. He is a thorough Democrat & warmly your friend. Indeed all your old Tennessee acquaintances are as boistrous for you now as they were ten years ago. You are as well known in Ark as Genl Jackson. The Democrats are for you & the Whigs hate you!

We shall reelect Col Sevier\(^7\) to the Senate without trouble. What I shall or Can do two years hence is wholy Uncertain. I am not now inclined to run for reelection, tho that must depend upon Circumstances.

If I should be pleased with (Mrs. Polk's) Widdow\(^8\) & she with me, she may talk me back to old Tennessee! Would not that present a strange history in my life and who knows but it may hapen. I am now quite in Love with the Widdow & if I am not mistaken in her appearance for I knew her in 1827, she is large & fine looking & she must be amiable. Her Father was one of the best men that ever lived. Tell Mrs Polk she has set me half crazy, & now I can not abandon the Claim until the matter is farther investigated. But my Dear Sir I am now up to near 40 & she can not be more than 33 or 35 at fartherst. She will be detered too, from this Land of Bowie knives, I fear, and again how presumptuous in me to make a tour to Tennessee to see a Lady without some hope or expectations of success?

Say to Mrs P.—or you must give me a minute detail of her appearance, Inteligence, age & No. of Children & such other particulars as may interest me, &C. Old Widdows\(^10\) are the greatest fools on earth; I shall therefore close this subject. Let me hear from you & how things progress in Tennessee. Present me to Mrs. Polk . . . .

The other three candidates are not identified.
TO ANDREW JACKSON

My Dear Sir: Washington City July 1st 1842

I have seen Mr Kendall¹ and delivered to him, the package of papers with which you entrusted me, relating to the declaration of martial law &c. at New Orleans. He will without delay, make out an abstract of them for public use. Having ascertained that Mr Ingersoll of Phila.² had recently made a Report, and that a Bill is now pending in the House of Representatives in reference to the fine,³ I thought it proper to advise him, as also Dr. Gwynn⁴ and a few others of your friends of the existence of these papers, as furnishing important information, when the discussion comes up in the House. Mr Kendall's abstract will be furnished to them, to be used in debate. Dr. Gwynn is exceedingly indignant, as indeed are all your friends, at the outrageous statements of the Senator from Louisiana,⁵ and will avail themselves of the first possible opportunity to expose them to the public. They think they will be able to get up Mr Ingersoll's Bill in the House, and if they can reach it, they have but little doubt but that they will pass it through that body.

The President's Veto of the Little Tariff Bill ⁶ as it is called here, settles this question: that the Distribution shall cease, whenever the duties exceed 20 percent, being the maximum duty of the compromise act.⁷ It has produced great confusion and excitement among the Whigs, and an animated debate upon the subject is now going on in the House. The Democracy will generally sustain the veto.

I will leave here in two or three days for New York, & think after spending a short time there I will return home.

3. In 1815 Dominick Hall, U.S. district judge for Louisiana, fined Andrew Jackson one thousand dollars for contempt of court, the citation for which had been issued after Jackson arrested Hall for defiance of orders issued under authority of martial law. In 1842 Jackson's friends in the U.S. House backed Ingersoll's bill to refund the fine; Whig opposition blocked that measure and subsequent refund proposals until February of 1844.

5. Charles Magill Conrad, a former Jacksonian Democrat who became a Whig over the national bank issue and served in the U.S. Senate for Louisiana from April 14, 1842, to March 3, 1843, delivered a speech on May 18, 1842, opposing the Senate's version of the Jackson relief proposal and defending Hall's contempt citation. A subsequent Whig amendment to the bill stipulated that congressional remission of the fine would be made without reference to the equity or legality of its imposition. Opposed to any measure that did not exonerate Jackson, Democrats defeated the amended legislation.

7. Reference is to the Tariff Act of 1833.

My dear Husband Columbia July 1st 1842

Your letter from Cincinnatti I received a few days ago. But you do not write me how you are? If you have company, what kind of company &c. All that you say to me [is that] I am here or at such a place. I flatter myself to get a longer history of yourself soon. William promised me to write you all concerning the public affairs, and I suppose that he has done it. I would judge from the tone of the Whig papers that there will not be a general resignation of the Legislature. They intend to get out of it in some way. I have heard very little individual conversation since you left. Weddings, examinations &c. seem to occupy the whole attention of every one here at present. No politics, no party feeling but every thing quiet as far as I know.

Jane is married—large wedding.\(^4\) John Williams gave a large party, Mrs. Dr. Polk a small one and I gave them a dinner on yesterday.\(^5\) Had Mrs. Claiborne & Mrs. McNeal here.\(^6\) And your name sake Mr. Helms little son died yesterday suddenly.\(^7\) This is all the news we have or all that I know. FROM HENRY HORN\(^1\)

My Dear Sir Philadelphia July 6th 1842

In accordance with your request made to me on the evening of the 4th I made inquiry among many of my friends in relation to the subject matter of our conversation and regret to find that my anticipations have been realised.\(^2\)

As I remarked to you at that time many of our capitalists have been much crippled in their finances and others who may not eventually lose much have their funds at present completely locked up in dead investments from which they cannot withdraw them without sacrifices of a most ruinous character which they are unwilling to make.
Besides there is a strong indisposition on the part of those who may still have any surplus funds remaining on hand, against making investments in real estate out of our immediate vicinity, while they have so many and such frequent opportunities of making profitable investments here.

With much regret that I cannot be serviceable to you in the present emergency, and a fervent hope that you may be successful in N York.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNER

My dear Sir,

Washington July 17th 1842

I have been quite engaged since my return from New York, in feeling certain men and endeavouring to ascertain all I possibly could of their feelings and views in relation to our next candidates for the P. & V.P. of the united states, and among others I had a long talk with Allen of Ohio, and after persueing the course with him you suggested, and finding it had the effect you supposed but to a much greater degree than was expected, I introdused the subject of the V.P. with a remark, that a false step in this matter would have a Tendancy to throw him back. He declard to me that he had not nor would not in any way interfear in the selection of the candidate, that he would support the nominee be him whom he may, & that he hoped a good and judicious selection would be made. He was then sincere but I know not how long he may remain in this opinion. Madill and Wellar are the meare index of Allens wishes. 1 It is currently rumormd here and generally believed that Calhoon & Woodbury have formed a union, and Bentons friends are exerting themselves to procure his nomination. I have not heard who they want with him but am inclined to think it would be Wright. But this will be no go. He has plased himself behind Van Burin.

I have frequently been enquired off by Bentons friends to know what was the state of feeling between you and B. and have unaiformly answerd that the best of feelings existed at least on your part, and when pressed for the reason for such an enquery, I was informed, that there was a democratick paper in Mosouri urgeing your claimes that was constantly denounceing Benton. I have replied that I did not suppose that you even knew of it, much less to encourage it.

I have written to So. C. fully on this subject. Parmentur assures me that himself and Hallet will have all things arranged right in the Bay state. You will go into convention with moore states and by far a larger electoral vote than any other one man and if the people should be fairly represented as the others drop off you would be taken up as the second choice. But as this thing will be greatly under the controle of politicans, and will therefore be subject to the intreagues of designing men I cannot now conjecture the probable result. Judgeing however from presant appearances your chance is decidely the best. Calhoon is here and he entertains I think kind and friendly feelings for you and when he is out of the way I think if nothing happens to mar his feelings he will be for you, as in that event the candidate for the V.P. must come from the South.

I will Start your Books in the course of the ensuing week. Congress will not adjourn before the 15th of august if then.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,

Washington 20th July 1842

I enclose you another letter which I reed this evening just as I enclose it & of course without reading it. Turney & myself this evening walked in the public grounds & met D. H. Lewis, Gwin & Caldwell and had a good deal of conversation with them. The sum and substance was this. The north had a candidate for the last 8 years. We first elected Van. He could not sustain himself notwithstanding all our efforts. It is now due to the South that we should have a candidate who of course should be C. & Wright. Then (after one term) Wright to come up & Gov. P. from the South, & after that term then Gov. P. would be of the right age &c & besides all the usual arguments agt. Van were repeated. We spoke in the highest terms of Calhoun but I thought it due to frankness to say, that, notwithstanding my great respect for C. & the cheerfulness with which I would support him if selected by our party, that I thought the true policy of the South, whilst the abolition question & tariff were unsettled, that we should strengthen ourselves in that quarter which I thought could be more certainly affected by running Van &c & arguments of similar character.

Your position is a delicate one. I look upon Buch & King as unfriendly to your prospects. I suspect Benton & Allen also. Of course Calhoun & friends must go to the north. I hear some talk recently, that Bentons friends are making movements for him, notwithstanding his letter, acting upon the idea, no doubt, that if Van is to be shoved aside he ought to stand next. Turney & myself are compelled to be cautious for whatever we say is attributed to you. Gwin said this evening that Van could get Miss. if you was on his ticket & not without. I do not know whether he talks so to others. I do not like such movements as I hear going on & think but little will be gained by the movers. My dislike is so great that I avoid rather than seek to know any thing about them.

I think I shall leave here as soon as the Tariff, Army & Navy Bills are disposed of—pair off with some whig. I suppose we shall have a Bill soon to pay ourselves until the 15th of September. We are very well.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir: Columbia July 22nd 1842

I wrote you a very hasty line on yesterday. I am satisfied that the Whigs yet hope that some one or more of the Democratic members will fail to have their actual resignations at Nashville on the 1st of August, and in that event, I strongly suspect that they will avail themselves of that flimsy pretext to decline the proposition for a general resignation. They must if possible have no such apology left to them. I have written many letters since my return home on monday with a view if possible to have all the resignations in, at the time. I have more fears that Grisham of Fentress, Col. Wan of Meigs, Hembree of Roane, Walker of McMinn & Lane of Claiborne may not be heard from in time than any others. I have written to East Tennessee to have Lane certainly seen. And now my Dear Sir, let me urge upon yourself, Hill & Hopkins, to send special messengers if necessary, to see Grisham & Wan & if possible Walker of McMinn. The latter you know is a slow man in his movements & though he has announced his willingness to resign he has not I understand, sent in his actual resignation. If you have any possible opportunity to have him seen or written to in time, do so. If you write to some friend at Kingston, on the main stage line, he could send a messenger to see both Wan & Walker, neither of whom lives more than forty miles from that point. See Hopkins & Hill if convenient, show them this letter, & be certain at all events that Grisham & Wan at least are seen. I have written to Col. Hembree. I suggest that you do so also. I will be at Nashville on the 1st of August & hope to meet you there on that day. Let me hear from you by return mail.

JAMES K. POLK

P.S. Fearing that possibly you may not be at home, I address this jointly to yourself and Mr Ford, who resides [in] town, will get the letter on its [arrival], & who is requested to see H[ill and] Hopkins, if you are absent. J.K.P.

FROM ALEXANDER O. ANDERSON

My Dear Sir

At Home Near Knoxville

July 24th 1842

Mr Eastman & myself have mounted a Messenger upon one of my horses, & started him for the residence of Wan. I have written to Wan & if he has not already resigned, he will I have no doubt forthwith. If the Messenger returns with the news that Wan hesitates, I will go to his house immediately myself, & Lane will be attended to by Mr Reynolds. I believe my last letter you never answered, but as I have never had any ceremony with my old friends, at a crisis such as this, I wou'd not forego the opportunity of assuring you that we are fully alive to all that ought to be done. I shou'd have been glad to have heard from you upon the present occasion, and expect the pleasure of joining you at Rogersville.

I wou'd be glad to hear from you at what day you expect to leave Nashville, and at what day you will probably reach this foot of the mountain, & by what route.

I have been struggling this spring, or rather winter, spring & summer, to repair my shattered finances, which have suffered during the last ten years of political Struggles, but my eye has not been wholly withdrawn from the scenes around me, and I have looked with anxiety to the struggle you wou'd repeat as I believed, triumphantly, in Tennessee, in the next year, as an event in itself important, and as tending to higher results.
Be pleased to present me most respectfully to Mrs Polk.

P.S. I was in Athens a few days since & my Brother Pierce\(^6\) vowed he wou'd have a Polk meeting there while you were in East Tennessee, and I think it will be done.

My Dear Sir

Mecklenburg July 25, 1842

I do not know where this may reach you, but as I have kept you advised heretofore of the state of public opinion in the Carolinas in reference to the succession I extract from a letter rec'd. yesterday from a leading gentleman in S.C. a portion of his letter bearing on that subject.

"Van B. is out of the question. If he runs the Democratic party is broken up—he himself is broken down—he Clay elected President. Calhoun, Buchanan, Wright—any leading democrat in preference to him. Calhoun is strong & daily growing stronger notwithstanding the apathy of his friends & the absence of any thing like management in any quarter. I believe the people will elect him by a spontaneous unpremeditated effort of their own. Polk I think is determined to run for V.P. with some body—Calhoun in preference I think—but V.B. from circumstances probably is most likely. Vans vice however must & will come from Virginia & it will be so decided at the Convention. Polk may be held up till then but not longer. Who Calhoun friends will put up for Vice I do not know. N.Y. & Pa. seem to be considered the States to furnish him. The feeling of all is strongly with Polk & if he could be elected with Calhoun I think he would be preferred. If Calhoun is elected I am confident any place in the cabinet Polk might desire would be cheerfully accorded to him & at the expiration of 4 years which would be as long as Mr. C. would serve he might enter for the stakes if he chose & I am sure no man would be more acceptable to the whole party than himself. A short time however will make all the developments in prospect for the next 3 or 4 years. The politicians appear all afraid to make a move at present."

Thus for my correspondents letter. Make what you can from it. He is a shrewd observer, a true friend of yours, a deliberate calculator & is truly advised from all parts of the country.

If you visit Rogersville from the West we will of course see you at Knoxville on your way. If from the East, on your return home. I must see you, but I fear that I can scarcely get to the barbacue tho I will if I can. Knox will be well represented there. If a resignation takes place we will revolutionise E.T. Even Knox will make something by the Bankrupt law & other Whig measures.

I have had but 20 minutes to copy from my letter & the mail can be detained no longer.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

McMinnville, Tenn. July 28, 1842

My dear Sir,

Your letters from Columbia, of the 21st and 22nd instant, the first postmarked Spring Hill,1 have been before me for some days. I returned home from Winchester on Monday last, to the Chancery Court here, and met our friend Col. Waterhouse,2 who is now here, and learn that Mr. Wann had written and deposited his resignation3 in the post office in time for it to be now in Nashville. Of any action on the part of Mr. Walker, of McMinn, he has no knowledge, though he thinks it probable his resignation has been forwarded.

It has been impossible for me to go to Fentress. Mr. Hopkins could not go, but he wrote on monday last, a pressing letter to Grisham, and inclosed him the form of a letter of resignation. I had previously written him in June, pressing him to send it to Genl. Armstrong. I think he will send it.

I have written to Mr. Hembree. Lane I have scarcely any acquaintance with, but I hope the steps taken will insure his concurrence with his brethren.

It is most manifest from the tone of the last Nos. of the Banner and Whig4 of this week, that the Whigs will not stand up to the rack. They have now agreed, after the Banner had publicly declared itself in favor of resignation, to unite in defeating the measure upon every futile and ridiculous pretext they can devise. There will be no resignations, but the necessity of a unanimous tender of them on our part is not lessened. I therefore earnestly hope, that our friends will all send them in.

I have no time to write in detail. I would be most glad to see you, but my engagements at Court for two or three weeks to come, will prevent me from meeting you at Nashville on 1st. prox. I will write to you there, as I wish you to see a gentleman there for me on a matter you will know to be important.5

Somerville, Tennessee. July 30, 1842

Coe reports that he has written to James E. Saunders of Courtland, Alabama, urging open support for a Van Buren-Polk presidential ticket. Van Buren and Calhoun may now be considered the only candidates for the first office, and Calhoun will have to give way. The selection for the second office narrows down to Polk and Johnson. Polk’s friends, however, will have to break their silence soon, or Johnson will be saddled upon the party. Coe will write a similar letter to Judge Howry of Oxford, Mississippi, and may risk such a letter to Claiborne of the Natchez Mississippi Free Trader. Also, Coe fears that the continued pretensions of Benton, who wants Wright for his “second in command,” may blow up the party. If there is a general resignation of the Tennessee legislature,¹ Democrats in the Western District will be prepared; Polk may depend upon a considerable gain in the District.

Dear Sir:

I called at your house to see you, on the matter of business¹ about which we conversed a few weeks ago, but did not find you at home. I have requested my friend Genl. Armstrong to see you on the subject, and shall be greatly obliged if you can make the arrangement desired, and which Gen. A. will explain to you.

FROM DANIEL GRAHAM

Dear Sir

Nashville, Tenn. 11 Augt 1842

This is the immortal 'leventh\(^1\) here, and the day opened finely. The promise was, that you would have a fair field at Rogersville, but at 20 to three Oclock a heavy cloud came from the South and has been deluging us for an hour now at 4. It has probably been a showering day to some distance and we feel that the good democrats of East Tennesse have had a damper.

No positive developments of Whig news since you left, but the inferences are strong that the leaders here are uncertain as to the final action of the members, and the papers are holding themselves open to proclaim loudly for either event as it may turn up.\(^2\) A solemn conclave was held yesterday at Ephs.\(^3\) Bell was there. Bob\(^4\) was also in from Franklin, and the Demos have guessed that they are concocting two proclamations to be used as occasion might require. A confident opinion also prevails that Bell is likely to succeed in impressing upon Foster\(^5\) that he is the only man who can save the party for Governor and that he must be ready to start against you in time to open the campaign with the candidates for special election, if there should be a resignation. I cannot trace this opinion to any official source, and it may be that it has originated merely in the reasonableness of the conjecture. It would be feasible enough that Bell should operate on Foster through Clay & others of the Bell Whigs, and that Clay might promise Foster, that if he would let Bell go to Senate and save, or not save, the State by running for Gov. that Clay would give him a mission, or any thing else that might suit when Clay got to be President. It is more and more manifest that they are keeping Jones for a "hand plant," to be used or not as they may desire. If they can make any more eligible arrangement, they are maintaining him in so weak a manner now, that they can at any time shake him off without the loss of a dozen adherents; but if they can do no better, they are so training him, that they may present him fairly for the party strength, at any time.

The Banks sustain themselves so well and there is so little call for specie that Caleb\(^6\) & the ultra Clay bank men are very uneasy. Caleb spends all his ingenuity in making daily & imaginary changes in the rates of all the paper of the Banks & their branches. He was evidently elated with the hope that he could produce such confusion in the rates of the State Circulation that he would disgust the public & turn their expectations to Clay & his remedy, but in that he has been a good deal defeated. The paper calling the Clay meeting for Saturday next\(^7\) has been pressed with the zeal of desperation on the old legion, and in most cases they have succeeded, but some stood out. All who put their names down, are consid­ered as in "for during the war." Some will doubtless be secured in that way who might otherwise have dropt out. Coleman, the Butcher banker, refused to sign, and is out for Mayor against Stout the incumbent, who is the Whig proper and will probably on that account be called to the chair at the Whig meeting of Saturday. Coleman has more personal strength than Clay or Stout, and will most probably be supported by the entire democratic strength.

Claiborne is looking for his dismissal by every mail. Caruthers has written that Shepherd has been nominated to the Senate & will be confirmed.

Carroll has received an invitation to the Athens dinner and thinks he will go. Armstrong finally declined going to Rogersville. It was best not to leave here, and I so thought but gave no solemn adjudication that way.

Ben Motley has resigned Senator from Wilson. Jones' brother-in-law Munford will probably be elected in his place.

The great Nashville Camp meeting has been on hand all last week. Bell attended closely, staid there one night with Harry Hill and was in the altar looking devoutly. Some one said he made fifty votes.

Daniel Donelson will be elected easily in place of Barry. Some fellow named Daughtry is running against him. The County trustee of Rutherford was here today & says that the democrats will carry that County if the Whigs resign. You passed through there however & know what is calculated on. Humphreys has drawn a Bill agt. the Hiwassee Road. Atty Allen has sued Caleb & the other Brokers.

Foster, represented Williamson County in the Tennessee House for three terms between 1829 and 1841 and in the Senate for one term, 1841–43, during which service he presided as Speaker; he practiced law in Franklin and in Nashville.

5. Ephraim H. Foster.

"The call has already been numerously signed, and every hour swells the list with the names of those who are determined to nail their colors to the mast."

8. Thomas B. Coleman, a merchant, served as mayor of Nashville, 1842–43; he was the son of Joseph Coleman, the first mayor of Nashville.

Also a Democrat and lawyer from Sumner County, Barry served two and a half terms in the Tennessee House, 1839–42 and 1851–53; he resigned in 1842 and ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1849 and 1853.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir

McMinnville, August 11, 1842

Mr. Hopkins left Smithville for Fentress the same evening our messenger found him (Friday) and after obtaining Mr. Grisham's resignation in proper form, brought it to Sparta and enclosed it to Gen. Armstrong in time for it to have reached Nashville on yesterday (Wednesday) at "High Meridian." Grisham said he had sent his resignation by mail the day before Mr. H. found him—or, at least, had put it in the hands of a friend to carry to Jamestown to be mail'd. It is now no matter whether this is true or not. Mr. Walker's resignation has also gone to Nashville in duplicate, and is undoubtedly there. ¹ So you see, as far as these cases are concerned, we are safe. I have seen your letter to Ford,² and am aware that Mr. Hembree's resignation is also in the proper place.

You will see that the last Banner is silent, editorially, on the subject of resignations, but gives place to Burchett Douglass' long and angry reply to Turney's alternative proposition.³ Douglass pretends not to know any thing about what Marable will do. This is prima facie, a lie. D's reply was either written in Nashville or by directions from Nashville by McMahon at Memphis.⁴ The whigs are bent, or I mistake the sign, on trying to escape the general proposition by making a false issue with Sam Turney on his very unwise proposal to Douglass and Marable. I have written to him, since I saw the Banner, to remain silent, or reply to Douglass in a short pointed card, holding him and his party to a final decision on the general proposition, which is a state question between the two great parties, and to deny his right to accept or reject the individual proposition made to himself and Marable until the whigs as a party have finally acted on the proposal for a general resignation. This is the previous question to be settled according to Turney's letter. I hope Turney will do what is proper. The whigs would gladly get him into a newspaper war, in order that they may traduce and destroy him, and wound the democratic party through him.

The Chancery Court at Winchester interferes with my intended trip to Nashville. I have however sent a power of attorney, or the same thing in effect, to Gen. Armstrong, Mr. Kezer⁵ or W. H. Polk, to put my name to a note notifying Jennings⁶ &c. that the resignations are in hand. I did this, fearing Hardwick might not be present, or any other democratic Senator.

You will see that Ford takes the true and only proper and safe ground as I conceive in relation to the Turney and Douglass question. We are glad to see that you will pass through Hiwassee and Ocoe before you return home. The foolish whigs here believe that we sent old Argo⁷ over the mountain to make the appointment for you, and say it has been very quickly arranged.

Please present me respectfully to Gen. Anderson and Mr. Eastman.

3. In a public letter to John W. Ford of July 5, 1842, Samuel Turney, Democratic Speaker of the Senate, proposed his own resignation and that of House Speaker Burchett Douglass and one other Whig representative, Henry H. Marable of Humphreys County. By that stratagem "the fate of the State" could be decided "by single combat." See the Nashville Union, July 15, 1842. Douglass answered with a public letter to the Memphis Enquirer, subsequently printed in the Nashville Republican Banner of August 8, 1842. Marable, a physician and farmer, won election to a single term in the Tennessee House in 1841 and returned to that body for one session in 1865.

5. Timothy Kezer, a Nashville merchant and hatmaker, was Laughlin's son-in-law.

6. Thomas Reid Jennings, a Nashville physician and member of the medical department of the University of Nashville, served as a Whig member of the Tennessee Senate from 1839 until 1845.

7. W. H. Argo, a minor Democratic political operative in McMinnville, was related to Laughlin through the marriage of Thomas P. Argo to Mary Laughlin Argo, both of McMinnville. The kinship tie between W. H. Argo and Thomas P. Argo has not been identified.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Friday morning

My dear SirWashington Augt. 19 [1842]

We shall leave here tomorrow or next day & I write you a line to give you a brief sketch of the state of things here. And brief it must be as we are packing up preparatory to our movement. The Whigs are divided without the possibility of reunion—the tariff men proper, wishing tariff without distribution about 75 or 80; the distribution men the balance of the Whigs. The Democrats cannot go with the high tariff men & they will accept nothing that we can offer. Nor can they go with the distributionists, nor they with us, so that nothing can be done—a triangular warfare & not a great difference in the numbers of either. The votes you will see in the morning papers & can easily trace those who go for Clay—the White Charlies & those who go for a tariff. The vote of yesterday is a death blow to Clay & demonstrates that nothing can or will be done this session & we shall adjourn as soon as the Senate will allow us. They now have up the British treaty. Rumor says Benton, Buckhanon & Calhoun take ground agt it. Yet it is believed it will be ratified. The final vote will probably take tomorrow. We shall leave the Captain with 20 pCent Tariff & distribution & $30,000,000 in debt. We have passed nothing of consequence but private claims, some (Deane heirs) outstanding for 60 years—others grossly fraudulent which have been over & over rejected. They must have something to brag of, & pass every thing. Bell's course as Sec. in paying Ross, Clinch & others will disgrace him forever unless he is grossly misrepresented. Both are now before Committees and reports expected.

Among our friends the difficulties are equally as great if not worse. Calhoun & friends are pressing on with great zeal & in my opinion will never yield to any Convention or any thing else. I think the split inevitable. It is known that Wright cannot be seduced. Woodbury seems standing still watching the signs. The better opinion is that he will not yield. Clifford is to be made their speaker and Maine secured. Yet he is still watching the signs. I think their prospects will all fail. Yet they seem bright here and great confidence is felt. Mr Buckhanon will yield to the embrace, hoping no doubt [for] the succession, unless better prospects are hereafter holden out for the present term. Benton is of course firm for Van & I fear for Col RMJ, tho I can learn nothing distinct, except an occasional expression slipping out in my presence, that he will be satisfied with the Vice presidency. You will understand that I have studiously avoided seeking or receiving communications in relation to these matters further than to let my position be distinctly known & which forbids the approval of those who are maneuvering in such matters & of course the little I learn is mere accidental.

You will see Benton & Calhoun have a issue in the Tariff—Calhoun for a horizontal tariff, Benton for discrimination (I have not read his speech) & Calhouns friends of course say for Tariff. Their feelings toward each other are as bitter as those of Clay & Webster. B. talks openly. C. never mentions the former. All N.C. is for C—except Genl McK—all Al. & Mississippi & a great part of V. New H & Maine are neutral & go for the nominee. We need make no calculation of Penn. if the Tariff is kept open which Clay and his friends determine shall be the case and in that event N.Y. shivers in the wind. Ohio is safe for us and I think Indiana & Illinois. I yet am of opinion that RMJ will not yield & that he will be taken up by the whigs. His friends in Ky studiously avoid saying he is agt a U.S. Bank. All the Dem. North will be for a Ten. Vice unless policy induces them to avoid competition by selecting another & I have no doubt that effort will be made. Bell is not regarded by the friends of Clay here as a reliable man.

But I must go to the labors of the day—and try & be ready for my departure tomorrow.

2. “Charley” is a slang expression meaning “watchman.” The “White Char­lies” reference is to Speaker John White's followers. White, a lawyer, served in the Kentucky House in 1832 and as a Whig in the U.S. House from 1835 until 1845, during which period he was elected Speaker of the House for the Twenty­seventh Congress.
3. On August 18 the House rejected a Ways and Means Committee resolution proposing that the vetoed tariff bill be modified in such manner as to obviate Tyler's opposition to its 27th section, which provided for the repeal of restrictions on the distribution of land revenues.

8. John Bell, John Ross, and Duncan Lamont Clinch. Shortly before his res­ignation from the Cabinet on September 11, 1841, Secretary of War Bell autho­rized payment of over $500,000 in claims pressed by Chief Ross in behalf of fellow Cherokee tribesmen. In April of 1841 Bell settled the claim of Duncan Lamont Clinch for corn and sugar cane destroyed on his Florida plantation in 1836 by U.S. troops; Bell allowed nearly $26,000. FROM J. GEORGE HARRIS

My Dear Sir, Nashville Aug 24, 1842

I am at a little loss how to temper my course on the subject of the Presidency and Vice Presidency. You know Clay is urged openly by his leading friends; and Dick Johnson’s friends are indecently pressing his claims. Meantime we are doing nothing. The conflicting aspirations at Washington I need not speak of. The ultimate action of our party in favor of N.Y. and Tenn. I cannot doubt. But when is it time for us to act in our Tennessee papers, and how far ought we to go in the onset are considerations which should not be disposed of with too much haste. A little modesty on our part at this time I have thought was becoming at least; and accordingly I have adopted your advice in my editorial conduct, “holding the ship close to the wind” of democratic principles, filling her sails with the breezes of the democratic triumphs, and said little or nothing with reference to her officers for the next voyage. This was Van Buren’s advice in his letter to Missouri,1 quoted and approved by us, and advised as a worthy saying by you in our conversations.

I have a letter from Greene, “the democracy of New England” as he has been called,2 and though he speaks less definitively touching the future than he might have done, still he says “V.B. & P are our choice and we shall press their claims with all prudence.” But the best intelligence that I have from the northward, is a letter from Mr. Croswell of the Albany Argus.3 After two or three pages on private and personal affairs he says: “Politically the aspects are favorable. All the indications throughout the Union point to the democratic ascendency, and as we think to certain restoration. While the Republicans of this State and of this section of the Union prefer (as I cannot doubt) to recall Mr. Van Buren and to do justice to an administration and to public views which have proved to be founded on wisdom and patriotism; and which the people are daily giving signal manifestations of their approval of, they are prepared to support with the utmost cordiality any democrat who shall be the choice of the National Convention.”

So much for Mr. Croswell’s sentiments on the subject of the Presidency. But, he continues:
“So also (says he) respecting the Vice Presidency. The preferences of this State and of this region are with great unanimity for Gov. Polk. No man stands higher or stronger in the confidence of the Democracy and no one would call out their suffrages in his support with greater alacrity than he. But these are matters (he adds) which we, as well as our friends in Tennessee desire to treat with all delicacy; and to leave to the unbiassed decision of a National Convention, the assembled delegates of the whole party.”

There is delicacy at this embryo stage of the matter, so far as Croswell and myself on the one hand and yourself and Van Buren on the other are concerned. While the Argus is regarded abroad as enjoying the full and entire confidence of Mr. Van Buren, the Union is looked upon as being the guardian of your particular interests, the repository of your confidence. And while both of us may by private conference effect much and all that is necessary in moving the democratic press, our editorials though decided should in my judgment be carefully tempered and not importunate. Croswell further says—all in connexion:

“Combinations, and possibly intrigues may be started to prevent what now seems to be the natural, if not the inevitable tendency of things; but if those should be I have little belief or fear that they will seriously obstruct the course of the popular feeling.”

I give Croswell's letter the weight that would be due to one from Van Buren's own hand. Under all the circumstances it is oracular. Van Buren has few confidants, but he has prudent and effective ones from whom he reserves nothing. There is more in his late still-hunts throughout the Union than any of us have dreamed of. He has been badly and unfairly beaten and his own personal pride, to say nothing of his devotion to his principles, is actively at work. I am more than ever convinced that he will be the nominee of the Convention; and in my reply (privately) to Croswell I have endeavored to convince his understanding that we are willing to sink or swim with him, looking of course to, or rather hinting at, the guid pro quo. I have referred him to that long letter which I wrote him on the subject of the Vice Presidency two-and-a-half years ago (in your office) and sent him a copy of the old Voice of the Southwest; have informed him that you jeopardized and as I believe lost your reelection because you made such bold and vigorous efforts in Van Buren's election by barbecue speeches &c.; have told him that our party in this State comprise that portion of the Tennesseans who do not change from slight and trivial causes—tho' that ordeal we have passed unscathed. I think I know your sentiments well enough to protect your interest in that quarter as you would have me—though I must at our next interview confer with you more freely upon some points of the future. With reference to the N.Y. State election Croswell says: "Our contest in this State will be sharp and active—more so, perhaps, than some of our friends now imagine—but I cannot doubt that the democratic party will fully sustain itself. We shall be able to judge more fully at the extra session next month." 6

But to return to you: a week or two ago I received a long letter from Mr. Coe, of Fayette. It was in reply to one I had previously written him in reply to a previous one. In short: some five months ago & after a conversation with you I took the ground very modestly and by way of approving the remarks of other papers, that the true policy of the democratic party was to adhere to advocate and defend their cherished principles, and not volunteer their various preferences for the succession so long before-hand; advising patience until the National Convention. A week or two afterwards I received a letter from Mr. Coe, in terms somewhat unexpected, complaining of my course in that behoof. I replied very kindly that I had acted in accordance with my own best judgment, gave my reasons, and stated that I had not acted contrary to the counsel of those who he himself is in favor as well as myself of elevating to the two highest offices in the government. After three months he wrote me in reply, which I found in the post-office on my return from E. Tenn, reiterating that I had "done us much damage" by the article before adverted to, advising me to "dry your blankets" 7 and stating that a vigorous move was forthwith contemplated upon the chess-board. I paid no attention to the chafing parts of his letter but replied kindly, although I confess that I felt deeply injured at being accused of a lack of zeal in your bellaivan, and especially by him whom I have not only uniformly defended in my paper but personally quarrelled with deadly weapons upon the square in defence of his reputation. It is pretty tough—but Mr. Coe is the best architect of his own future, I suppose.

In the next Union I shall publish the article that appears in the Alabama papers; with such remarks as prudence may dictate. 9 I would like to see you very much or to hear from you at length.

I have written this letter at night while awaiting at the bed-side of my sick sister-in-law; 10 and owing to the quiet of the hour I have made it more prolix than I intended.

FROM WILLIAM M. GWIN

My dear Sir Washington City Augt. 27th 42

We have had an Extraordinary scene enacted here today in the passage of the Tariff bill through the Senate. The vote was 24 to 23, Messrs Wright, Buchanan, Sturgeon & Williams of Maine voting for it.¹ It must be fatal to Wright & Buchanan's future position in the Democratic party, nine tenths of whom are anti protective as to a tariff. This is the most odious protective tariff ever passed. This move on the political chess board must Seriously affect Mr. Van Buren. All of his confidential friends in Congress have gone for this tariff—the Representative from his district, McLellan, his relative Van Buren & his chief counsellor Wright. 2
The inevitable result must be in my opinion to make Mr. Calhoun the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. I acknowledge that I am anxious for it as matters now stand & most anxious for you to take the same position. It must put you next to him in the South & in his place when he leaves the political stage. If you do not move now & take this position others must. The force of events will so order it. With the South united upon you as the leader next to Mr. Calhoun, nothing can prevent your elevation to the highest station known in our country. Do write me to Vicksburg fully & openly on this subject.

Dear Sir,

I wrote you a line last night & under the excitement of the moment produced by the vote on the Tariff in the Senate, in which I said some things of our friends rather harsher perhaps than is prudent and therefore re-write this morning tho in but little better mood than last night. 1
But before I enter in that, I must explain some papers which accompanies this letter in another envelope. 2 Sec. B. allowed Jno. Ross 587,000 on a claim disallowed by Crawford, Poinsett & Van Buren—revised & reversed their decision contrary to all usage & law. 3 Many harsh things are said here, as to the Sec’s integrity. The papers on a call made by me were referred to the Com. of Ind Aff & Harris reported in part on yesterday 4 & the papers were ordered to be printed. I mention this to direct your attention to it when published. Another, Genl. Clinch's account has been disallowed for 25,000. The decision was reversed & the money paid & I enclose you the opinion of Bell & Poinsett. I enclose you this because the damages alledged & paid for were produced by the Conduct of the Ten Volunteers. If all the allegations were true the decision of B. is an outrage upon common sense & honesty too. But as they are wholly untrue as you will see from Poinsetts opinion & as will be proved, as W.B.C. tells me, by every volunteer, he may & ought to be made to feel their indignation. I had first thought of sending them to Genl. Armstrong but thought it more prudent to submit them to your examination & let you give directions if they ought to be used & how. In the case of Ross, Mathew St Clair Clarke was Ross' lawyer (in whose house the Sec. lived). He brought it up & argued it & Bell gave the very learned opinion which I enclose. Ross & Clarke squabbled about the fee as rumor says, & the Sec. wrote Ross he ought to pay the lawyer (some say) 20 or 30,000 & others 50,000, as he had saved such a sum. This is rumor. I suppose the printed papers will make some startling disclosures, as even the Whig Cooper of Penn. is shocked at the startling facts disclosed. The examination will be resumed next winter. The Report is a part.

We have had a sort of shuffling in politics which has made a very deep impression on my mind & I must add a very unfavorable one as to many of our leaders. I informed you of the irreconcilable squabble between the Tariff Whigs & the distribution Whigs. It was kept up every night in caucus until all parties were satisfied that no reconciliation would ever take place & we voted for adjournment on the 22nd (the Democrats & distribution Whigs) & sent it to the Senate. This evidenced discord irreconcilable among them. The distribution Whigs of the Senate were for uniting with the Democrats & adjourning—and we should have adjourned on that day without a Tariff without any Whig reconciliation & the Whig ranks forever broke up but alas for poor human nature. The Whig squabble created hopes among our leaders of using the Tariff Whigs in the presidential election for their own benefit & at the expense of other democrats. The Tariff Whigs were in truth in market, put up to the highest bidder. Ingersol's amendment, drawn up by Buckhanon, who is thought by many to represent J.C.C. proposed to take the Tariff of 1 Jany 1840 (6/10), Cash duties & home valuation—a pretty fair bid equal at least to the Tariff of 1832. It seemed for a while that it would take but when it came to be voted on, it was too low for Tariff men & too high for Anti tariff but many of our Van B friends would not be outbid and was disposed to give no advantages to the other branch of democrats. It was even hinted that J.C.C. would vote for it as a temporary measure. It was soon given out that Wright would go for it too and such things were said too of Benton. A project was then started in the same quarter to begin at the Tariff of 1840 & let it gradually come off by tenths until 1845 thus to shove it out of the presidential election. This proposition was so little favored as never to have been presented to the House. This state of things seemed likely to secure the Tariff Whigs to others. Then the great champion Clay & his friends set to work & bid up at last the big Tariff without distribution upon condition that a separate distribution Bill should be sent to the Capt for another veto. This was of course accepted, having that confidence in each other which exists among pickpockets, when their union is necessary for their own preservation or being identical in principle, having no other than to secure money on one side & political promotion on the other. But all could not be lost in that way. Van's friends would not be outbid so the N.Y. Dems. in the House (many of them) & Wright in the Senate gave way & agreed to the same bid, whilst Buckhanon & Sturgeon & [e]uel Williams united. I have no doubt the Whigs were detailed in both Houses, so as just to make enough to pass the Bill in both Houses, getting as many of Van's friends with them as possible—and we were then beaten 2 votes in the House and one in the Senate. The Bill was engrossed in the Senate yesterday by 24 to 23. Buckhanon, Sturgeon, Wright & Williams among the yeas—and Archer, Berrien, Clayton, Graham, Henderson, Mangum, Merrick, Preston, Rives among the nays. It will come to us tomorrow & of course be a law. They could have had us easily 8 or 10 majority in either House if desirable. We have sent the Senate the Bill for repealing the proviso to the distribution Bill of the call session, which will probably pass tomorrow & we shall adjourn on Wednesday, leaving the Capt. to pocket the distribution if he chooses. What effect this state of things may hereafter have is still very uncertain. Van's friends are much hurt & many will probably desert to Calhoun. Clays friends in the north are not less hurt & many may go to Van. I fear it will result in the formation of a Northern & Southern party. Bucks position seems not clearly understood. Some consider him as acting for Van, others for J.C.C. and I suspect [he] is in truth playing a double game, ready to go with that side which will help him most. Many of Van's friends suspect Woodbury of being willing to be the Vice for J.C.C. tho I do not. Some suppose that Buck will finally yield to that with the reversionary prospects. If Clay is ruled off which I think by no means improbable or strange as you may think it I shall not be surprised to find this zealous friend rallying in support of Van. J.C.C. acquires favor with the politicians & may be the formidable opponent of Van. One thing you may consider certain—the hostility between their friends is irreconcilable & the friends of J.C.C. will not yield to a convention. Our friends are much chagrined. I fear A.V.B. is gone from Van. Turney is dissatisfied with every body & I am not much better tho I am not disposed to think that Van gives countenance to such movements & to hold him responsible for them. I cannot think he will yield to the protective policy. But little has been said of late as to the Vice Presidency further than is connected with the elevation of J.C.C. Van's friends are for abiding by the convention & having one fairly selected. When we were informed in the House of Wrights speech, I never witnessed so many doleful countenances, among the friends of J.C.C., who could not conceal their delight at the supposed advantage which it gave him over Van. One says well what shall we do, C.? Another says, this is horrible! Another, we are betrayed! Another, I suspected as much from his vote in 1828! I could see that many thought I would of course give up Van & were anxious to know. I only replied to them, that I believed I should join the Whigs. They paid higher than any body else. I may say to you that I have been deeply mortified and am now, particularly at the course of Wright—which will be an additional reason for having nothing further to do with politics. You need expect nothing except upon the ground of securing the vote of Ten. Every thing of the sort is a mere calculation of interest. I shall leave here tuesday or wednesday. My health is very good.

FROM J. GEORGE HARRIS

My Dear Sir:

Nashville, Aug 30, 1842

Yours, in confidence, of the 26th is at hand. I have been necessarily absent so much of late and my attention at my post is so much needed at this time that it is next to impossible for me to visit you this week as invited through your letter. I have the heartfelt gratification of saying that I have received a good letter from our mutual friend in the West. Dist., and good relations are fully restored.

You will have seen how I have treated the subject matter under consideration. It is well at this juncture to conciliate So: Caro: if possible, by some private demonstration from your hand to a friend at Washington. Can you say, so that it may reach the metaphysician's ear that "Tennessee and So: Caro: have run together one successful race, and may run another," or something like it. Members of Congress are too busy. I could not refrain from rapping their knuckles with the club of the Detroit Democrat. How do you like our present position?

No further demonstrations of the intentions of the Whigs on the subject of resignation are apparent. I shall watch the movements day after tomorrow, and if they do not come up to the mark shall file a closer upon them.

Why is it that Sherrell resigned? Was it not produced by the Fosterians? Did they not persuade him or provoke him to it? It is at least presumable for he bolted on some of their test-questions at the last session. Gov. Jones has appointed the 22d Sept as the day on which his vacancy is to be filled.\textsuperscript{8} You know Jones had only about 310 maj. in Bledsoe, and cannot some governing influence be exerted there by our friends? I have tried to persuade Col Foot\textsuperscript{9} to go there on “a trip to the mountain” springs but I fear I shall not succeed. He says if he could go he would not go in vain. It is very important. Any effort that is made should be made quickly and without much noise.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNLEY

Dear Sir Louisville Ky. Sept. 4th 1842

I arrived here last evening on my way home in company with Mr. Watirson,\textsuperscript{1} and we are detained for want of a stage, none leaving on Sundays. Bad luck this for home sick Devils.

You have doubtless been advised of the unfortunate division of our friends in congress on the passage of the last Tariff bill.\textsuperscript{2} It was unfortunate truly, but I hope and believe it will finally result in no mischievous consequences to our party, or to the country. Calhoun and his friends are making it the occasion of denouncing Van Burin and his friends as high tariff men, in order to thrust \textit{him} Calhoun at the head of the party. The truth of this matter is that while the Clay wing of the whig party were opposing the tariff without distribution and thereby producing a division between the distribution and tariff men which threatened to prove fatal to the whig party, Calhoon and his friends with a view no doubt of securing the support of the Northerner Federalist were making propositions of compromise of a tariff embracing all the objectionable principles in the bill which are to [be] found in the bill that finally passed. Wright discovered this movement of Calhoon and resolved not to be outbid. So he went to work, in the same way and committed himself and his friends in the house for the bill. The Clay men however seeing what would inevitably be the result of their course that it would effectually destroy Clay, finally gave their support to the measure. As soon as this was done and the whig party thereby reunited, Calhoon returns to his free trade doctring and raises the hugh and cry against Van, Wright &c. and are now labouring to rise upon their downfal, when in fact he is guilty of the same offence, except he dispaid moore judgement in his retreat from a measure which he would doubtless have supported but for the reunion of the whigs. Wrights public reasons for supporting the bill are that it is intended as a temporary measure, that it defeats distribution, and that something was indespencierble for the government, and that this was the only thing he could get. These are pauisible though not substantal reasons. Now the next congress will meet before a nomination will be made, and the Van Burin men with a view to reinstate him and themselves in the south and thereby to secure his nomination & election will go far to modify the tariff and make it accepterble to us. Benton has great feelings on this subject, and I think he is now looking to you as the most available man to counteract the effects of the manuvers of C.s friends in the south. They are resorting to all sorts of means to accomplish their object. While Gwinn is writeing to you that you are to be run for the Presidency, Lewis and the other Calhoon trainors are writeing letters to every other section that Calhoon is the only man of our party that can be elected as these other men are now prostrated by their course, and that this has done moore for Calhoon than his friends could have done in years. Now sir I do not think that Gwinn is incincear to you, but I do think he is deceived by these men, for I do know they are looking alone to C's interest. Vans friends every where will now take a stronger stand for you than they otherwise would have done. I think our friends from Tennessee acted with great prudence and discretion on critical occasion so as to preserve the friendship and good feelings of both Calhoons and Van's friends.

FROM JAMES M. HOWRY

Oxford, Mississippi. September 9, 1842

Howry reports on Democratic presidential politics in Mississippi. Since last May he has favored pressing Polk's vice-presidential claims publicly, but cannot move the party, as Calhoun's presidential candidacy necessitates a "Northern man" to fill out the ticket. At present Calhoun controls the most active portion of the state's Democrats and also the newspapers in Northern Mississippi. Howry is anxious to take action in Polk's behalf before the state's congressional delegation returns home because "they can & will throw cold water" on any movement that would hurt Calhoun's prospects. Thompson¹ has distributed Calhoun letters and speeches throughout the state. Gwin is friendly, but may oppose Polk's nomination if Calhoun should choose either Wright or Woodbury to form a ticket.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Nashville, Sept. 9, 1842

You will have seen by the course of the whigs for a month past, as indicated by their papers and conduct, and finally, by the Governor's proclamation,¹ that there is to be no resignations. After Douglass replied to Turney, I feared they intended to make some movement in regard to Turney's challenge to Douglass and Marable, and instantly, while you were in East Tennessee, sent to Turney and dictated the substance of a short answer to Douglass,² which he adopted except in the addition of some foolish words about sacrifices &c. His answer held and still holds Douglass and Marable in the wrong.

Our course will, I think, now be plain, not to give an inch of our former ground in regard to Senators and districts. Turney, however, and another Senator³ who, perhaps, ought to remain nameless, will require vigilant watching. The whigs evidently hope for something, and there are but two quarters from which they can possibly obtain help. If they expect it from Turney it will be because he has been very badly used in his connexion with the bank at Sparta, and it must spring from revenge. Some men would sacrifice their party for the sake of individual revenge; and there are others who would do it to promote their personal political purposes—such as having a way opened to a seat in Congress. I hope we have none such in the ranks of the "immortal 13." In this my wishes are so strong that I am willing to hope against hope. Let the strongest appliances by instruction and admonition, from the proper quarters, be applied to any case nearest your home, and I will see that Hop and every other force shall be applied in my country to our Speaker.
September 9, 1842

You will have seen some small speculations, by way of preliminaries and feelers in Ford's paper on the Presidency and Vice Presidency in prospect. I have deemed it best to speak out, but in terms of conciliation and submission to a Convention. Something of the same kind shall be kept up both before and after the meeting of the legislature—unless it shall prove to be improper or premature.

I came here on last Thursday night and go home tomorrow. I have seen no person out of Mr. Kezer's family and house. I have not gone to town although I have some pressing private business. I have been in the midst of deep sorrow and affliction. On Sunday last, I buried my infant daughter, aged three years, who departed this life the night before. My head is sick and my whole heart faint within me. Every day some fond tie is being broken which bound me to life and its objects. It is true I have six surviving children, but this last stroke, depriving me of the last pledge of wedded affection, has affected me deeply—so deeply, that I fear I shall never know comfort or happiness more. Were it not for my helpless orphan boys, I should wholly withdraw to solitude, and renounce every worldly pursuit.

Let me hear from you at your leisure . . . .

FROM JONATHAN P. HARDWICKE

D Sir, Charlotte Sept 11th 1842

It is now known that the Legislature will soon be in session again. We may suppose we will be called to elect Senators and lay off the State into Congressional, Senatorial and Representative Districts. How far we may succeed none can now tell. For myself I think it very doubtful whether we can do either, and I would respectfully ask you in the event of a failure what will be the effect. By what Law or clause in the Constitution can members be elected to the Legislature here after, or the members to the Congress of the U. States. I would also be pleased to know your opinion on the late law of Congress requiring the States to vote here after by Districts alone. I have very much questioned the act upon Constitutional grounds. If I was fully satisfied upon that point, I could now mark out my course at the call session; as the only remedy in the Congressional question I would be in favour of the General Ticket sistem, for the next election of members in our state. I hope you will give me your views on these as well as all other subjects likly to be before us at that time.

Permit me here to remark that I very much fear we are getting behind again upon the Presidential election. The Whigs of Tenn. and of several other states are out in bold relief for Clay, and taunting asking the Democrats to pick their man. For my self I fear most of all other evils some internal dissentions, for it is obvious that several of our distinguished men are becoming restless for preferment.

I have no doubt from what I have herd from Washington & else where, that the Democrats were prepared months ago for the nomination of Van Buren and your self. Without the least intention to flatter you, I will here remark that from the most reliable surces of all my information you were the favourite of the party at Washington, two months ago. Now Sir if the delay on our part is likely to produce your nomination for the first office, I cheerfully forego all my fears, and assure you I would have much stronger hopes of success, than I have ever had for Van Buren. Of these things you must be abler to judge than I am having so lately been at the City. Write me as early as you can. I did receive your letter written just after your return but it was one month & a day on the road.

FROM ALEXANDER O. ANDERSON

My Dear Sir At Home¹ Sepr 14th 1842

The whigs will not resign, nor can they be goaded to it by any movement in the H.R. to that end. Nevertheless, I think it highly adviseable that you shou'd see that a prudent & well-timed movement of that character shou'd be made.

Since the gov's proclamation,⁴ I am satisfied another attempt will be made to elect Senators. As matters stand, & with the vantage ground we occupy, in every respect, as to issues & the conduct of our Party in the recent matter of resignation, I think it will be a suicidal policy to submit to any compromise whatever, and, therefore, our Senators shou'd be exhorted to stand firm.

After our state affairs it is highly important that your attention shou'd be directed to national politics, for at this movement,⁴ the movements commenced sometime since, are being continued with renewed effort. Whatever others may feel, I have no sympathy in common with those who are ready & willing to sacrifice Tennessee to any quarter of the Union. I am not. And such are my feelings and determination, equally, upon the ground that it is due from me to you, & from Tennessee to you. In the north they do not know how to appreciate such efforts as you have made, or the idea that you have thrown yourself into the breach, and gathered together the shattered fragments of the Republican Party. They entertain the opinion there that our revolution here was under very different auspices, because they have no just conception of the power and effect of a true Republican intercourse with the people, & the public discussions from day to day before their assembled masses; but to come more directly to the point, the true question which presents itself, when stripped of the drapery of humbuggery, is whether we shall, in a mad and unwise devotion to any man, in the ensuing Presidential contest, bind ourselves hand & foot, without regard to what Tennessee has a right to expect, & justly to claim. The moment Tennessee does that she will be as powerless in all movements of whatever character, whether in convention or elsewhere, as a ten year-old Child, and treated with about the same ceremony—made to wait, and get nothing, except some fragment which may be left! Let us look how much reason there is in the proposition that Tennessee shou'd make herself a slave to the will of any Clique. Who was it that restored Tennessee? Who fought the great Battle? Who roused up her dispirited Democracy? Who, in one word, has created the Party here? You—and you alone Singly moved upon that mass, & gave it form, & heat, & life & motion! & who broke it down by a series of blunders, that very Clique & that very Head of the Clique, who I know had prepared to sacrafice you—and will do it again, & again, if Tennessee can be so reckless as to be committed without regard to you! The reason for all this is obvious, and is absolutely irremovable! It is that your position for the future is an object of irreconcileable envy, & inexpressible apprehension. In this I am right—I know that I am not mistaken—but if Tennessee will be true to herself, she can dictate who may be the next President, & who shall be his successor. But if she acts with pusillanimity her actors, & especially her great Leader, will be treated as mere instruments, while the three or four init[i]lated smile in their Sleeves, at her pretensions. Let Tennessee be true to herself, & the Union will be true to her, and at a moment when we have a just right to struggle for Supremacy, it astonishes me that any leading Press in the State shou'd by every possible indirection, endeavor to commit her, or indicate her in the Presidential Contest. Perhaps, I ought to make some allowances. They do not feel as I do. I have staked my political fortunes with you. Your friendly hand has been with me—and I am willing to stake all for the sake of your success, in connexion with the great principles for which we contend, for I verily believe the time is coming when fewer, & yet fewer of our public men can be trusted to stand, in all times of imminent trial, by the great principle of our Constitution. And I verily believe if Tennessee will be true to herself that the day will come when your position, & your rigid principles will be looked to for the highest office, as essential to promote our great National Interests. This will be, as certain as I write, as far as human foresight can go, the result, if Tennessee does not now act a suicidal part, and sacrifice you to the north—not to the Party—for there is much danger that the Party will be sacrificed too!

This is in substance what I said to you when we were last together. And as to our public men, that they will not stand the test thro' the trying years that are coming, look at the recent desertion of their Party principles by Mr. Buchanan & Mr. Wright, in the passage of the last Tariff Bill. A Bill viler & more abominable than any thing which has ever been placed upon the national Statute Book. Their Apology was any thing but satisfactory. Both those Gentlemen look forward to the Presidency. The first will agree to a contingent remainder, if he can do no better. The last looks complacently upon a vested Right if the power of his great prototypes shall be in the ascendant! Will such men do thro' the times that are coming? No! They have not the nerve, and they are behind the age. They lack forecast. The Time is coming when monopolies will go down in the North, the Middle, the West & the South. Their desertion was at a moment when we had the Whigs upon the hip—the hip—and the law of the Compromise Still in force. And they started back at the sight of Whig protests against the payment of duties—and had Mr. Benton, tho voting for his Party, apologizing for their course! The Sagacious man who Sees all this shou’d remember that the action of Tennessee, of this day, is to have a decided effect upon the state of things to be produced for the future, by just such movements. And if she is true to herself, the Union will be true to her—and not otherwise!

In my opinion, therefore, unless Tennessee designs to abandon you, which she will not do, if allowed to speak & to act, her voice must be wholly uncommitted upon the subject of the Presidency. She must be free to Choose & to Act—and this not seemingly but in reality—and her leading Presses here must indulge themselves in no unworthy indirection. In regard to this I think you ought to give a very decisive tone to things at Nashville, & if you feel any delicacy in a direct expression of your views to Eastman, when you mention the subject refer him to me. As matters at present stand our public Press, at Nashville, especially, is in a fair way to have us committed to Mr. Van Buren, without once looking to the true position of Tennessee or to the Vice Presidency, or great future results.

For myself, as to the Presidency, I am for the man who may be finally nominated, by whatever mode our Party may agree to—altho I believe, if Mr. Van Buren shou’d be the man, the struggle will be doubtful in Tennessee—and can only be successful by the aid of your name—because first, the prejudices are greater against him, than any enthusiasm that exists for him—or ever can! He is not a man to excite enthusiasm. The range of his affections is limited to the circle of three or four. And Secondly, the iron—the very iron has entered the heart of the people against the principle of the second term Service, and there is no instance of a man having been run three times for the Presidency—successfully. I learn by my correspondents that it was much talked of, at an early part of this Session, to nominate by the Democratic members of Congress—and as our conventions are constituted—much the fairest mode! The opinion was well founded, as I am informed that if that shou'd be the method that you wou'd certainly be preferred—but the idea was made war upon by New York! She wou'd have no room to play—and drew off from the advocacy of it some of the friends of Col. Johnson. That plan of action ought to be revived, at least conversationally, next Session, and advocated by the Tennessee Delegates. It is the only mode in which the west can be fairly heard—for the Federal states of Vermont & Massachusetts are equally heard in Convention, as heretofore constituted. But if the Democratic members are allowed to vote individually, you will go ahead of any Candidate two to one.

Let me hear from you. I have much more to write, but I find I have already lengthened this beyond my expectation when I sat down. The Treaty which has been made I feel satisfied is honorable to our Country, or such men as Calhoun, King, & Sevier, & the great majority of Republican Senators wou'd not have supported it. I see Mr. Buchanan's favorite Press in Pa is coming out against it in advance, for the purpose of holding him up. Also does Webb with his Courier take ground against it. It is desirable that the Tennessee Press shall not blunder upon this subject.

As to the new Tariff our Tenn. papers shou'd open their batteries upon it fiercely & unsparingly. Have the example set at Columbia & Nash[ville]. It is important in more ways than one to Tennessee.

Nashville Sept. 30th 1842

The members still come in, slowly. In addition to those mentioned in my letter of last evening, are Sevier & Foster & Maclin of the Senate, Pate, Scruggs, Standerfer, Green of the House. All of the E. Tennessee delegation of our party, will be here before Monday Standerfer informed me—passed them, he in the Stage, they on horseback. I cannot as yet see any urgent necessity for your being here before Tuesday. The members seen to regard the subject of relief, with more interest than any other. But little talk and apparently less interest manifested concerning the election of Senators. From the information received here, it is very probable that Douglass will be unable to reach Nashville during the Session, and very certain that he cannot preside as Speaker. Eph. Foster is behaving himself with remarkable modesty, but seldom in Town, and then seems to avoid being about the Taverns. Anderson Hilliard is here from Columbia, and will return on Sunday. FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Nashville, Tuesday Ev. 9 oclock, Oct. 11, 1842

We have just concluded our meeting. We had our papers all in order, and the scraps were destroyed from which the last sheets were prepared, and at precisely 7 o clock to-night the Court room being the place, we had a very full meeting, and according to the organization of the meeting and preliminaries which I had also drawn up and unanimously adopted our Preamble and resolutions which are now in the hands of Col. Harris for next Union. Every thing was harmonious. Mr. Martin I think was off making a temperance speech. Mr. John I believe was absent. S.M. was not present I believe. But the vote was unanimous, but it was casually said by myself and others for the lobby, that such of our friends as were absent, know the contents of our reports, and that we were in perfect harmony. The vote of adoption is entered unanimous and the proceedings are signed by the Chairman and three Secretaries. The account of meeting names all the Committeemen, motions &c. and by whom made. Dew moved the adoption &c. All I have time to say is, that I go to bed better satisfied and in better spirits than I have been in for the last week.

Great difficulties however are likely to arise in the Congressional district committee. Copeland and Maclin wish to begin in the East, and proceed west, making all the districts as near the ratio as may be, so as to leave the fractional district in the west, to secure the benefit of it to the west alone. Copeland seems to be deranged upon it. He proposes a district including Warren, which is to include Hamilton and Marion, leave out Coffee, and run across the state from Georgia to Kentucky and include Jackson on the Kentucky line. Its population is over the Congressional ratio, and to include Jackson and White makes it Whig by seven or eight hundred. He presses this district. He and Dew on the Committee, effect to take the lead, and both, so far, act like fools.

Remember me respectfully to Mrs. Polk . . . .

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Dear Sir,
Nashville Oct. 12th 1842

The meeting of the democratic members of the Legislature, was held according to previous arrangement, last evening in the Court Room. Nearly all the members were present, and the meeting went off as was desired by all, without a single disenting voice. Andrew Johnson was not present, but the circumstance seemed to be noticed by none—both his colleagues were in attendance. I have not heard a single member mention the circumstance of his absence, none seeming to regard it as a matter of the least consequence.

I have had occasion to be with him frequently in the last day or two, he being Chairman of the Committee to prepare a Bill laying off the state into Congressional districts; his manner and feeling as far as I can judge, been unusually friendly. The Committee will not be able to agree, and will in a few days ask leave to be discharged. The main difficulty presenting itself is in the Eastern division of the State. The result may be, that the democratic party will frame and present a fair bill, doing justice to both parties as far as practicable, and adhere to it throughout, unless the action of the House where it is under consideration can make such amendments, as to conciliating the support of a sufficient number of Whigs to ensure its passage. There has been no developments touching the Senatorial election, since you left; I will keep you advised from time to time of the progress of things here.

The Post note plan for relief appears to be gaining strength among the members. I am inclined to take strong ground against it. I would like to have your views of the question, at length, if it is convienent.

Dear Sir

Morganton No Ca. Octr 13th 1842

I received your letter some time since² and would have answered you sooner, but I concluded not to write until Mrs. Tate would decide whether or not she would be willing for Marshal and Eunice to go to Tennessee. I urged upon her the propriety of letting them both go, as soon as I received your letter, and I think by next spring she would have consented for you to have them and superintend their education, but for the sad event I will now communicate to you. The congestive fever appeared in my family the latter part of last month in a most aggravated and dangerous form. Marshal and Eunice were attacked about the same time. Marshal is now out of danger entirely, but poor little Eunice fell a victim to it. She died on the 8th Inst. 12 o'clock at night. Several of my negroes have been low with the same fever but are now convalescent. Eunice was a lovely interesting child and expressed a great wish to see her friends in Tennessee since we recvd your last letter. Mrs. Tate will not consent for Marshal to leave her soon. I think myself he is most too small and young. He is quite delicate and his habits and health have to be watched very particularly. I think in a few years she will give her consent. I will keep him at school as much as I think he is able to bear without injuring him by confinement. Mrs. Tate wishes to be kindly remembered by you.

I send you one of the handbills announcing the Barbecue at Davis' Mills on Friday next.¹ I shall be greatly disappointed if there is not an immense number of persons present on the occasion. I was at the Mills at Meeting today and I found the ditches already dug to barbecue their meats in. Dr. Norton² says several Whigs in his neighborhood have subscribed a shoat or two each. The Democrats have gone into the matter in the right spirit—all are anxious for it. I want you to make them just such a speech as you made at Pulaski and Lynnville.³ I wrote a pressing letter to Turney to come, and I have some hope that he will do so, as he may be on his way to Nashville about that time. If you come by Nashville you could come to Father's⁴ in the stage the evening before the Barbecue. I will meet you on next Thursday night if I can hear where you will be. I would like very much for you to reach Father's. In haste.

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Dear Sir

Nashville Oct 18th 1842

The news from Ohio this evening is most glorious.¹ Shannons majority cannot be less than 10,000. This blow was not expected by the Whigs, and they die very hard. They begin to express some doubts as to the availability of Mr. Clay, and are beginning to canvass the propriety of starting Genl. Scott, who I fear will be more formidable, as they will spring the drum and fife on us.

The meeting here on Saturday week,² it is thought will be very large. I saw Harris & Genl. Armstrong, and hand-bills will be struck and circulated in the morning—and preparations made for a grand affair. Nothing new. The releif Committee reported a bill this morning reorganizing the whole Judiciary system, restricting the courts to two terms anually,³ which with other provisions is equal to the suspension of all debts, judgements, and executions for 18 months or 2 years, which I think will pass without much opposition.

WILLIAM H. POLK

1. On October 11, 1842, Ohio Democrats elected Wilson Shannon to a second term as governor and increased their majorities in both houses of the legislature. An Ohio lawyer, Shannon enjoyed a varied political career, which included service as Ohio's attorney general, 1835; governor, 1838–40 and 1842–44; U.S. minister to Mexico, 1844–45; Democratic congressman from Ohio, 1853–55; and governor of the Kansas Territory, 1855–56.

2. James K. Polk spoke at a Democratic meeting in Nashville on October 29, 1842.

3. After reversing itself several times, the Tennessee House on October 26, 1842, passed a relief bill that reduced the frequency of circuit court meetings in each county from three to two. William H. Polk opposed the relief measure and raised constitutional objections to it in a speech before the Tennessee House on October 21. On November 9 the Tennessee Senate rejected a much amended version of the House bill.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir:

Columbia Oct. 19th 1842

I see that the Nashville Whig papers, have at length broke ground upon the Democratic Preamble and Resolutions.¹ It is manifest from the tone of their articles that they are at fault in knowing how to meet them. The Banner I see promises to make startling developments, and to demolish you hereafter. I hope you will give attention to what they may say, and as Harris must be very busy, in attending to other duties, that you will assist him in refuting or answering what may appear. Do not suffer them to depart from the issues, which your Resolutions present. They will probably attempt to get up an angry discussion, with you, upon some immaterial collateral matter. This should not be allowed. Hold them on, to the old records, which you have brought forward; and compel them to justify and defend the Bankrupt law, and other odious measures of the party in power.

There was a Clay meeting here on Monday concerning which I wrote to brother William on yesterday. It was thinly attended and went off heavily. It produced not the slightest effect, except to rouse up the Democracy. A number of our Whig's will not vote for Mr Clay. We have called an anti-Clay meeting for the 31st, at which there will probably be a very large crowd. I leave this evening to attend the Barbecue at Davis's Mills in Bedford on the 21st & will be at home again on Sunday evening. This is great labour, but some one must do it & I submit to it cheerfully.

I have received a letter from Col Yoakum, expressing deep solicitude that Rutherford may not be sacrificed in the arrangement of Congressional & Senatorial Districts. I know the difficulties attending the subject, but still hope, that she may be saved, in one if not both. The Central position of that County makes it more important that we should preserve our strength there, than in any other County in the State. Do what you can, consistently with your duty to others, for our Rutherford friends. We have heard nothing here from the Fayette election. The election news from abroad is indeed most cheering.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Clarksville October 21st 1842

I rec'd your letter enclosing one of Doct. Ramsey. If I am not mistaken the Doct. & Eastman sent on strong recommendations to us for the appointment of one of the Crosiers (A. J. Crosier I think) & my recollection is that most of us upon their recommendation united in recommending Crozier, if Mr Lewis was not appointed. I have however written Mr. W. a private letter making the suggestions. It is however a great mistake in supposing that I have "his ear." So far from it I have been treated worse since he has been in than I was before tho I do not suppose he knew it. At Dover a most violent, Clay, Bank, Bell man was appointed over my recommendation of a most gentlemanly whig & I suspect upon the secret recommendation of Bell, as the new P.M. was formerly one of the clerks at the rolling mill. I have however written, strongly urging the removal of Campbell and have also written Doct. Ramsey as you request. I enclose you the Doct. letter. The tour of his southern friend to the north only repeals the impression that some southern politicians wish to make. It is probable the idea of placing Wright or Buckhanan as vice on the ticket was given up long before their votes on the Tariff & for a better reason. Theres not a doubt in my mind that Van will recive the nomination without difficulty and from the recent proceedings in Charleston & the course of the N Y Post, I suppose his (Calhouns) friends will yeild & support the nominee. The only question which we have to guard agt. is, will it be deemed necessary to buy off R.M.J.? The recent elections will demonstrate that Clay can do nothing. The Whigs proper have no confidence in Scotts sense or pliability. I cannot but think they will be driven to look to some pliant democrat. If we have any difficulty it will arise from southern obstinancy.
October 21 1842

The Resolutions at Nashville will do much good, if they are properly circulated. It should be done in pamphlet form with your speech at Pulaski. It is important I think that our convention should decide upon our candidates before the meeting of the next Congress to avoid all intrigue &c among the members. I should have preferred, if it could have been done, that the nomination had been made before the election. Tho we might have lost in the elections something, yet we should have had a more firm & better settled majority & would have suppressed any political movements among the Democrats. We are in great danger from too large a majority.

It is hardly probable I suppose that Congressional districts will be laid off but if it is I suppose my district will be cut to pieces for fear that I might wish to run again. In the Legislative districts, Montgomery & Robertson should be separated, and the family connexion will be brok up, & we shall certainly have a Senator or two more. It will be difficult to beat them united. You ought if possible to suppress any debate among the Democrats upon the proposition to disregard the slave population in laying off districts.

If I go to Nashville it will be on the 29th. My time will be fully occupied with my little matters at home & have no time to attend the Courts. I have just removed to my new building a mile from town.

FROM ALEXANDER O. ANDERSON

Near Knoxville, Tennessee. October 27, 1842

Replying to a letter from Polk of October 15, 1842, Anderson recalls that very early in their acquaintance he thought that Polk's position was "such that it would be just as easy to advance, in the end, to the highest honors of the Country, as to effect a landing upon the second platform." In order to enhance the future of both Polk and the Tennessee Democracy, Anderson recommends that the state party express no preference among current presidential aspirants. If Tennessee enters the convention with Polk's "name alone inscribed upon her banner," his nomination as vice-presidential candidate is certain no matter who wins first place on the ticket. Anderson also warns against factional fights within the party over the treaty vote in the Senate.2

FROM WILLIAM M. GWIN

My dear Sir

Vicksburg November 5 [18]42

I have read and read with great pleasure your letter of the 14th Ult.¹ My letter to which it was an answer² was written in undue excitement which probably caused me to lay more stress upon the Democratic Votes in Congress for the Tariff bill than in a calmer moment I otherwise should. I acknowledge that I had no patience with some of our friends who voted for the bill because their votes were necessary as they declared to pass it when the fact is the Whigs could & would have passed it without a Democratic vote in either House as they afterwards boasted they could.

On the subject of the Presidency I am altogether in favor of a National Convention. It is the only legitimate mode by which we can concentrate strength for the coming contest. My support of Mr. Calhoun is attended with no feeling against Mr. Van Buren. On the contrary I shall if he is the nominee of the Convention give him as ardent a support as I did in 1832, 1836 & 1840. I have thought & still think that Calhoun & some acceptable Northern Democrat would be stronger than Van Buren & Johnson. With your name on the ticket with Mr. V. Buren we would be equally as strong in the South as if Mr. Calhoun were the nominee especially in this state, No. Carolina, Georgia & Tennessee. These states are all doubtful if V. Buren & Johnson are our candidates. They are certain for us if you are associated with V. Buren or if Calhoun is the candidate for the Presidency. This is the debateable ground in the South. I am firmly convinced that a plan is forming to force Johnson on us again if Van Buren is nominated. His recent Tariff Speech in Pensylvania was intended to catch N. York & Pensylvania.³ Extras of the Kentucky Gazette⁴ have been circulated all over the Union nominating him for the Presidency. This state has been flooded with them. This is intended to put him in so prominent a position that the Convention will be forced to nominate him for the Vice Presidency if V. Buren is nominated to keep him from running as an independent candidate for the Presidency and he will run for the Presidency if not nominated for the Vice Presidency and the principal reason that will be urged in favor of such a step will be that he has been badly treated by being abandoned by the Democratic party and a Stigma attempted to be cast upon him by nominating his associate in 1836 & 1840 & dropping him. Altogether he is the weakest man for the Vice Presidency that was ever thought of by the Democratic party. He is a tariff man, Bank man & in favor of internal Improvements by the General Government.

The time selected by the Legislature of Tennessee for the convention to meet is a very good one the very best that could be selected. I would prefer its assembling at Cincinnatti so that the South & West could have a fair chance to send their delegates. Your personal friends should be cautious not to induce the belief by their acts that you are opposed to Calhoun's nomination. Now his friends are yours. They are most enthusiastic in his support and look upon you as the next leader in the South. If he can get the votes of the Southern states his nomination is certain for Pensylvania is certain to vote for him in convention in preference to V. Buren between whom & Buchanan the master spirit of that state there is no good feeling. Calhoun's friends intend to press his claims for a nomination before the Convention with unabating zeal; nor do they intend to flinch from its decision. If he can only maintain his present ground he must get the nomination for he has every advantage as his friends can urge him with an earnestness that could not becomingly be exerted in favor of an ExPresident. Yet it will & must be done with good feeling on both sides.

I shall be most happy to hear from you at Washington. I will with pleasure give you all the news from that place this winter if you desire it.

FROM SARAH C. POLK

My dear Husband Columbia Nov. 7th 1842

Your order to write you on the sunday following your leaveing, I did not comply with for the reason I had nothing to communicate. This being the day of the Whig meeting here I awaited for the occasion to be over. E. J. Shields\(^1\) did not make his appearance. Cahal answered your speech of last monday, & Greenfield, Nicholson [made a] few remarks.\(^2\) They were the only speakers. There was a good many people in town it being court. But the court house was never filled while the speaking was going on, and I am told there was not fifty persons there who were attending when Cahal finished. S. P. Walker\(^3\) says the object of Cahal seemed to do away the effect of your speech on the Whigs. Notice was given that E. J. Shields would be here and address the people on next Saturday if it did not rain.\(^4\) The Democrats has called or will call a meeting for the first monday in December, when the members of the Legislature will be at home. Sam Walker thinks Nicholson is anxious to make a talk himself, gives evidence of a strong desire to take a active part and get in favour with your friends. N. came over a few days ago to borrow some of your Journals. He had Milton Browns answer to your Tarriff votes in his hand.\(^5\) I infered he intended to answer Brown. I suppose of course you saw his answer\(^6\) as it came out just after you left. You would see it in the District on your way.\(^7\) The Nashville papers take but little notice of the meeting here last monday. And the speeches of to day made no impression here. I believe this is all the political news I have. Elias brought the sheep home, went to Oliphants,\(^8\) who says he will start in a week or two, and will let me know precisely what day. I will have to defer my visit to Murfreesboro' until the Sheep & Hogs are started on their journey, and I fear that I will be kept waiting all the month, by the Sheep, Hogs, Mitchel & the Corn.\(^9\) I have given you all the domestic matters and I do not know that I have any thing else to say at present.

5. On November 2, 1842, the Nashville Republican Banner published a letter written to the Jackson West Tennessee Whig by Milton Brown, a Whig congressman from Jackson. Brown accused Polk and Cave Johnson of voting both ways on the tariff question. Brown originally had adopted that line of attack in a speech in the U.S. House on July 7, 1842. On that occasion he had charged that Polk, who professed to be anti-tariff, had voted for a duty on tea and coffee in the tariff debates of 1832–33. Polk answered Brown's speech in remarks made in Giles County on September 29 and 30, 1842. Polk explained that his vote was part of an anti-tariff strategy. Brown's published letter attempted to answer Polk's defense. Born in Ohio, Brown moved to Tennessee and lived in Nashville and Paris before settling permanently in Jackson. A member of the Madison County bar, he served as chancellor of West Tennessee, 1837–39, and sat in the U.S. House for three terms, 1841–47.

Our returns are not all in but sufficient is known to make our complete success certain.1 A majority of more than 15000 for Gov,2 7/8ths of the senate elected this year. Much more than two thirds of each branch of the legislature with about 3/4ths of the members of Congress may be safely set down as the fruits of our great victory.

FROM JONATHAN P. HARDWICKE

Sunday A M

My Dear Sir, Nashville Nov 13th 1842

We have agreed to adjourn to morrow the bill to lay off the state into Congressional Districts. The compromise bill, reported by Ewing of Davidson and Campbell of Washington, was rejected in Senate yesterday on its first reading by the twelve Whig senators & Ross from Lincoln, the 12 other D's voting for it. It proposed six W Dts & five D. Dts. A motion to reconsider is now pending. Our policy is to reconsider & pass the bill with out amendments, send it back, & let the Whigs reject it in the House. No Senators yet nor is there any strong probability that we will elect any. The relief measures are all laid upon the shelf, having been rejected by about an equal number of each party. An attempt will be made in both Ho's to recind the adjourning resolution to morrow; the result is doubtful. Times and things seem to be going on pretty well so far as I can judge, Except as to Mr Van Buren. I assure you Sir, there is a plain disinclination on the part of our friends to take up Van Buren again. I have taken some pains to arrive at this conclusion. At our little caucus's and incidental meetings, the matter has been discussed incidentally. At all times none is on principal opposed to him but all express fears, some that the old prejudices may & will be brought up & others that with him you will fall &c. &c. &c. A few evenings since some 12 Senators were at my room. An election was had between Van Buren, Calhoun, Cass, Dick Johnson, and Buchannon, S Wright, &c. Cass was evidently the favourite. Johnson of Green & some others for Calhoun, against all others, &c. &c.

Our friends in many sections were divided upon the subject of relief. It is posible, if not probable, that some collision may arise amongst our friends upon that subject at home, and in no event can we be bettered by it. It was no party question here nor can it be so construed. My own opinion is that every step should be taken to prevent any dispute especially in our ranks. I would only remarke that a word from you might do good to William H. Polk. Martin was a great relief man tho he voted against the Court bill. He prayed all mighty God it might pass. Dick Warner was a relief man, William H. anti relief, &c. &c. Look to it and do say what you think best.

My Dr Sir. Hillsborough Ills. Novr 14th 1842

Politicians of the same school, use little ceremony in corresponding, or conversing with each other. You will perhaps, on a moments reflection, recollect me. I formed an acquaintance with you at Washington in the ever memorable years of 1836 & '37, and have appreciated that acquaintance and my knowledge of your public career, so highly, that, in common with all my friends in this Country, I feel solicitous that your name, should be before the American people for the office of vice president. I take the liberty to address you this note on that subject. In a few days our Legislature, which is largely democratic, will be in session, and I intend to make an effort to secure your nomination for the vice presidency by resolution of that body. I believe it can be done. Your extraordinary efforts to effect the redemption of Tennessee have been witnessed with profound admiration. This, together with your congressional career, has made you eminently popular in this section of the Union. Besides, your locality in references to Mr Van Buren is precisely as it should be. For the next contest, no person is thought of here for the presidency, but the above named gentleman. Your Tennessee and other western friends are very numerous in the 'prairie' state, and are as enthusiastic as the most ardent and devoted of your own state. We are strong enough at any time, and with any name to carry the democratic ticket for those high offices, but I am very free to say that yours would add essential weight to it in connection with that of Mr Van Buren's, who is not as strong in Illinois as some other prominent democrats. I flatter myself, that I shall receive an answer in due course of mail; which answer shall be for the inspection of the public or not, just as your notions of propriety may direct you to enjoin upon me.

My Dear Sir

By this you will see I am yet in the City of Rocks. I have been the last few days attending to private business. If there were some few more States to be herd from I dont know when I should get a way, especially if they came in like New York, Misshigan & Delaware too. As old Gollahorn said, its parfactly amasin. You will have seen from the papers before you see this, the glorious results. I hope this will reconcile our friends to Mr Van Buren, & produce fresh courage in all our ranks. Our friends here and else where are truly sanguyne in the hope, of carrying eight of the eleven Congressional districts next summer. H. L. Turney says the Nox District is ours beyond all doubt, if we run a candidate. Macklin thinks the same for his. If the Whigs run a man from Davidson, & the Democrats one from Smith, I think our chance is good, but to reverse it, we cant come it. If this reaches you as is intended try by all means to set Coe & Maclin right before you leave them if posible. It does seem that we are doomed to destruction, by the very silly if not downright foolishness of our own friends. Andy Johnson & Brookins Campbell, Coe & Macklin & how many more feuds I cant tell have sprung up this fall. If they can be controled, and every man does his duty, our friends in New York, and else where, win next summer, drink of the fountain that now gladden the harts of all good and true Democrats in Tennessee. Yes sir if our folks will do their duty Whigery, in the language of Daniel the great, will be Obselete. The Whigs here say they will haul down the Clay flag, but they dont say whos they will run up. Our true friends cant conqir doubt, nor hesitate to take up Van Burin if he should be the nominee of the Convention. No sir, they wont nor ought they to think of another after this good news. We come in one of making Senators but as usual failed. We went it strong for relief, repealed the Ca. sa. law and gave eight months stay on the Judgments of Justices of the Peace &c &c.

J. P. HARDWICKE
P.S. There is an under currant working here to get the Seat of Government. If our friends in old Reatherford⁹ will take fresh Courage and manage to advantage we will have a decided majority in the next Legislature. It is said the Whigs wont run but one Candidate in this County and he is Ephraim.¹⁰ A majority is all important to us and equally so to the Whigs as the Districts will certainly [be] laid off anew at the next session. Wilson, and Wiliamson¹¹ may be bidders at the great sale; if so, they may fall in to the compromise also.

FROM J. G. M. RAMSEY

Mecklenburg Nov. 29. 1842

Another letter from a South Carolina correspondent¹ says “The election in New York & Massachusetts² confirms all we have heretofore heard about the spread of the principles of Mr. Calhoun & of Free trade. It is all the achievement of the young democracy whose polar star is J.C.C. The nominations are about to commence now either directly or indirectly in the Legislatures or conventions of the party in Ga., N.C., Al., Mi. &c &c.”
"I had the article you alluded to put in the Mercury relating to Polk.\(^3\) We are all sensible of Polk's merits but it does not become us to go vice-president making. We should be content with the compliment paid us by the nomination of C. for President. As regards myself if J.C. were not a candidate for the Py.\(^4\) I would be glad to see Polk nominated by the State for the V.P. & for one would be willing to move in it but not now, circumspected as we are. If the Conventions do it there will be no sacrifice of feeling in supporting him in S.C."

Thus far my correspondent. Set it down for what it is worth.

The members of the Leg. have returned home—Some of them ashamed of what they have done & already making exculpatory statements about their conduct. The Con. districts do not give satisfaction. Arnolds friends are blustering that he has been legislated out of Congress & the dissatisfaction extends to a part of this his old district—and it is the more general as Williams friends make the same complaint about himself—he has been legislated out for the purpose of making a District to suit T. J. Campbell, a modern Clay man.\(^5\) Some of my neighbours who were aspiring to Williams seat are joining in the same cry as their chance is now hopeless. I hear that Campbell will be a candidate—and I expect that Blackwell\(^6\) will be so certainly. He will get a good many Whig votes if W. does not run as it is probable he will not. We fan the flame & will make the most of it.

The Whig papers here\(^7\) made a furious onset on you about a speech (reported in the Whig & Banner\(^8\) & distorted still more by letter writers from Nashville & published at Knoxville) of your Brother on the River Bill.\(^9\) I have no doubt his remarks were perverted but I think his vote for the bill has counteracted all your opponents were making of his remarks. Reneau & Senter will lock horns in the 2nd. Dist. & Wheeler or Frazier or Wallace have some chance.\(^10\) Above we will have a difficulty with Johnson & Campbell,\(^11\) but I hope it may be healed. Here we are sanguine of carrying our member.\(^12\) Campbell\(^13\) as he passed through was clear for the Tariff & I doubt not will make it his hobby.

FROM WILLIAMSON SMITH

Dear Sir. Madison Cty. Miss. 8th Decemr. 1842

Agreeable to promise, I write you on my return home. 2 or 3 days after my return I rallied my friends, and made a desent upon our friend Handy of the Independant, and he forthwith agreed to place your name at his Masthead for Vice P. It to is due to him to say it was not hard to do, when properly laid before him. We have called a County meeting on the 2nd day of Jany and made out our Committees &c. They will be instruted to urge your Claims as strong as it can be done. I have had certain Men put on who will do their duty. Our Court was still in session on my return, and I made it my business to talk with very many of the leading Demo­crats, and I did not meet with a dissenting voice to your Claims. Every Man save one will advocate your claims, and that man only on the ground that your location and Mr. Calhouns does not suit.

I saw Mr Totten at Oxford. He told me he would go home & set the Ball in Motion. I did not get to see Judge Howry, as there was company at his House which prevented my seeing him, but Totten promised me he would see him and attend to matters.

I incline to think Calhoun will be the nominee of the state convention here; that is the delegates to the Genl. Convention will be instructed [to] support his claims. I did not oppose it strenously as I thought it most prudent not to do so. As all seem so cheerfully to give in to Idea of your claims, I have written to Sterling Lester and requested him to show my letter to Kincannon, and suggested to him the importance of calling a Meeting.

I regret very much it will not be in my power to be at either of our meetings. Since I saw you, I have determined to start to Washington City in a few days, on the business of my claim. Gov Morehead of Kentucky wrote me he had examined my claim and he had no doubt but if I would go to Washington, this winter, that his influence with the Whigs & mine with the Democrats we would [be] able to get it passed. He had examined the claim and the only difficulty would [be] in reaching it, which he thought could be done if it was started in time.

If there are any of your particular friends that you think you could render me any service by giving me a letter to them at Washington it would be acknowledged as another favour added to the very many already confered. I should start in 2 or 3 days. My Brother Gabriel has just returned from Kentucky. He says it is very clearly understood there that Mr. Clay will not be run for President and that the Democrats of Kentucky are for Dick Johnson for President. That will do very well. It will perhaps put [him] out of the way. I should be pleased to hear from you at Washington. Any thing I can do for your success while there, it is unnecessary to say shall be done. I will perhaps be able to get the hang of things to some extent.

Please present my respects to Mrs. Polk, and say to her I shall notice who I take in the stage with me this trip.9

3. James L. Totten, a lawyer and native of Tennessee, served one term in the Tennessee Senate, 1835–37, representing Dyer, Carroll, and Gibson counties; he subsequently moved to Marshall County, Mississippi, where he won election to one term in the Mississippi House, 1844–46.

4. Sterling H. Lester, a former resident of Giles County, Tennessee, moved to Mississippi in the middle 1830's.

5. Andrew A. Kincannon was a former resident of Lincoln County, Tennessee, where he served as sheriff and delegate to the Tennessee Constitutional Convention of 1834. In the late 1830's he moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and in 1844 won election to the Mississippi House.

6. On October 24, 1837, Smith contracted with the U.S. government to transport six-thousand Cherokees west of the Mississippi by steamboat. Not permitted to complete the contract because of a change in governmental planning, Smith claimed that he sustained considerable monetary loss. In the course of his first attempt to win legislative relief, the Committee on the Judiciary of the U.S. House referred his case to Secretary of War Joel R. Poinsett. On June 17, 1840, Poinsett wrote a letter acknowledging the justice of the claim to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House. On the strength of that recommendation, the Bank of the United States advanced Smith the full amount of his claim, $35,327; and, in early 1843, officers of the bank petitioned Congress for payment. On February 14, 1843, a majority report of the House Committee on the Judiciary recommended that the bank's request be refused.

8. Gabriel Smith, brother and business partner of Williamson Smith, moved to Mississippi from Maury County, Tennessee, in the late 1830's or early 1840's.

9. Smith had traveled to Washington City in March of 1840 to press his claim before the House Committee on the Judiciary; his traveling companion on that earlier occasion is not identified.

Washington City Dec. the 8th 1842

On my arrival at Nashville when on my way to this city I learned for the first time the congressional districts as laid off by the legislature. The one in which I live includes Waterson, and George W. Jones. The former you know is not acceptable to me as my representative nor never was and much less so now, for the very good and sufficient reasons which I under existing circumstances ought not to mention. He however is in the district and you know he is willing to sacrifice any and every thing to sustain himself; Jones is a good democrat a worthey and tallented gentleman and I would be perfectly willing for him to represent the district. Waterson has promised me to abide by the decision of a convention, relying no doubt upon carrying Bedford and Marshal, two of his old counties, and there by to secure for himself the nomination. Jones could carry Lincoln. I could get Lincoln and Franklin against W. if Jones was out of the way, or if I was out of the way Jones could get Franklin. Now Sir I wish to accomplish two things. 1st. there must be but one democratick candidate, and secondly, he must not be, H.M.W. if it can be avoided. For myself I am willing to run, or not, as circumstances may require. Maney of my friends think I will still be thought of for the senate, in which event it would be better for me and for the district, that I should not run for the House. In no event however will I be the means of producing dissensions or divisions in our ranks either for the H. or S. By a union with Jones I could give him the nomination. But sir I am out of business, have not a case on the docket, a large family and really need some ready money. This I could make by remaining here another congress, enough to support my family until I could get into a practice. Yet this shall not induce me to Stand in the way of any party arrangement or from sacrificing my views and wishes on the alter of the public good. I am therefore willing that Jones shall run, rather than produce any diffaculty, and to take my Chance before the legislature, and if I should shear the same fate there, I will modestly retire to my private life still adhearing to and on all proper occasions Sustaining democratick principles and men.
I would be much pleased to have your opinion freely expressed on this Subject. It cannot, or if it could it should not effect you in any way whatever, for no human being shall ever know it except ourselves. I do therefore respectfully solicit your opinion and advice in relation to this to me important matter.

You and Van\textsuperscript{3} are identified. Your fates will inevitably be the same. I have not had a full talk with Benton but He has requested me to call on him for the express purpose, which I will do in a day or two the result of which I will advise you. All seem to agree, that the contest will be between Van & you, against Calhoun & Woodbury, in which contest you will have, Benton & Allen, and also, a large majority of our friends in the present Congress.

TO MARTIN VAN BUREN

My Dear Sir:

Columbia Tenn. Decr. 8th 1842

On my return home from a visit to my plantation in Mississippi, a few days ago, I received your letter of the 11th ultimo, announcing our great victory in New York. I had been prepared to anticipate success in that State, but not by so overwhelming a majority as the result proves. The triumph of our principles in New York, Ohio and other states during the present year,\textsuperscript{1} has given the Democracy of this State fresh courage for the contest which is before us. Ours as you are aware may be fairly regarded as debateable ground. We will have a bitter and a hard struggle during the next summer, but confidently hope to be able to number Tennessee among the Democratic States. Our habit is, to meet and address the people in public assemblies. I have done so, in several of the Counties recently, and am satisfied that we have increased and are increasing our strength. I have not yet been announced as the Democratic Candidate for Governor, though all my friends insist that I shall be in the spring. The labour of canvassing a State like this, of more than six hundred miles in extent, and reaching from the mountains of Virginia & Carolina to the Swamps of the Mississippi, and of visiting and addressing the people in more than eighty Counties, is greater than can be estimated by any one who has not performed it. It requires four months of unceasing riding and speaking. I have twice performed it, and standing in the relation which I do to the Democracy of the State, I must undertake it again. We will do our duty, and I think will give a good account of ourselves in August next, as well as in the great contest of 1844. I shall be pleased to hear from you, as your leisure may permit, and to receive any suggestions—which you may deem it important to make.

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

Dear Sir. Nashville 12th Decembr. 42

If you can spare time I think a few days here would be well and profitable spent. Every thing looks well from every quarter. Doctr. Young¹ says Jones will be the Whig Candidate.² If he is not they will have none. I think Guild³ will agree to run in this district⁴ for Congress. If he does we will "get our freedom."

There is several matters to arrange that the sooner done the better, and when you come you must stay a few days.

Verry close in Massachusetts.⁵ Our friends think Morton safe.⁶ Laughlin is here—no News.

FROM LEVIN H. COE

Dear Sir

Somerville Decr. 14. 1842

Your favor is to hand by yesterdays mail. I owe you an apology for not having written before this. I reached home from Winstons with high inflammation of the breast. I have had an attack of it every time I have been subjected to the least exposure since. I start N. Orleans in the morning & hope the trip may be of advantage to me.

I was at Jackson last week and even the leading Whigs there admit we are gaining.

I have written to Judge Dunlap by to days mail asking him to say to his confidential friends that he is a candidate for Congress. I have the Demos. of this County & the adjoining ones expecting & anxious to hear it.

I have also suggested an 8 Jan meeting in Hardeman. It will be court week and the meeting would be large. The Whigs hold a meeting in Memphis in a few days. One will probably follow here—then we will follow that. I hope we will get suitable candidates out in due time for all the offices & have no fear of the result. Party machinery cannot reanimate & bring up the rank & file of the Whig party & the effect of the new Tariff upon the price of Cotton about Apl & May next in further reduction of price will have much effect in this part of the State. Maclin is about to settle in Somerville to practice law. He is here now.

Van of the . . . is acting a little strangely at times of late. Write nothing confidential to him.

FROM JONATHAN P. HARDWICKE

My Dear Sir

Charlotte Dec 18, 1842

Your favour of the 15 Inst. was recvd by due course of mails yesterday.¹ I had previously recvd flattering accounts of your labours in the District. Maclin says you made havock amongst the Mechanicks in his neighbourhood and that things are working well. He tells me he is off[f] the track entirely, and that Judge Dunlap, & Dr. Searcy² will probably be the Candidates in that district, for Congress. You will see from the Union,³ that we are ever mindful of our duty. We had a Democratick meeting here yesterday, preparatory to a Convention to be held at Dover, in Feb[y], to nominate Candidates for Congress & the Senate. Who they will be I cant tell, but hope the nominations will be made with out regard to men, and for the good of the cause and our party. I have every reason to beleive our friends generally expect and desire my nomination for Congress.

I must say to you what I have not said to any other save S. Maclin, that I dont expect to be a candidate again for any office. In a word if my present plans go into effect, I shall leave the State by or before the first of April next. Of that I shall determine in a short time. If I should leave as I now expect to do, Cave Johnson will be nominated again and Maj. Gray⁴ for the Senate &c.

I was at the Circuit Court in Humphreys. From all I could learn there, Wily⁵ will be the Democratic Candidate for that district. If so, he will be elected, and is good and true. Eubank⁶ wont run again, but Dickson⁷ will send some one that will give a good account. We doubtless are better organized and things are working more smoothly than in most other Co.s or Dsts. of the State.

What ever I do, or where ere I go, I will cast in my mite, by both handing and holding to further the cause we have been battling for. There are three reasons for the course, I have marked out for my future actions. First, increase of years, bodily afflictions, and a desire to give my attention to my domestick affairs, which, [I] have greatly neglected for the last six years. I am not imbarassed, nor do I intend to be, but I have not made what I should under other circumstances.
I shall be pleased to hear from you at all times and much more so to know that you are successfull in your labours.

7. Dickson County.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir

Washington Dec 18th 1842

I recd your two letters of the 8th & 9th on yesterday. I had never before met Milton Browns letter. It is a foolish contemptible thing no doubt designed to make an other issue. If a suitable opportunity presents I will not fail to expose it. He will have enough to do to manage his other votes at the call session & if Gardner runs he will be fully occupied without troubling you. I have changed my opinion of him very much since he has been here. I will send you the Documents you desire in a few days.

I have recd letters from Fitzgerald & Jas T Dunlap wishing to know whether I would be a candidate &c written before my card appeared in the Union—also from Majr H. The two latter wishes to be candidates & Fitzgerald intimates that several others in Henry desire it, tho not himself. I have urged all of them to have a convention and thus avoid running more than one. If that can be effected, I think we will be certainly safe. Judge Martin will probably be the whig candidate. If in your way you had better press the matter. Any division may be disastrous.
I shall not be surprised if we have new parties & new issues before the Presidential election. Recent publications in The Mercury\(^9\) induce the belief that Calhoun is a candidate any how. They talk here of submitting to a convention if fair— that the members should be elected by districts &c.\(^{10}\) If the convention decides agt. him, they will complain of its unfairness and intend to run him any how. This is in my opinion their seted determination, & I fear Woodbury is in it, & they will try & get Maine by intimating that Clifford is to be Speaker. The new issue I think will be the British Treaty.\(^{11}\) Benton's speech you will see.\(^{12}\) The greatest effort of his life & I shall not be surprised if it prevents any appropriation to carry it into effect. Woodbury & Calhoun voted for it denouncing the treaty but public faith requires its execution. The defence of this measure will secure them the aid of the Pres. & his friends. Van Buren will go into the Convention with more than two to one, if there be any thing like a fair representation. It seems impossible to ascertain their views as to the Vice Presidency. They are however evidently greatly dissatisfied with efforts Old Dick\(^{13}\) is making to get uppermost & we can hear it occasionally said that Polk or King is the man. McKay is very desirous of your nomination—I think the only Van B. man in the delegation of his State. The Calhoun men are acting very badly. You remember the election of Speaker,\(^{14}\) how it was managed, the same game is going on in the Legislature of N.C. Some 10 or 12 his friends refused to vote for Bedford Brown because his first choice is Van, & vote for Saunders. The whigs are by degrees coming to Saunders & will probably elect him.\(^{15}\) The same game is expected in Alabama, & finally to be played out over the whole union in the presidential election. Cass has come out in substance declining to run for the Presidency unless nominated by a democratic National Convention.\(^{16}\) As he hails from Ohio, I shall not be surprised if an effort should be made to put him on as Van's Vice President for fear the whigs might present him a nomination. Genl Anderson is here full of secrets of state of immense importance—will rather do harm than good. He has but little prudence & not much judgement. King refuses to go for Van if old Dick is on the ticket. Buckhanon\(^{17}\) has given up hopes I think & stands with Benton agt. the Treaty. The Guard has still hopes that the Democrats will take up Tyler. I have not yet visited him. He was unwell when I got here & I have for several days been very unwell—a slight return of my old complaint—swelled face & shoulders so much affected that I could not put on or off my coat. Williams\(^{18}\) of Maryland died on his way. Habersham is probably dead.\(^{19}\) Judge Young\(^{20}\) of Illinois had an apopleptic fit a few days ago. He will probably recover. Brown, Turney, & myself are together on Missouri Avenue.\(^{21}\) Caruthers, Gentry, W B Campbell, & C H Williams\(^{22}\) decline. Jeff Campbell and Arnold will be probably choked off.\textsuperscript{23} I shall not be surprised if there should not be returned (20 men) twenty men of the present Congress. I have been able to go about but very little. We shall not fail to note every thing interesting to you & give you an account of it. My respects to Madam.\textsuperscript{24}

3. Reference is to the special session of the Twenty-seventh Congress, which met in the summer of 1841.
4. Not identified further.
6. Cave Johnson’s card, which was addressed to the citizens of the Ninth Congressional District, announced that he would not run again for Congress; he published his declination in the Nashville Union on December 6, 1842. Johnson subsequently changed his mind and won reelection to the Twenty-eighth Congress.
8. Mortimer A. Martin, a Whig lawyer in Clarksville, served as judge of the Seventh Circuit from 1836 to 1850.
10. Reference is to U.S. congressional districts.
12. On August 18, 1842, the U.S. Senate met in executive session to debate the Webster-Ashburton Treaty; Thomas Hart Benton made a speech opposing ratification. On August 30, 1842, the Senate adopted a resolution removing its injunction of secrecy subsequent to the exchange of ratifications; those deliberations, including speeches, began appearing in the public press in early December of 1842.
14. Reference is to the election of Robert M. T. Hunter as Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives in 1839.
15. Reference is to the election of a U.S. Senator for North Carolina to replace the incumbent Whig, William A. Graham, upon the expiration of his term, March 3, 1843. The Democratic majority in the legislature divided between Bedford Brown and Romulus M. Saunders. Both candidates finally withdrew and allowed the election of William H. Haywood, a Democrat and former Speaker of the North Carolina legislature's lower house. Brown, a planter in the vicinity of Greensboro, served in both houses of the North Carolina legislature before representing his state in the U.S. Senate, 1829–40. He had resigned in 1840 rather than follow the instructions of a Whig dominated legislature; he won election to the state senate in 1842. Saunders, a lawyer active in North Carolina politics since 1815, lost his bid for the governorship in 1840; having previously served three terms in the U.S. House, 1821–27, he returned to that body and served two more terms, 1841–45.

16. The Washington Globe of December 17, 1842, printed a letter that Lewis Cass had written in Paris, August 19, 1842, answering questions about his presidential aspirations. Cass had claimed that he did not wish or expect to be president, but should the majority of the Democratic party feel his nomination “necessary” and should he receive the endorsement of a national convention, he would “yield with reluctance.”

17. James Buchanan.

18. James W. Williams, former Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, won election to the Twenty-seventh Congress as a Democrat, but died on December 2, 1842.

20. Richard M. Young served in the Illinois House, 1820–22; sat as judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, 1825–37; won election as a Democrat to the U.S. Senate in 1836; and went to the bench of the Illinois Supreme Court in 1843. Polk appointed him commissioner of the General Land Office in 1847.

21. Johnson and his two Democratic colleagues from Tennessee apparently resided at Mrs. Thompson's boarding house in Washington.

22. Robert L. Caruthers, Meredith P. Gentry, William B. Campbell, and Christopher H. Williams were Whig members of the Tennessee congressional delegation. Gentry, a member of the Williamson County bar, served as a Whig in the Tennessee House, 1835–39, and won election to several terms in the U.S. House, 1839–43 and 1845–53; he ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1853 on the American party ticket. Williams, a lawyer from Lexington, Tennessee, represented his district for five terms in the U.S. House, 1837–43 and 1849–53.

23. Reference is to the recent congressional redistricting in Tennessee, which placed the seats of Thomas J. Campbell and Thomas D. Arnold in jeopardy.

FROM E. G. EASTMAN

Knoxville, Dec. 19, 1842

I recd. your favor of the 14th¹ on Saturday, and hasten to answer. I have not, since its reception, had an opportunity of conversing with any of our friends—Mr. Reynolds and Gen. Anderson being absent from town; and having been too unwell for a week past to be at my office, I have not seen either of our other active friends. The subject on which you write is one, however, on which we have frequently conversed, and on which we are cordially agreed. I have written to several of our leading friends in other counties on the same subject, and have urged upon them the vital necessity of speedy and efficient organization. I have also written an article for my next paper, borrowing nearly all its suggestions and a large part of its language from your letter, in which I urge the immediate call of county meetings. You will see the article in the next Argus, and I trust will approve it. I shall use my most strenuous exertions, by articles in the Argus, by conversation with our friends as opportunity offers, & by letters to see that an anti-Clay and anti-any-other Whig Meeting is held in every county in East Tennessee within the ensuing three months at the latest, and I have sanguine hopes that when you visit us in the spring, as I suppose you intend doing, you will find, what you have never yet found, our party here efficiently and thoroughly organized.

Our party here are in the finest spirits, and our opponents utterly disheartened. Great as may have been the changes in the Western District, I do not believe them equal to those in our section of the State. I have lived here near four years, and my business, even if I had not the inclination, has forced me to calculate, until I believe I can do it with tolerable accuracy, the ebbs and floods of the political tide. I never was a sanguine calculator, as on at least two occasions, you have seen. Yet I do most sincerely believe that if the election for Governor were to come up today you would receive a decided majority in this section of the State, and we are daily and hourly gaining strength. This the Whigs themselves freely admit.

Johnson will probably be our candidate for Congress in the 1st district. His foolish and uncalled for quarrel with Campbell may injure him some. Still he will be easily elected. I have no doubt that the Whigs will run two candidates in the 2d district. Reneau has already announced [..]7 candidate, and will not back out for any body. The leaders are dissatisfied at this; and are urging Gen. Brazelton8 to run. If he should decline, of which I do not think there is any prospect, then Wm. Williams or Parson Lewis9 will be the second man. I repeat that there is no doubt in my mind that two Whigs will run, and, if so, Gen. Frazier can be easily elected. In this district Blackwell will run, and will be elected. His opponent is not yet determined on. Hints are thrown out that it will be Luke Lea, but I do not believe it. He is their strongest man, but Blackwell can beat him. Neither Williams nor Campbell will be willing to back out, and the Democrats, perfectly united among themselves, are anticipating great sport from the contest. Campbell, as he passed through here on his way to Washington, said to our friend Dr. Ramsey, "The Whigs will have to run me in preference to Williams," for said he, "although I voted for the bankrupt law, I also voted to repeal it, while Williams voted for it and against its repeal." They dread the bankrupt law, and well they may! We intend to contest every inch of ground in E.T. both for Congress and the Legislature. Even where success is hopeless, the beneficial effect of such a contest on the vote for Governor will more than repay the exertion.

You may have seen my notice of the Clay meeting in this place. Strange as the account may have seemed, it was no exaggeration. They had runners out for six weeks in this and the adjoining counties—notices were published in their papers weeks in advance—and hundreds of printed handbills were circulated and posted up at all the cross roads and at all the public places in this and the adjoining counties. Yet, although it was court day, and a very fine day, at the most leisure season of the year, there were not two hundred persons—men, hogs, and Democrats—present! Less than the number of votes given against you in this town alone at the last election. Is not this a sign? I believe, you know Ham Scott. Ham was one of "the runners" sent out to bring the people in to the meeting. He rode two weeks, Sundays not excepted. I saw him on the morning of the meeting, and asked him if they expected a large crowd. "Why, said he, there's no use in telling a lie about it, for you'll soon see. There'll be but dam'd few here—not twenty who don't come on other business. Two years ago, you could ride through the county and just shake a coonskin and draw the farmers from their corn fields; but now, they would not walk ten steps to see Jesus Christ himself if they thought he was a Whig." If you know Scott, you can imagine the energy with which he would make such a speech.

I hope to hear from you as often pending and during the canvass as you can find it convenient. Your hints and suggestions would be valuable to me under any circumstances; but are doubly so situated as I am, with scarcely one safe prudent counsellor to consult with. Editors usually complain of being troubled with too much advice. This is not, and never has been, my case. In reply to inquiries as to the best course to pursue in important matters, I have so long been accustomed to the reply, "O. I don't know—use your own Judgment," that I have long since ceased to ask advice here. I have long thought that the Democracy of the different sections of the State did not act with sufficient concert. Would not the appointment of corresponding committees at Knoxville, Nashville, and Jackson do much to remedy the evil?

I shall be at Nashville about the 10th of Feb. If I have time I intend to visit your town if it were only to see your brother, to whom I beg you give my kindest regards.

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

Nashville Decr. 20th 42

December 20 1842

I send you the enclosed that you may see what we will have to contend with in Sumner. Guild is yet here. I have said nothing to him of Barrys course or Trousdale's expectations. If we wish it, Guild will be our Candidate. He is the man and the only man that Campbell fears. Barry wishes Donelson to run for the Senate (that he may be beat). He (Barry) will run for the lower House with out opposition. This will Elect Doct. Peyton to the Senate and all of which Bailey has arranged before leaving for New Orleans.

I am not sure of the propriety of a compromise now. Some of our friends are for it, but they are those who want to get in to place without fighting and do as they please when in. We will succeed in this County and District if we can hold together and not have a brake up. Things are in a very delicate condition all over the State & it is only so since the rise of the Legislature. Their is great dissatisfaction and Distrust of some of our leading men. If we get these Knotty points settled all will go well and we shall have an easy time. Your majority will be 12 to 20 thousand.

Suffer me to say to you to avoid as far as possible in mixing up in local matters. I hope you will come in soon and remain long enough to put things all right.

Our old friend The Doct has not done as I expected in the money affair. I will see him and look round and write you in two or three days. Perhaps I may hear of it in some other quarter. He has it and must loan it.

[PS.] I have much to say to you on many subjects. The manner of conducting the Union &c &c.

1. On December 15, 1842, Thomas R. Barry wrote Armstrong that "there is a move making to bring out Col Guild for Congress vs Campbell." Barry states that some three hundred Democrats will not vote for Guild because he had supported creation of the Bank of Tennessee. Guild's nomination would be a great injustice to Trousdale, "who has nearly broke himself in the Democratic cause." ALS. DLC–JKP. Barry's reference is to the 1843 election in Tennessee's Eighth Congressional District.

2. Thomas R. Barry and William Trousdale. Barry had recently resigned

Trousdale, a Gallatin lawyer, won election to the Tennessee Senate, 1835–36, but resigned to serve in the Seminole War. After losing races for Congress in 1837, 1839, and 1845, he won the governorship of Tennessee and served from 1849 until 1851.

3. Joseph H. Peyton and Balie Peyton. Joseph H. FROM WILLIAM C. DUNLAP

Dear Sir

Bolivar Decr 20th 1842

Yours of the 15th Inst was received by the last mail. I regret that both my health & pecuniary circumstances will prevent me from being a candidate for Congress in this District. I am wholly unable to ride about and make speeches. I could travel to the Courthouses in the District but I do not believe that I could make speeches. The injury I received was much greater than any of my friends believed it was. I do candidly believe that we can elect a Democrat from the District if we will all act in concert; I will have this attended to on the Circuit in January next.

You are very much mistaken in Coe’s aiding any of our candidates by being one himself; there is a deep rooted hatred by all the Whigs to Coe and he is so bitter in his speeches that if he was a candidate he would draw the party lines so strong that no Democratic candidate could get any Whig votes; we want a man to go and attack their measures with reason & to persuade the people that they have been imposed on by the Whigs. Stanton of Memphis is the man to run and he can unite Shelby County on the National Armory & Naval Depot being located at Memphis.

I want J. J. Potts to run for the Senate; Geo. W Smith as the floating Member from this, Fayette, & Shelby; Edwin Hickman for Rep. of Shelby; Wm A Jones for Fayette; and Austin Miller or Edwin Polk for Rep of Hardeman. With such a ticket we can increase the Democratic vote five hundred in this Congressional District. I believe they all can be got to run. I would willingly give up my office if I could serve the Democratic cause better than any other Gentleman in the District; But my honest opinion is that Stanton can serve the party as well if not better than myself; he speaks well, is personally popular and mixes finely with the people.

I find in my intercourse with the people in this Circuit that there are many Whigs who will not act any longer with their party and all they want is a Democratic candidate, against whom they have no prejudice, to vote the ticket; I have not the least doubt that at this time there is a democratic majority in this Congressional District. I know of one District in this County where they vote 85 votes and only 7 Democratic that I confidently believe a large Majority would now vote with us; the only men of influence in the District—to wit the McKinnie's, six in number, told me last week when I was at their house (where I stayed two days hunting) that they would not vote for Clay or any person who advocated his principles; these are some of the strongest US Bank men in the District that have changed against it and although they do not say they have abandoned the Whigs, they must vote for us. There are fewer changes in Fayette than either of the other counties.

I regret very much that I was from home when you were here that I could have had a full & free conversation with you; My Mother was in Miss. and detained me attending to her. I will write you from Raleigh in February next by which time I can know the views of all our friends.

FROM J. GEORGE HARRIS

My Dear Governor:                  Nashville Dec. 20. 1842

Your several letters of late date are received; and I have given them all consideration. The proceedings of the Anti-Clay meeting at Columbia were deferred from day to day, but you will see that I have published them at last and shall forward 100 copies to the committee as directed.2

With reference to the National Convention, there seems to be a difference of opinion so wide as to make it quite improbable, in my judgment, whether it would be possible to bring about a union in favor of the day designated by the democratic members of our Legislature.3 I wrote my friend Greene on the subject a month ago, but I see by a late paper (Post)4 that he takes ground in favor of having the time and place fixed by a Congressional Caucus. You know we are not in favor of this, but if it cannot be remedied, it must be regarded as the best we can do. Why Blair came out openly in opposition to the resolution of our democratic members,5 when no other move had yet been made upon the subject, I cannot divine. Owing to his position a great many papers have adopted his notions, and it would seem useless in my opinion, therefore, to persist.
Still if your judgment is otherwise, inform me so by return mail, and I will most cheerfully prepare as forcible an article as I can in favor of our first proposition.6

I thank you for calling my attention to the article in the Lynchburg Virginian on the subject of the Tariff.7 The manifest object of the leading Whig papers which publish articles of that character is to divide and conquer. They magnify the slightest apparent differences in sentiment into impassable gulf's, and by the policy of hair splitting endeavor to show that differences exist where in reality the text itself shows that there is no difference. I thank you for giving a sketch of the ground you occupy, and am happy to find that it strictly accords with my own views of the subject. In no respect, not upon a single point laid down, do we differ.

If I understand the Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren and Polk doctrine it is this:

1st That we should have a Tariff of duties on imports just sufficient for defraying the annual expenses of the General Government, and no more.

2d That this Tariff should be laid by Congress with the most careful discrimination incidentally or accidentally releaving such necessaries as salt, tea, sugar, &c from taxation, and protecting, as a matter of course and as far as may be, such American interests as Congress may decide to need it most.
December 20 1842

3d That the principle of protection is recognised so far only as it is accidental in levying duties to raise the necessary revenue.

Am I right? These are the cardinal points, and if I have not a correct view of the subject, I ask you in all candor and fact and true friendship to show me wherein I have misunderstood the doctrines of our old school.

This is a question which I have rarely ventured to touch in the detail. For I know that while there is a wide difference between our general doctrines [on] the subject and Clay's American System, the field is broad enough to fight against Clay's High Tariff without becoming entangled. But among our own prominent friends you know there are so many different shades of opinion when we approach discrimination that it were impossible to do justice to all and injustice to none in the detail, and yet have harmonious union. My object is, has been, and will continue to be, to unite with you and your friends, upon the subject; and I do most [. . .] regret that I was not more thoughtful than [. . .] any remarks upon the article that I copied approvingly from the Albany Argus subject to such an inference as is drawn by the Lynchburg Virginian.

It is the object of such papers to drive us either upon Scylla or Charybdis. They do not intend we shall ever have the benefit of the word judicious. They would wreck us upon doubtful doctrine of Direct Taxation, upon the rather unpopular (but too just) provisions of a horizontal Tariff, or swamp us in the dangerous sea of a Protective Tariff. It is their mode of electioneering, at this moment, and such articles as that which the Virginian copied from the Mercury is calculated to do us no good at this juncture.

I have written hastily, and have been somewhat more explanatory than usual—but I am writing a confidential letter to you. Be kind enough at some moment of leisure to state wherein (if at all) I have erred in the text, as touching our position on the Tariff.

J. Geo. Harris

The Globe of October 28, 1842, carried an editorial objecting to the November 1843 date selected by the Tennesseans for the National Democratic Convention. The editorial suggested that a date closer to the election would be better and that the traditional May date would be most suitable.

6. No article in defense of the November date has been found in the late December or January issues of the Union.

10. The same obliteration, as noted above, has rendered part of this word illegible. The Nashville Union of December 23, 1842, carried an article on a meeting of Dickson County Democrats at Charlotte on December 17. The Dickson County resolutions called for early organization of Democrats in the Ninth Congressional District, selection of legislative candidates for the state legislature and nomination of a single candidate for Congress.

FROM HENDERSON K. YOAKUM

My Dear Sir, Murfreesboro' Decr 22, 1842

You are fully advised of matters in these parts. And of the almost hopeless position into which we are thrown by false friends & far sighted federalism. Yet we are too proud to complain, and I hope, too patriotic to surrender. I have watched with some attention the course of some of our friends in the Legislature on the question of districts—and have come to the conclusion that they were more particular to secure & guard their own particular interests than to provide for the general welfare. They have acted the part of Webster in the Ashburton treaty—in securing their own sections, they have left to the enemy other sections that justice, services rendered, and sound policy required should be protected.

But we love our country better than our own local advantages. We fight for the good doctrines still—they are our doctrines, we cherish them, and hope to live to see their triumph in every part of our country. We place you high in the list of our good friends, & will not forget the good you have tried to do us.

The seat of Government will be a serious question with us. Yet we will not be foolish about it—we will go for the location at some central point, first, to have it out of the commercial influence; secondly, to place it where, in the language of Mr Madison, it can look with the most "equal eye" over the whole country.②

Capt. James S. Smith and David M. Currin Esq. will be our candidates for the lower house.③ Further we say nothing, and know nothing, and, I fear, can do nothing.

We are looking for you here, to take Christmas with us. We have much to say to you, and to hear from you. You will not disappoint us, but will accompany Mrs Polk to see her friends.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, McMinnville, December 23, 1842

On my return home from Woodbury, on yesterday, where I had been since Monday last, I received your letter of the 15th inst.① and hasten to reply to it by to-day's mail. I am greatly pleased to hear of the favorable appearance of matters in the Western District. I had previously been informed by your brother② in Nashville, during the first week of the Supreme Court, that you had returned from the South to Columbia, and that there was a good prospect of some favorable arrangements as to candidates in the West, especially in the Hardeman Congressional district.③ On the whole, I think our political affairs in Tennessee wear a good aspect. In the Congressional districts we have been wronged. I voted against the whole arrangement. Even in this district Turney contrived to do us great injustice.④ He united with the Whigs in putting Cannon to the Rutherford district,⑤ making its population 72,000 and leaving this district but 61,000. Whereas, if Cannon had been left where she desired to be placed, one district would have had 65,000 and the other 68,000. He did this to give the preponderance in the number of votes in this district to the Country east and north of the Caney fork, intending to be a candidate in time to come. Hop did not get to Nashville in time, or this would have been prevented. Sam now intends to run for the Senate, and is the only democrat in his district who can be elected. He is pledged to Hop and myself to run for the Senate—and will help me for Congress with all his might against anybody, but especially Cullom whom he hates, if Cullom should become a candidate which I hope he will not. He has strong inclinations however, although he confidentially informed me long before any bill passed, that he had not the slightest wish to offer in any possible event. I had consulted him as a friend, and informed him in confidence, that I expected to be a candidate, and desired to be in the next Congress, but believed that I should not desire a re-election. He is a selfish man, and the Whigs of Jackson and White are pressing him hard. He says the democrats in his quarter are dissatisfied at my becoming a candidate to soon. The time I left to Hill, Locke, Gen. Smartt, Ford and other friends in Coffee &c. They announced me before I came home from Nashville at the close of the session; and deemed it absolutely necessary to do so to prevent Mr. Hopkins and possibly others from popping out before me—things which would have produced perfect distraction in the district. Hopkins of course will not interfere with me. I am not sure that Cullom will stand back. He has literally done nothing since 1835. The Whigs of course hate him less than they do me. Judge Caruthers and his strikers, who wish to remove him as a candidate for Judge next fall are pressing him—and with the Whigs, and a wing of the democracy in Overton, Jackson and Fentress, he may beat me. The leading democrats of White are for me to a man—on this side of the Caney fork he cannot get 50 democratic votes. The democratic majority in the district is about 1100—and the majority of the entire vote of the district above the Caney fork is about 1000. So stand matters. Some of our friends have, I believe, written to Cullom to try to keep him back and prevent a split. Others will do so; I hope how many. He still says he dont wish to offer, but I dont believe it. If he does, the Whigs can elect a man by a plurality. I have no wish or desire to serve in but one Congress. I shall want something else afterwards or nothing.

Ford's paper alludes to a young man named Minnis, living at Sparta, formerly of Jackson. He is nobody—but he is in correspondence with Cullom. I have my spies on all of them—as far as is proper for my own safety and government. I wish you could see Cullom. You have promoted him—and a word from you, predicated on his declarations to everybody that he does not wish to run now, would settle him—a word deprecating the evils of a split. I am in great trouble about the business.

In this county we have no candidates. In Cannon, H. Trott\(^\text{12}\) will be elected without opposition. Northcutt\(^\text{13}\) is removing from the state. In DeKalb, two Whigs are out.\(^\text{14}\) The County is nearly balanced between the parties. In due time our folks will start a man—I think Col. Tubbs\(^\text{15}\) living in the Smith portion of the County. It is possible Hopkins will offer for the Senate here, but Lowry or Gen. Patton will most likely be the Senator.\(^\text{16}\) In White, England and Gen. J. B. Rodgers, Whigs, are said to be candidates for floater from White, Fentress & Van Buren.\(^\text{17}\)

I have visited DeKalb to advise our friends. I shall go to Van Buren next week. I have written to Batey and Gresham in Fentress,\(^\text{18}\) advising them to harmonize with the democracy of the district, and act in concert as we have much at stake. If Fentress or Van Buren, on agreement, shall run a democrat, in harmony, he will be elected. Blackwell is out in 3rd district.

If I was clear of Cullom, I could with the aid of Sam Turney, carry everything in the district except the two representatives from White and Jackson. I wish I was clear of him. Can you devise no plan. He has lately, as he came to Nashville, visited Gen. Jackson. He pretends to reverence him greatly. I wish to old Chief had admonished him of the evil of splits, and of the greater evil of being taken up by the Whigs. If he had done so, it would have been of powerful influence. A word from him would settle it now.

S. H. Laughlin

La Grange, Tennessee. December 23, 1842

Maclin states that the gentlemen of Memphis who invited Polk to speak in that place feel neglected and would appreciate an answer to their letter, which Maclin says he handed to Polk.¹ Polk's recent speech at La Grange converted some of the Whigs.² In Maclin's opinion Polk can beat Jones by five thousand votes; however, Dunlap's efforts to have Fentress or Miller³ run for Congress will endanger the election of Democratic legislators in the area. Maclin has written Dunlap encouraging him to run, for he can defeat J. B. Ashe, the probable Whig candidate.⁴ The recent dissatisfaction by "merchants, Shavers, and money dealers" over Maclin's vote for the court bill⁵ has subsided, and the local Democrats will come out for the bill since four-fifths of the people in the area favor the measure.

My dear Sir. Washington Decr 25th, 1842

Our frd. A. V. Brown informs me you wish a negotiation for 4000 d. at N. York, to right up your affairs, & put you in comfort. I know no one in N. York save a few lawyers, who will be here in a few days, when I will give any aid in my way. Now my frd. the little sums you got fr. me you need not provide for, as I am free from debt, well sheltered, & well salaried. In the next place, If you want a sponsor, I will be one, & A. V. Brown says he'll be another, which is all needed for 4000 d.

Nothing is yet settled here—Congress sober, & at work—scared by the charge of idleness during the last session. The Whigs are depressed at all points I have seen, & are disponding of Mr. Clay's prospects; still they cannot induce his numerous & rich friends to agree but that he is the stronger "Richmond."¹ The mass think Scott is, & Buchanan says in the end he thinks that Clay & Scott will give way & that Judge McLean² will be run. Now I don't think Clay will ever assent; he would prefer Scott. Judging from what I have heard from the Ky people and from the same authority, I think Mr Clay will not withdraw, let what will come. Certain it is his especial Ky frds must change their minds, that agst. a very fixd. purpose to the Contrary.
I think the indications here too strong to admit of doubt that Mr. Van Buren will be run. It seems now to lie between him & Mr. Calhoun.

Old Tecumseh says he'll go in for the race—wears a red Jacket, & looks the warrior. But he is for the old place of Vice. How he stands I have not yet learned sufficiently to give a fair guess. Buchanan also said to me he thought the indications were now for Van B. & yourself. This is a ground, if as well defined as Mr. B. thinks, of course, will be pressd. V.B. is weak before the people; but as a man of established doctrines strong. More of this anon.

Should be happy to hear from you, & the news at home.

No Whig West of the mountain will again run for Congress, says A. V. Brown, except Milton B. All in health & well housed at Brown's. My sincere regards to Mrs P. For yourself accept my best wishes.

FROM JOHN W. CHILDERESS

Murfreesboro, Tennessee. December 26, 1842

Childress recalls Polk's earlier offer to purchase a saddle horse needed for the 1843 campaign; now in need of extra money Childress agrees to sell. Henderson's reinstatement as postmaster has not excited the Whigs; all of the Democrats are pleased, except Keeble, who denounces his party and may join his wife's Whig kin. Childress accepts the loss, which some Democrats would encourage. Rutherford County Whigs will field a strong ticket for the state legislature; Democrats will run candidates for the lower house, but none for the state senate or congressional seats. Some observers think that a bi-partisan effort to make Murfreesboro the state capital might produce a compromise ticket, but Childress thinks that "party feelings will in all probability overcome their sense of interest." Nicholson likely will stand for the legislature from Maury County. Reportedly Watterson's friends in Bedford County are displeased with Polk, for they suspect that he favors Long over Watterson in that congressional district.

FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington Decr. 27th 1842

Your late letters have come safely to hand & I now proceed to answer them. On the arrival of Judge Catron a consultation was held as to the best mode of ascertaining whether a loan could be negotiated for you or not. Catron will see Butler of N.Y. so soon as he reaches here. Johnson will try through Vanderpoal, whilst I will try to do something through Faris of N.Y. & Ingersall (C. J.) of Philadelphia. I do not think we constitute a good board of commissioners, but we will not fail to do our best. I have had an interview with some of the money dealers of this City, who express the opinion that such an arrangement could be hardly made in this City.

In relation to the other matter, I have to say that though at a distance, you have formed a very just opinion of the present position of parties & your relation to them on reference to the Vice Presidency. If Van Buren gets the nomination—your position, will place you on the same ticket—with Johnson your only competition. The fact of his having campaigned for the first office—against Van Buren, Buchanan, Calhoun & all others will probably cancel his claims on the score of restoration & make no one interest anxious to take him up. At least such is the present appearance of things. Van Buren I think will be the nominee, & if your present friendly relations with Mr. Calhoun & his friends can be preserved, I think there is no doubt in the case. This will be very difficult to be done. His friends are zealous & when we answer that we are for the nominee, then they want to know how Tennessee will vote in the convention. Evasion of that question leads to suspicion that Tennessee is for Van B. & that the fact is suppressd. from policy. Did you ever correspond with Ellmore?5 Pickens told me today that he had seen it & that it was perfectly non committal. He did not speak of it complainingly in other respects but still I wanted to know how he became acquainted with the fact, if it were so.

Mr C's friends want the convention postponed untill spring 12 months—to give time they say for a full expression of the party wishes in the case. We still insist on the time fixed by our friends in the Legislature.6 They7 insist not only on the furthest time, but wish it to be one of the principles of action in the convention that each Congressional district shall have a vote & that it shall be given directly as the vote of that district & not by the delegates getting together & balloting amongst themselves & which ever shall get the majority carry the vote of that state. They plead intensely for this & as the news papers will presently be full of it, I submit it early for your consideration. I do not see at present how such a rule would hurt you & if it did not I should not care to dissent from Mr. C's friends in establishing it. I do not think any rule or mode of voting would Save him—but I want him to have as little cause of complaint as possible. I do not think any thing is to be apprehended from Stephenson or King.8

In relation to myself & whether I shall be again a candidate, I am in much perplexity. If possible I should like very much to be in the 28 Congress, in reference to the subject about which I am now writing—but the number of my children—the feeble health of my wife9 & the almost total neglect of my private affairs for several years past—admonish me of the difficulties in the way of my offering. But I will take my position in a few weeks one way or the other & I desire you to say to your Brother10 that such will be the case & that I hope the delay will not incommode him in his views.

I have a strong inclination to settle at Columbia for the Education of my children—renting first & buying after my means would enable me to do so with convenience. It is a position more elegible than Giles for purposes of education or of politics—for you must remember the state must have governors after your time & all my colleagues here insist that I shall keep in position, whether I offer for Congress or not. Moving objects are however the only ones that catch the public eye & it is therefore probable that if I retire for two years however essential to my private affairs—the democracy of the State would learn to do without me & leave me to that obscurity, to which my necessities might have driven me. On the whole I must beg of my friends to give me a little more time to make a decision of so important a matter as this is growing up to be in my future destiny.

My best regards to Mrs. Polk with the assurances that I should be very happy to continue in Congress, untill I saw her safely installed for 4 years in the house right opposite the Presidents lately occupied by Lrd. Ashburton. The very one in which “the mistress Vice President” should reside.

FROM J. G. M. RAMSEY

Mecklenburg, Tennessee. December 28, 1842

Ramsey recalls what he has written to Col. McMullen at Richmond,¹ presenting Tennessee’s views in regard to the next National Democratic Convention and campaign: the Tennessee Democracy’s position should be made known at the Virginia Democratic convention in March and in the Virginia legislature during the winter of 1842–43; the National Democratic Convention should be held in November of 1843 rather than May of 1844²; Johnson’s name on the Democratic ticket would threaten the success of that ticket all over the union and especially in Tennessee; the Democratic party in the union owed much to Polk; the party in Tennessee owed him everything; and Polk would bring stronger support to the ticket in 1844 than would any other man in the union. Ramsey concludes his letter to Polk by reporting the names and prospects of several East Tennessee candidates in the 1843 elections.

Dr. Sir                                   Paris Decr 29, 1842

Since writing to you a few days since I have rec'd a letter from our friend C. Johnson & regret to say that he most positively declines a reelection. So we must do the best we can. There is to be a convention for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress at Dover on the 18th Feb. next. I reckon Mr. Hardwick will be the nominee. There is already a candidate out here, Mr. James T Dunlap. I have not learned whether he will be willing to rest his pretentions with the convention. I will try to get him to do so.

I think we have a fair prospect for collision in our ranks for the presidency. I apprehend a breaking up of our party so soon as a nomination is made. I fear Calhoun's friends will not yield to a nomination. If so the south will separate from us. I am decidedly for Calhoun but will leave him if he is not the choice of a fairly gotten-up convention of Democrats. I am for the principles of our party whether to be administered by a Northern or a Southern man—yet I prefer the Southern be run.

FROM TIMOTHY KEZER

Dear Sir

Nashville Jan. 1—[1843]

I read last night a list of the Several County Committees, together with a communication from the Maury Committee, and your letter advising us that the document intended for general circulation was also forwarded. The latter however did not come, and the object of this letter is to notify you of that fact. We would have supplied the deficiency, by writing one ourselves, but deemed it advisable to wait for your plan, knowing that it would be better adapted to the end in view. We hope therefore to receive it by Tuesday's mail, that we may be enabled to send them to all parts of the state by Saturday night. The Committee met last night, and matured some plans for a more vigorous action in future. We made out a list of all the persons in our County, to whom we are to apply for money, to set our War in motion.

I have had a talk with Col. Guild, and assured him that the whole democracy of Davidson would support him to a man, with enthusiasm. He says he could beat any Davidson County Whig. Tomorrow we intend to call on him—all of us together—and endeavour to obtain his consent to run. Not letting it be known that we have anything to do with it, he making the announcement at Gallatin. We will then write letters to the Sumner and Smith Committees expressive of approval, and entire willingness to unite on him. Our County Candidate will be attended to this week if possible.

The Whigs are already before hand of us in this county. They are—as we have learnt since you left us—perfectly organized. Every civil district has four men, whose duty it is to register and report an exact state of the two parties—names and politicks.
Rest assured however that we will give them the best fight, they ever encountered in this County.

I have read a letter from Col. Laughlin informing me that he had sent two of his warm and influential friends—one from Coffee the other from Warren—to Mr Cullum, offering to submit his claims to a District Convention, pledging himself and friends to support Mr Cullum, or any third person selected, provided Mr Cullum will promise the same on his part.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Washington 4 Jany 1843

I rec'd yours of the 27th1 today from Nashville. I rec'd a letter from J. T. Dunlap shortly after my arrival & also one from Fitz2 to both of which I answered urging them to have a Convention & but one Candidate run. In all my correspondence I have urged the same thing & I hope they will settle it amicably. I do not see how I am to run under any circumstances—a wife & two & prospects for a third3—poor & sickly & getting old. I cant upon my pay support them here if I could get them along safely & to leave them, I had as well be divorced. After being here 20 mo. out of 24 how can I spend all my time traversing hills & dales only again to be absent nearly all the time & make nothing. I am convinced our friends will have patriotism enough to run but one & I can do them perhaps more good as a private gentleman than a Candidate.

Foster has been to Springfield—and shortly after petitions were in circulation begging the Genl.4 to run for the lower House—so as to secure Henry5 in the Senate from Robertson & Montgomery. If that should be the movement I have urged J. W. Judkins (Cross plains) to run for Robertson—Dr P F Norfleet for the Senate (of Port Royal)) and Joseph Sturdevant (Clarksville 7 miles below) to run for Montgomery. That ticket will secure us Robertson & Montgomery in the Senate & the House in Montgomery. Sturdevant is a Virginia lawyer, democrat & Methodist, of good sense & unexceptionable character. Norfleet is a man of fine sense, speaks well and a Baptist. J. W. Judkins is a merchant active, keen & shrewd & personally beloved by every one except the Cheatham gang. I mention these things to you that you may not press W. B. J. or Jas Dortch, neither of whom tho personally popular would do as well as the others. They have been too much identified in all my races. I have written them to use all proper means to get the others out. With that ticket we can not be beaten for the Senate or in Montgomery. In all the other Counties we are safe. Cherry should be made to run in Stewart. I fear some difficulty, tho no danger in Dickson. Majr. Young (Yellow Creek) is violently opposed to Hardwicke & Eubanks & wishes to run himself. I fear his personal popularity is not sufficient. Robert McNeily is our best man in that County tho not so popular as Eubanks. He discusses the questions well. If Hardwicke runs for Congress I presume Gray will run for the Senate. The people of Humphreys & Benton will never be fooled again. Wiley will do very well.

So much for home affairs. Here we hear nothing of political movements except from the friends of Calhoun. They are unwilling to [agree to] a convention before the next Congress for obvious reasons. Calhoun's treaty speech looks a little squally. He contrasts with evident pleasure, the course of Webster & himself with the conduct of the preceding Administrations greatly to the disadvantage of the latter upon the slavery questions arising from the Capture of some of our ships. Would you be surprised to see him & Webster fighting side by side in the next presidential Campaign? Suppose they make a treaty with Mexico & Texas & acquire Texas for us. How will that work? especially if they can show as is hinted, that Van B. & his Cabinet opposed any treaty or purchase. Whatever can be done by the Executive to operate in the next elections will be done & when they Cease to hope for themselves will be thrown on that side. I have been greatly disgusted with the course of his friends in defeating Bedford Brown—just as they did in defeating J W Jones—and just as they will do if they can in the presidential race. The Mercury justifies the Course of his friends in defeating Brown. In the same way Rhett was defeated by Pickens friends voting for Huger, an old Federalist & latitudinarian, more recently however a Union Man.

Cass is here. I think there is more danger of his being taken up for Vice than old Dick notwithstanding the Missouri nomination. We are exceedingly cautious here, lest the friends of Calhoun hold the balance on that question in the Convention after his claims are rejected.
I am prepared the first chance to say a word about Milton Browns letter. We expect a Coffee Bill brought in. From your speech you had forgotten some important facts. Jackson reco. reduction in Coffee & Teas Dec 8' 1829. McDuffie reported a Bill & passed it—all voting for it in the spring of 1830. In the Bill of 1832, which you advocated it was made free. We voted for it. Verplanks Bill is now copying for you & be soon ready for you—in which a duty of a Cent was laid—& we voted agt. the motion to strike out. Brown has made a most infamous perversion of our Course which I will endeavor to expose. He made a speech agt. repealing the Bankrupt Law & perverted Bentons speech and Walls report as much as he has our Course. He is a vain, silly, weak no account sort of man. I have pressed AVB very much to offer & I think he will tho still hesitating.

I am to be mesmerized by Theo. Fisk in a few days. I wish to see if it will have any effect on my nervous system. Fisk says it will cure me. Tho I keep about the pain in my shoulder & left arm is very bad. I am very much troubled to get my coat off or on and shall not be surprised if I loose its use altogether. Owing to this I seldom leave my room except going to the Capitol.

I doubt whether we could all agree on a circular. We will however try. We talk of a caucus to recomend the time & place for a convention & the manner. The G[lobe] is much urged to still insist on the Spring of 1844 but he declines & expressed himself satisfied with the Ten. recomendations yet will not come out. He fears the South is the next election for printer.

We ought to make McKay speaker next time. J. W. J. has been silent—could not be kicked into our defence.

1. Letter not found.
2. William Fitzgerald. See Cave Johnson to Polk, December 18, 1842, and Fitzgerald to Polk, December 29, 1842.
3. Cave and Elizabeth Dortch Brunson Johnson had three children who survived. James Hickman and Thomas Dickson Johnson were born in 1840 and 1842, respectively. Polk Grundy Johnson was not born until November 2, 1844.
4. Reference is to Richard Cheatham, a Springfield merchant and farmer. He represented Robertson County in the Tennessee House for five terms, 1825–33 and 1843–45, and won election as a Whig to one term in the U.S. House, 1837–39.
5. A Kentucky lawyer and businessman, Gustavus A. Henry served one term in the Kentucky legislature, 1831–33, before moving to Clarksville, Tennessee. An active Whig, Henry won election to the electoral college in 1840, 1844, and 1852, but lost bids for a seat in Congress in 1841 and for the governorship in 1853.

6. John W. Judkins, P. F. Norfleet, and Joseph Sturdevant. Judkins was a justice of the peace in Robertson County from 1840 until 1848. Norfleet and Sturdevant appear in the 1840 census in Montgomery County, but are not identified further.

8. William B. Cherry, a farmer, represented Stewart County in the Tennessee House as a Democrat for three terms, 1839–45, and served as sheriff of that county from 1837 until 1840.

9. Jonathan P. Hardwicke, John Eubank, and probably William B. Young. Young, a Dickson County Democrat, is not identified further.

10. Robert McNeilly, a lawyer, farmer, and mill operator, represented Dickson County as a Democrat in the Tennessee House for one term, 1837–39, and served as circuit court clerk for twenty years, 1842–62.

12. In August of 1842 Calhoun analyzed the proposed Webster-Ashburton Treaty, which was before the Senate in executive session; he pronounced it, on balance, favorable to the United States. Calhoun focused criticism on the treaty's failure to protect American slave property from search and seizure by the British navy. Calhoun did give Secretary of State Webster credit for having reviewed U.S. claims in certain slave cases and claimed some credit himself for having championed that interest during the previous decade.

14. See Johnson to Polk, December 18, 1842.

15. John W. Jones, a lawyer from Virginia, won election in 1835 to the U.S. House, where he served five consecutive terms; he was Speaker during his last term. In 1839 House Democrats had nominated Jones to succeed Polk as Speaker of the House; several Nullifiers refused to support the caucus nominee and thus defeated Jones' bid.

17. Robert Barnwell Rhett, Francis W. Pickens, and Daniel E. Huger. An extreme advocate of states' rights and a South Carolinian loyal to John C. Calhoun, Rhett served in the U.S. House from 1837 until 1849. He succeeded Calhoun in the U.S. Senate in 1850, but resigned his seat two years later. Through his newspaper, the Charleston Mercury, Rhett espoused the right of secession and inveighed against the South's reliance upon the Democratic party. He was at the head of those who led South Carolina out of the Union in late 1860. Huger, a Charleston lawyer, sat in the South Carolina House, 1804–19 and 1830, and served as circuit court judge, 1819–30; on December 15, 1842, the South Carolina legislature chose Huger over both Rhett and Pickens to complete Calhoun's term in the U.S. Senate. Calhoun had announced in November his resignation from the Senate, effective at the end of the session.

18. The anti-Whig members of the Missouri legislature recently had nominated Martin Van Buren for president and Richard M. Johnson for vice-president; they also recommended the third Monday in November of 1843 as the date for the National Democratic Convention.

19. See Sarah C. Polk to Polk, November 7, 1842.

20. Reference is to President Jackson's First Annual Message.

21. George McDuffie, a lawyer, sat in the South Carolina House, 1818–1820; won election to seven terms in the U.S. House, 1821–34; served as governor of South Carolina, 1834–36; and won election twice to the U.S. Senate, 1842–46. On February 5, 1830, McDuffie, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, reported a bill "to reduce the duties on tea and coffee"; the act was approved on May 20, 1830.

22. The tariff act of July 14, 1832, imposed no duty on coffee; some teas were free, others not. 4 U.S. Stat., 589, 590.

23. Gulian C. Verplanck, a New York lawyer, sat in the U.S. House as a Democrat, 1825–33, and in the New York Senate, 1838–41. Serving as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, he introduced the compromise tariff legislation of 1832–33. On February 21, 1833, in accordance with Democratic strategy, Polk and Johnson voted against an amendment to strike out the duty of one cent on coffee.

24. In his U.S. House speech of January 3, 1843, Milton Brown defended the Whigs' Bankruptcy law of 1841 against Democratic repeal efforts. Brown argued that portions of the law now under Democratic attack had been supported by the Democrats in 1840. He cited Benton's Senate speech of May 27, 1840, and the Democratic minority bill reported to the Senate by Garret D. Wall on May 12, 1840, as evidence of the Democrats' stance in 1840. Wall, a lawyer, sat in the New Jersey General Assembly in 1827, served as U.S. district attorney for that state in 1829, won election as governor but declined to serve in 1829, sat in the U.S. Senate as a Democrat, 1835–41, and served as judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey from 1848 until his death in 1850.

26. Possible reference to Theophilus Fisk, who with A. F. Cunningham published the Portsmouth and Norfolk Chronicle and Old Dominion from 1839 until 1845. Fisk's "medical practice," if any, has not been identified.

27. Polk wanted the Democratic members of the Tennessee delegation to circulate a letter of rebuttal to Milton Brown's charge that in 1833 the Democrats had favored an import duty on coffee.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNLEY

Dear Sir

Washington Jan. the 4th 1843

Since I wrote,¹ I have visited Mr Benton several times in order to ascertain, if I could, his feelings in relation to the Vice Presidency, but have never yet had a free conversation with him on the subject, for the reason that there was always some person there to prevent it. But from his B's general conversations I still think he is for you or at least that he is not for Johnson, the proceedings of the democratick members of the legislature of Mosouri to the contrary not with standing.² I have conversed freely with a large majority of the democrats of N.Y. including Mr Wright, and if there is truth in men, N. York will not only suporit you in convention, but will exercise her influence beyond the limits of that state. They all give me every assurance that you are exclusively looked to by the friends of Mr. V. Burin³ in New York and they further add that Van is decidedly for you. Then in convention you will certainly get New York, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusits, Merriland, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippa, Louisianna. Johnson cannot count sertin on moore than Kentucky, Illa­nois, Indianna & Mosouri, even if Benton and Buckannan⁴ both do their best for him. Then you would stand the best chance for Connettacut, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Vermont, & Delaware, and an eaquil chance for Arkansas. Thus you will see that from my estimates you are almost certain to receive the nomination, and in fact, all here agree that if Van should be successful, that you as a matter of course will be the man. Now Sir I have given you a full and candied statement thus far, but Calhoon⁵ is the compettor of Van for the nomination and if he should be successful it is your defeat. C. and his friends are making tremendus exertions but I think he is sinking rapidly. But there is a third party being made—it is the Tyler party. This party is composed of the office seekers, and a class of politicians who have no fixed political principles, but are for a Sound Currency. The most dangerous men of all others, they call themselves the moderate men of all parties—and besides it is rummerd here that Tyler will make a Treaty for the annexation of Texas to the United States. This is likely true, and if he does it will give him some strenth in the South. If he has any sense he will do it as he has all to gain and nothing to loose. However, whatever strenth he may buy up with his patronage, or acquire in any other way, will I think innure to the benefit of Calhoon.
Would it not be well if such a Treaty should be made to address a letter to Van and if you please to Calhoun also, calling for their opinions on the subject.

Waterson now says he will not be a candidate for Congress. Jones I understand is very anxious to run; in fact he writes so himself, and I know not what to do. I dislike to be in his way.

FROM GEORGE W. ROWLES

Most Esteemed Governor, Cleveland, Tenn: January 5th 1843

On my return from the Circuit Court for McMinn County, I found your very acceptable communication of the 8th ult.¹

Your views in relation to the objections that may be urged against the bounds of the second Congressional District, are undoubtedly correct. That physic is already operating—by August its results will be both felt and seen in a political point of view. The Bill was the base thing of our opponents; they passed it through the Senate and House by nearly a party vote. The journals demonstrate their responsibility.

I have seen from the public press that you are still making bold and fearless attacks on the strong holds of our opponents; I doubt not but the result will manifest itself in an increase of democratic strength.

You have before this seen my formal announcement "that private business" would prevent my being a Candidate for Congress or either branch of the Legislature.² It is unnecessary to assure you that this step was taken under circumstances which no personal or political friend could censure me for conforming to. Believing, that I shall have the pleasure of seeing you in the Spring, I shall say no more on the subject until then. Mr. Blackwell has announced himself.³ He, or any other democrat, sound in principle and firm in his course, as I know him to be, shall receive my warm and zealous support. Mr. Torbitt I hope will have the field alone for Senator.⁴ But in relation to senator there is different opinions, but these will be all reconciled. Torbitt must be the man. James Lauderdale⁵ will run for county member for this county; Col. McMillin,⁶ wishes to run. A convention perhaps will be called, if necessary, to settle the matter between them. Mr. Stevens, or Vaughn\textsuperscript{7} will run I think it likely for Monroe County; it is uncertain who will run in McMinn.

The spirit of democracy here is looking \textit{onward}. In August her old legion throughout all East-Tennessee, will again plant their banner on its former proud eminence. Under the lead of a tried Captain, who before has led them to victory, they will again enter the field of battle, to make another glorious struggle for their ancient faith.

Please have the goodness to present my kindest remembrance to your brother Maj. Polk,\textsuperscript{8} and retain for yourself considerations of my highest regards and esteem.

\textit{Geo. W. Rowles}

P.S. I was married on the 2 inst. Mrs. Rowles\textsuperscript{9} was a whig; she declares now though, she is "neither Loco nor whig, but for Maj. Rowles in all cases." G. W. Rowles

5. James Lauderdale, a farmer and railroad promoter in Cleveland, served as sheriff of Bradley County from 1838 until 1842 and won election to two terms in the Tennessee House, 1843–47.
7. Henry H. Stephens and James Vaughn. Stephens, a member of the bar in Madisonville, won election to two terms in the Tennessee House, 1845–47 and 1851–53, and ran as presidential elector on the Democratic ticket in 1848. Vaughn, a resident of Madisonville, served as sheriff of Monroe County from 1834 until 1838.

\textit{FROM JULIUS W. BLACKWELL}

Athens, Tennessee. January 6, 1843

Blackwell writes that he has announced for Congress and will probably face Luke Lea. Blackwell believes that he can defeat "old Uncle Luke," and reports that Whig ranks have thinned since Polk spoke near Athens last August. Democrats should run candidates for every office, even in strong Whig counties, in order to maximize the Democratic vote. If that course had been followed before, Knox County "would not have been so Blue in 1840 & 41."

FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington January 6th 1843

On my return from Missii. I staid but a few days at Pulaski & these were devoted almost entirely to business. I then had but little idea of being a candidate. But since my arrival here, the applications have been such as to induce me to write my Brother & Thos. Martin on the subject of the effect of such a step on my private affairs, which they know as much about as I do and which are somewhat involved as you may well imagine. If they write favorably I expect to offer; otherwise, if they do not. In the mean time if it be injurious to our party interest to let the matter lay over so long, rather than do that injury I would rather you would set me aside at once & take measures to start some body else. If however such delay will do no special harm I will "try to come it" on reaching replies from my friends which I suppose will not be very long, if those replies will allow of it. I dislike this hesitation & delay as much as any body can do, but I cannot prevent it, but by stepping aside & opening the way to somebody else, which I am perfectly willing to do.

You see the Missouri nominations. Sevier I understand says that Johnson will not accept a nomination for Vice. This however I can hardly credit.

The under currents begin to run pretty rapidly & the parties shew a good deal of anxiety about the nomination, & many doubt (of our friends) whether a convention can be so held so as to give satisfaction.

I think Tyler's notion now is not to build up a special or third party, but so to manage as to come in as one of the Democracy for a nomination by the Convention. Try for that & if he cant succeed for himself, he & most of his friends go for Mr. Calhoun—vain hope! Write to me about the time & manner of voting in the convention as mentioned in my last letter.
Who lives in the house north of Judge Mack's & South of where Mrs. Rivers or Mrs. Booker lives? I think someone said it had been purchased by the Bank. Could it be rented? If not what other comfortable establishment convenient to the Academy could be rented, and where on your street between the square & the academy. Whether I offer or not, I have pretty well concluded to come to Columbia in order to educate my children.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir, Columbia Jany 6th 1843

Our committee here, have addressed a letter of which the enclosed is a copy to every County in the State, except some four or five, where they could not learn the names of suitable persons to whom to address. They request me to forward the enclosed one for Van Buren to you with a request, that you will address & forward it to the proper persons. They request also that you will furnish me with the names of the persons to whom you may address it. They have sent none to the new County of Putnam. If you think they should do so, send me the names and it will be attended to.

I regret exceedingly that any collision among friends has arisen in the mountain District, and hope as you have been announced that it may be amicably arranged & that you may run without opposition. Mr. Kezer writes to me that a proposition had been made by your friends to leave the matter to a District Convention. This is right, and was the only prudent course left, after it became certain that there would otherwise be a conflict among political friends. The proposition is such an one as cannot be declined. I would do anything in my power to reconcile these differences, but really I do not know what it is in my power to do more than has been done. There is danger that any attempted interference on my part might be construed into Dictation and still widen the breach. The letter of our committee here, which has been sent, will I hope have a happy influence.

I send you below, the names of the persons in the several Counties in your District to whom it has been sent.

P.S. The following are the names & Counties referred above, viz.

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to McMinnville and marked “Private.” Laughlin’s AE on the cover states that the enclosure was sent to “Worthington and others.” See notes 1 and 6 below. Published in ETHSP, XVIII, pp. 161–62.

4. See Timothy Kezer to Polk, January 1, 1843.
5. The Fourth Congressional District of Tennessee.
6. Polk’s postscript includes the following list: Liberty, DeKalb County, Thomas W. Duncan, Thomas Whaley, Thomas Durham, and William H. Judkins; Hillsboro, Coffee County, Archibald Price, Alexander E. Patton, Isaac H. Roberts, Reuben Price, Lecil Bobo, and William S. Wattersen; Sparta, White County, Isaac Taylor, Samuel Turney, Robert L. Mitchell, Henry Lyda, and J. C. Davis; Livingston, Overton County, Alvin Cullom, Hardin P. Oglesby, Creed Taylor Huddleston, Landon Armstrong, and Hiter; Jamestown, Fentress County, David Beaty and Thomas Grisham; and Gainesboro, Jackson County, Alexander Montgomery, Amos Kirkpatrick, Absolom Johnson, James Smith, and Matthew Cowen. Van Buren and Putnam counties are left blank; Laughlin’s AE on the cover indicates that William Worthington was the Van Buren County recipient.
FROM WILLIAMSON SMITH

My Dear Sir,

Washington City 10th Jany 1843

Yours of the 15th Ult.\(^1\) was received on my arrival here, on the 31st and in obedience to your request I sit down to give you a sketch of matters and things here. I am not likely to succeed in any portion of my business here. My claim is before the Judiciary Committee and the party lines are strictly & tightly drawn upon me. I had reason to believe Gov. Morehead from Kentucky could & would render me important service in the matter\(^2\) but the lines are so tight drawn they cannot be broke. Judge Milton Brown from Ten. being one of the principal actors in the play, perhaps the time may come when he will be out of my way. I shall in a day or two leave for Miss. as nothing can be done here, in my business.

I will now give you what information I have gathered on the Presidential Election and in doing this I wish it to be strictly confidential, as I shall name certain men & their course which might throw me in Collision with at home.

The Calhoun Party here are moving heaven and earth to fetch about his nomination. There is a portion [of] the Ala. delegation with D. H. Lewis at their head, the Miss. delegation (a letter which I have seen from one of them to the Contrary Notwithstanding), and perhaps some others from the south, which I do not know as my means of information are very limited having but few acquaintances here. They are using every means in their power to Stave off the National convention, insisting on me when I go home at all events to have it put off until may or June 1844. Our friend Genl A. Anderson is here. He boards with Mr. Calhoun and is very much wrought up to the belief that your future prospects are Identified with Mr. Calhoun, that you have no chance to be Vice President on the Van Buren Ticket, that Johnson will be the nominee. Your Ten. friends here think differently. Mr. Calhouns friends here say that you cannot be the Vice President under Calhoun owing to locality, but the[y] seem to feel no hesitation in saying, to your friends if he can be the President, you can have any thing at home or abroad under him. That is not my feelings in this matter. This inducement will be held out to you by the Calhoun party. Doct Gwin, Thompson, & Genl. Anderson have all taken particular pains to tell me these things since I came here. They are all boarding with Calhoun. And have no doubt but he has given such intimations. I think the Democrats of Ten would think you rather a Qere\(^3\) fellow, to see you on the Stump now supporting Mr. Calhoun, when they reflected what you said about 5 or 6 years ago. I wonder some of your friends here dont see and know that wont do.

Mr. Van Burens friends I think are laying Quiet rather than other wise. Your friends here particularly the Ten delegation appear sanguine that your name will be placed on the Ticket with V.B. I must confess I have some doubts. The Missouri Nominations dont look exactly right; perhaps they may get better. It is understood here it was a very close contest whether Van Buren or Johnson should be nominated in the Missouri Convention, for the Presidency. Waterson told me that Sevier (senator) told him that Johnson would not permit his name to be run for the Vice Presidency. Whether he has any authority for that I dont know.

The friends of Mr. Calhoun and those who profess to be your friends, that are Calhoun Men, say that you are too young, [that] your friends should not urge your claims, or rather that you should not permit them to do it, that it will be plenty time [for] you when Mr. Calhoun shall retire &c. I am at a loss what opinion to form in relation to the course that will be pursued by Mr. V. Buren & his friends between Johnson & yourself.
You no doubt are better informed on that than I am. Should Johnson Decline, there would then be no doubt.

I believe all has been said that occurs to me now. I shall be at the Convention in Miss. From what I could learn before I left home Calhoun will be nominated and you will be nominated for the Vice Presidency. If nothing better can be done, that we must submit to. Would that be best or make no nomination at all in Miss?

I fear I shall tax your time & patience in reading this letter, as I have no doubt you are receiving letters every day from other friends much better informed than I am, and can give you much more information than
I can, but none who feels a deeper interest in the matter than I do.

I wrote you Mr. Handy, the Editor of the Independent democrat had promised me he would place your name at the head of his Column for the Vice Presidency. I have received one of his papers, and I see he has not done it. I cannot tell the reasons.

Jany 13th. Since writing the above I have visited Mr. Benton in company with Lynn Boyd, Cave Johnson, Genl Houston of Ala. Your name was not mentioned. Benton spoke slightly of R. M. John, said he had better take a Mission off some where with a good salary &c &c. Boyd thinks you will be certain to be the nominee if John is not; thinks that doUBtful. It will be hard to leave him off, if V. Buren is taken up. My own opinion now is that Calhoun will have no chance for the Nominations, as he will only be able to carry some 4 or 5 of the southern states. From the tone of his friends here he intends to run any how, and split off a portion of the Democratic party. That is Bentons opinion.
I shall leave the day after tomorrow for Miss. and would like to hear from you before our state convention. Be assured however of one thing. Nothing shall be left undone by me to promote your nomination. I see that North Miss. is moving and will come thru strong, for Van Buren and yourself, so says Genl Gwin & Thompson both, and both of them will be willing to give you up for Calhoun, I think. My room is out.

FROM J. GEORGE HARRIS

My Dear Sir, Nashville Jan. 16. 1843

I leave for the north to-night, and shall probably be absent five or six weeks. I shall attend with all due faithfulness to the subject matter of our late conversation, and write to you from Washington. I have, according to your suggestion, conversed with Messrs. Hogan & Heiss.¹ To publish a magazine like that of the A vd. Guard,² would be attended with an amt of expenditure which they think they would be unable to raise. This is no doubt the fact. They are desirous of getting subs. to the Union say for 15th March to 15th Aug at $1 only, and I think that our party cannot do themselves more substantial service than to take the matter in hand throughout the State. You shall here from me at Washington certain.

J. Geo. Harris

ALS. DLC--JKP. Addressed to Columbia.

1. Thomas Hogan and John P. Heiss became publishers of the Nashville Union in late April, 1842. J. George Harris continued as editor until March 31, 1843, when Hogan and Heiss assumed total control. Hogan, a native of Pennsylvania and former editor of the Murfreesboro Weekly Times, remained connected with the Union until his death on May 11, 1844. Heiss, also a native of Pennsylvania, had been employed as financial officer of the Union in 1840; he managed the newspaper's business affairs until May of 1845, when he became business manager of the Washington Union.

2. Reference is to the Advanced Guard of Democracy, a Democratic campaign paper published weekly in Nashville by J. George Harris from April 23, 1840, through the following October.

FROM HENRY SIMPSON

Dear Sir. Philada. 16th Janry 1843

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 4th Inst. and take pleasure in communicating with you at this important period of our election affairs. We had a glorious meeting of the friends of Mr. Van Buren on the 7th Inst. and our celebration of the 8th Janry. 1815 passed off with a public sentiment in his favor for the next presidential term. It appears to be the general wish here, that you should be the candidate for the vice Presidency on the ticket with Mr. Van Buren, and if your state, as I have no doubt it will, should show a Democratic triumph at the ensuing elections, we can elect our candidates in 1844 & carry twenty out of the six and twenty states. Your being elected Govr. of your state, may not interfere with this arrangement, & from letters received from our friends lately at Washington City, it appears almost certain that you will be settled upon as the candidate for V.P. Col. Benton, Messrs. Allen, Tappan and Wright of the Senate, all go in warmly for Mr. Van Buren, as the candidate for the Presidency in 1844. Besides which, the preference given to him by our friend the Hero of New Orleans will make and now does make, a rally in his favor somewhat like the Jackson fever of 1824, 1828 & 1832. The Tyler men here are few and far between; but, I suppose that in your state they are more numerous, and that many stray sheep will return to the fold. Our friends Geo. M. Dallas, Henry D. Gilpin, Dr. Petrikin & others all favor the re-nomination of Mr. Van Buren, and although Mr. Buchanan has many friends in Penna. our state will ultimately go for Mr. Van Buren's being the nominee of a Democratic national Convention, to be held in this city & in Independence Hall, next 4th July, or some time next fall, and it is proposed, should the health of ex-President Jackson permit (and he be a delegate, that he [be] made President of said Convention). You will see from our proceedings at our late celebration, that you have been noticed for the vice Presidency and I can assure you, that you have very many friends in our city, county and state. Poor degraded Penna, lost as she is in the state of her finances,\(^7\) can never again be cheated out of her genuine vote for President and vice President, as in 1840.\(^8\) All parties here, strange as it may appear, seem to be anxiously waiting for the period to arrive, when they shall be under the rule of a democratic administration of the general government, being satisfied that the Federal whig party does not know how to administer it, so as to produce general prosperity and happiness. I shall always be pleased to hear from you . . . .

HENRY SIMPSON

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia.

2. Letter not found.

3. The friends of Martin Van Buren met at the Masonic Hall in Philadelphia on January 7, 1843. Andrew Jackson sent a message commending Van Buren for his faithful service; and Henry Horn, the presiding officer, toasted Polk as the next Democratic vice-presidential candidate. The celebration on January 8 commemorated Jackson's victory at the Battle of New Orleans.

4. Thomas Hart Benton, William Allen, Benjamin Tappan, and Silas Wright. A lawyer in Steubenville, Ohio, Tappan served as judge of the Fifth Ohio Circuit Court of Common Pleas in 1816 and as U.S. district judge of Ohio in 1833; he won election as a Democrat to one term in the U.S. Senate, 1839–45. He opposed slavery, but unlike his brothers, Arthur and Lewis, he rejected the abolition movement.

6. Although at this time Polk, Simpson, and other Van Buren supporters favored holding the National Democratic Convention in the fall of 1843, party leaders acceded to Calhounite demands for a later date. Convention delegates assembled in Baltimore on May 27, 1844.

7. Having borrowed large sums for the construction of its canal system, Pennsylvania struggled to service its $40 million debt, the annual interest on which amounted to $2 million. Additional loans with which to pay interest and to make further improvements on the canals increased the state's debts and brought its treasury to the edge of bankruptcy. In 1842 and 1843 Pennsylvania defaulted on its debt payments, but in 1844 the state paid its arrears as well as its current obligations.
8. Martin Van Buren lost Pennsylvania in 1840 by less than four hundred votes; Van Buren's Pennsylvania friends blamed the defeat on the apathy of those Democrats favoring additional bank loans for new public works programs.

FROM THOMAS HOGAN

Dear Sir. Nashville, Jan. 17. 1843

I received your friendly letter last evening and take pleasure in answering your inquiries. The letter of our committee has been sent already to nearly sixty counties, including the extremes of the State. Why you have not received a copy at Columbia I cannot divine. I wrote a short reply to the Maury letter about ten days ago, and handed it to Mr. Kezer to obtain the names of the committee. It should have reached you some days ago, unless he has mislaid it. The annunciation of candidates is not so easy a matter as we supposed. Maj. Claiborne will run for the senate, but prefers being called out by the County Committee, feeling some delicacy I suppose in accepting what might be regarded a nomination from one of his own choosing. We also addressed a letter to Col. Guild urging him to come out, but he has thus far declined answering. From his hesitating I should infer his willingness to run. If Peyton is to be the Whig candidate, I doubt not he will enter the lists. We are in a strait to procure candidates for the lower House. Connor on whom the duty devolves has not yet obtained Coleman's consent, though we hear from various sources that his democracy is of the right order. Nor have we been eager to bring our whole ticket in this county for another reason. It is rumored that Trimble, Foster 3d and another weak one will be the Whig ticket. These can be beaten, but if the Whigs had an idea of our being able to obtain strong men, they would make a better ticket. This is the reasoning of the older heads on our committee. Ewing, Rains, and Hollingsworth positively decline.

Respecting the Extra paper, I have to say that your suggestions are good and true. I know that a separate paper would commend a larger subscription list than the Union, but there are some insuperable objections in the way. The expense to us would be greater on account of making it up and getting material. Besides—we would necessarily be obliged to purchase more type, as we have not enough to keep the matter for an extra standing. Not only the expense but the length of time in procuring it would be in the way. We propose however to issue a prospectus for the Union, offering the Weekly paper at $1 from the 15th of March till the election, and we doubt not will get a large circulation by enlisting in our behalf the Cor. & County Committees. As soon as all our letters to the various counties have had time to reach their destination, we will start out our prospectus.

Capt. Jas. S. Smith will be out in Rutherford in a week or so. I saw him the other day. He feels sanguine.

They are rousing the "generals" in Cave Johnson's district. Gen. Cheatham runs in Robertson and Gen. Henry in Montgomery.

FROM JOHN A. THOMAS

My Dear Sir,

West Point, N. Y. Jan. 20. 1843

I had the pleasure to receive your letter of the 25th of Dec. several days ago, and desired to reply immediately, but in order that I might communicate the standing of Cadets Armstrong and Couts, I have de­layed my answer until the close of the January examination. Your letter was received before they were examined, and I took occasion to make known to each, your renewed solicitude for his success, and hoped this would stimulate them to acquit themselves well, but I regret to add, such was not the effect. Mr. Armstrong is near the foot of nineteen of his class who are deficient in mathematics; he is also found deficient in English Grammar, and is very low in French and drawing. He is a young man of good moral character, and since I have been in command of the cadets, I have employed him in my office to write for me, and excused him from a part of his military duty. I shall continue to encourage him, but I ought to tell you candidly that unless he evinces more talent than he has heretofore, he cannot go through the Institution. This is offered as my opinion, judging from what I know of him.

Mr. Couts was also found deficient, but only in one branch, Engineering, the most important, however, pursued by the class of which he is a member. He is very low in all his studies and I am persuaded that this is chiefly owing to idleness; he might stand higher. His conduct, I regret to say has not been good, and in order that you may know how reprehensible it has been I beg leave to give you an account of his course in reference to a cadet who was detected in the act of stealing a Turkey. A cadet who had been but a few months in the Academy, was seen by one of the Professors to knock over a turkey and put it into a bag. This cadet was seized by the professor & though he denied that there was a turkey in his bag, his assertion was shown to be false by its being emptied out of the bag. Cadet Couts who was near, and apparently in company with this young man, was called on to give his name, which he refused to do, and plead for him and requested the professor not to report him, although he had seen the whole transaction. The next day, I was directed by the Superintendent to order him to tell the name of the cadet, but he replied at once, that he had consulted with his friends in the Corps and had determined not to do it. I admonished him, & asked him if he was aware what he was doing. He not only disregarded my admonition, but proceeded to maintain that it was not dishonourable to “forage a turkey or pig, or indeed any poultry,” and that it was not so considered by the cadets, nor by the students of any college in the country. I will not now detail all the aspersions he cast upon his comrades to shield himself, but would add that he took this course with deliberation, for, ten days after the interview I had with him, he forwarded to the Chief Engineer a defence of his conduct, in which he avowed the most offensive principles. It is perhaps not unreasonable that we should sometimes find in the Academy cadets who would be fitter inmates for a house of correction, for, they come from all classes of society, and must necessarily bring with them the view of that society of which they have been members; but I confess I was amazed that Cadet Couts, who has been here nearly five years, and who is within six months of being graduated, should not only refuse to tell me the name of a cadet guilty of a disgraceful act but avow a code of morals fitted only for those who intend to lead lives of infamy. He has consulted his uncle Cave Johnston, and has forwarded to the Secretary of War a letter acknowledging his error, and I suppose he will be merely reprimanded. This the Chief Engineer has already done in the most severe manner. I suppose Mr. Couts will be graduated but you must see that he has done himself an irreparable injury. The cadet who committed the act was found out & immediately dismissed.

I am charged with the most responsible duty, the discipline of the Academy, and it behoves me to use my best exertions to maintain it in a manner creditable to the country, and this I am determined to do. It is perhaps not too much to say to you, that a great deal is expected of me, for I am enjoying the command & emolument of a Major, tho I am still a Lieut., and I was selected for the station, and without any application of mine. And if I had no higher motive, I ought not disappoint the expectations of my friends. By the time you will be President I hope to qualify myself for promotion. The army regrets most sincerely that it ever, even in feeling, favored Whigery, and if it can only be forgiven this time, such a thing will surely never happen again. I met many of your friends when I was stationed at Troy, and they all seemed anxious that you should be the candidate for Vice President, Henry Vail in particular. You could surely get the vote of N.Y. If I can serve you in any way I hope you will command me, and if Genl. Armstrong or any of your friends wish any thing done in my power it will give me great pleasure to comply with their wishes.

FROM JOSEPH R. A. TOMKINS

Dear Sir

Post office at Nashville Jany 20th 1843

Being here partly on business of a political nature—& being informed by Gen. Armstrong that you would like to hear how all things were going on in Sumner I cheerfully comply with his suggestion & commence with the business that brought me here.

Doct Peyton as you no doubt have seen came out for Congress one week since—at which we were all well pleased being as we supposed the most vulnerable & easiest to beat of any in his ranks. But to our great surprise & mortification on Wednesday morning last Thos. Barry also came out. This movement on his part was discountenanced by all the true friends of Democracy in Sumner & we immediately determined on holding a convention & ruling him out. Our reason for this was first his known opposition to Benton who he openly cursed in the streets & yourself & also Harris which made us question his Sincerity as a Democrat & besides, he is an advocate of the bankrupt law. But fortunately for him & us he saw at once the current was so strong against him he withdrew the next day after I left. It hapened that there was some five or six in this place from Sumner & we have determined to go on with the convention & nominate candidates for all the offices. Mr Barry as I understand from Majr Burford is willing to submit his claims which are but small.

After consulting our friends here & viewing the whole ground we have come to the conclusion that Guild is the man for Congress—although he would be making a great Sacrifice. But he has said to me that he perhaps might run if he had a fair field (this was said after Barry announced himself). Whilst on the subject of Guild, the Genl. was kind enough to let me see your letter to him written yesterday. I am pleased at your writing him (Guild). It will have weight.
For the senate I think Burford is the only man that can beat Collum if we can prevail on him to run. He is now here & does not positively refuse—write him if you think with us & urge him to come out. Campbell would not take an active part against him. Neither would Goodall.

As for the lower house we have two candidates which perhaps will do. They are right, but can’t Speak. I think that Barrys move will do good for we will not go on to organise & you may rely old Sumner will do things worthy of herself. I am pleased to find the people of Davidson so united in favour of Guild. I do not doubt but he can beat Peyton if we can get him out. Guild or myself will write you more particularly after monday next the day on which we have a meeting at Gallatin preparatory to a convention.

I am requested so say to you by Genl. Armstrong that the people of Davidson are in motion & the best will be done. Excuse the intrusion on you of this letter.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,

Washington 22nd Jan' 1843

I sent to your address the other day, the Journal of the Call Session & Verplanks original Bill reported in Dec. 1832. The Journals of the last session are not yet all bound & of course there is as yet some difficulty in getting a copy. I will send you the first I can get. I begin to fear if I make a speech on Browns letter, I shall have to draw it in by the rush sheets as every body else does. I have been expecting a Bill as recomended by the Sec of Tre. leaving Tea & Coffee but none as yet has been reported & I begin to doubt whether the Whigs intend to make any further provision for the Capt. The high Tariff, Cash duties &c has reduced importations to about one half what they were in the corresponding quarter of the last year, & of course we must have new duties or a new Treasury note Bill or leave the Capt. to starve. An opinion now prevails that the Whigs intend to leave him with what he has got & can get from the Loan, which cannot be made available, so as to force him to have a call session next summer—hoping no doubt that we will butt out our brains as they did. If it should so turn out I think we might make it greatly to our advantage. If we could reduce the duties to a revenue standard, trade would revive and hard times pass away, without a Bank, and under the operations of the Subtreasury.

The pamphlet I sent you, of Rhett, will show you the feelings of our Southern brethern. The truth no doubt is they want the longest time for management here & the shortest time left us for making an exposure, if they leave us. As matters now stand, they know they would have no chance here or in a convention and therefore they loose nothing by delay.

If they desert us, & I think they will, they will go off upon some great principle & make a terrible noise & we shall have but little time for a proper exposure. The Mercury is now writing that Van is not to be trusted on the Negro question or Tariff. You will begin to think that Drumgoole, Thomas, Turney & myself were right in not submitting in the Speakers election.

It is a prevailing opinion I find that the influence of the friends of Calhoun, Buchhanan, Johnson & Cass, Woodbury, Wall, Gov. Porter will all be used in opposition to Van's nomination. Whatever they do is done in the dark & cannot seriously affect Van. He is much stronger now than at the last session. I was glad to see the nomination for Vice P. at Philadelphia by Henry Horn. It is strong evidence of the democratic feeling there agt. the course of R.M.J. The nomination in Missouri does not meet the approbation of the delegation here & I have the strongest reasons to believe will be opposed by T.H.B. I have called twice to see him so as to draw him out but company always prevented. We are talking of a caucus to recomend a time for the Convention which will probably take place before we adjourn & I think there is no doubt that we shall select the 4 Mon in Nov. Rhetts pamphlet produces a good deal of talk & increases the desire for having it over. Every step they take increases the suspicion that we are to be deserted, if they have enough for the balance of power. I trust these suspicions may not be verified. It is proper however that you should know & think of them.

Brown mentioned to me that you said we must raise money for you before we left. I wrote a line to Vanderpool to know how matters were now in N. York & also spoke to Rosevelt. From what they say, there will be no chance of getting money in N.Y. for a Western man—U.S. stock 6 p cent is under par and any quantity to be obtained thru the loan at par. All say there is plenty of money but no confidence in any body. It was suggested to me that Reeves (Blair’s partner) was the best chance. I had a conversation with him. He talked doubtfully about it—no chance now but possibly there might be some before the adjournment. If there be any, it will be attended to.

I regret to learn that Hardwicke has sold out and is about to leave the State. I fear it will increase the chances of my nomination at Dover, against which I have earnestly protested. I do not see how I can take another canvass or how I can return here. I have been from home about 20 out of 24 mos. I could not ride over the hills & hollows as I use to do.

Jeff. Campbell wishes to run. Jo. L. Wms. declines & Luke Lea is said to be on the field. You ought to prevent if possible Andrew Johnson from running at McClelan. Arnold declines. (Only watching for live democrats.)

Willie L. Norfleet will give Genl C. a race in Robertson. My declining will give us strength in Montgomery. Some Whigs hope to get along better as there is more room in the democratic ranks than the other. It is said Kimble (author of J.O.) to join us & run for the Senate. It is thought also that N. H. Allen Will do so likewise & on no better grounds.

My health is somewhat better. We had 7 or 8000 people assembled today to hear Miller preach at the patent office—it turned out a hoax—only one fight. We hear to night, that a British Steamer fired a shot into the Falmoth (Capt McIntosh) in the Gulph. The Falmoth gave her a Broadside with her Paixian guns & very seriously injured her if not destroyed her.

Rhett argued that convention delegates should be elected by congressional districts and that the convention should meet in 1844 rather than in 1843. Rhett also urged discontinuance of the convention practice of voting by states under the unit rule.

South Carolina Democrats had refused to support the candidate of the House Democratic caucus, John W. Jones; and Johnson accordingly rejected South Carolina's first choice, Dixon H. Lewis. See Cave Johnson to Polk, December 18, 1842. Philip F. Thomas, a first-term Democrat, also voted for Hunter, but Johnson's reference probably is to Francis Thomas, who had served with Polk in the House since 1831. FROM GRANVILLE C. TORBETT

Madisonville, Tennessee. January 26, 1843

In reply to Polk's letter of the 16th instant, Torbett reports that Monroe County is trying to organize for the legislative elections. A district convention has been recommended, and numerous "leading Democrats" have asked Torbett whether or not he would accept a Senate nomination. Though he expects to seek reelection to the House, he would accept a Senate nomination if tendered. Torbett knows little of election prospects in surrounding counties, but writes that Polk should get a majority in Hamilton County. He hears little from Waterhouse's district, but expects him to run for reelection.\(^3\)

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir: Columbia Jany 27th 1843

I am anxious to hear how the difficulties which have unexpectedly sprung up in the Mountain District are about being adjusted. Does Mr Cullom desire to run for Congress, or will he insist upon it? Will it be necessary to call a District Convention? If so have any steps been taken to fix upon a time and place?\(^1\) The matter will be much more easily settled now, than it will be after the canvass opens—and the public becomes excited. I should think there would be no difficulty now, but if it is postponed for two months there may be. I have only time to call your attention to the matter, and to ask for information. Who will be the Democratic candidates for Representative in the Legislature from DeKalb, and from Fentress, White and Van Buren? Both these are debatable Districts and with proper candidates we can carry them. Who are likely to be the candidates for the Legislature in each of the other counties of your Congressional District?\(^2\) It is very important in my judgment that all our candidates should be announced at the earliest practicable period. Give me all the information you have upon this, and other matters, connected with the approaching contest. In haste . . . .

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

January 29th 1843

Dear Sir,

Washington Jany 29th 1843

I recd. yours several days ago but having just written you I delayed hoping to get something that would interest you. You are mistaken in supposing the nomination in Missouri a pre-concerted movement, evidencing the course we are hereafter to pursue. Gov. M. informs me, that Mr. C—n & Col RMJ both had a few friends in the Legislature for Pres & they insisted that if a restoration was to take place, it should be complete & to gratify them & to secure the desired unanimity, he was nominated as Vice. The Ca—n men here take the same ground as well as the Buck—n men to us Tennesseans hoping that our friendship for you, under such circumstances would throw us against Van. I had a long conversation with Col B. on the subject. He will not commit himself for any one now but denounces Col RMJ as the damndest political wh—e in the Country—and stands committed agt. him—and said without hesitation, the position he now assumed made it the duty of the party to drop him. He informed me that the Miss. M.C. had written home to make no nomination for Vice but that their letters had not reached there before the resolutions were adopted. I think Gov. W—ry is now rectus in curia. The M.C. from N.H. talk strongly of the impropriety of his course—not so much because he said or done any thing as because he believed & gave countenance by his silence to the idea, that he might be Vice for C—n Southern men certainly believed so. It is probable the Gov. who you know is cool, cautious & selfish had no favorable opinion of the availability of C—n but in the conflict between him & Van, the mantle of old Jackson might fall on other shoulders, perhaps his own—perhaps some others—and probably thought it best to stand still and let things take their own course and then do what suited him best. Buck. I think is levuling off a little, first for the want of C—n's availability—and secondly on account of the treaty. He you know reported the resolution adopted by the Senate unanimously, in relation to slaves driven into the island by stress of weather, mutiny &c. The treaty approved by C—n now leaves him in a delicate position in the free states. He will be kept up & get probably the nomination of Penn. as a compliment, afterwards all will go right. Mr. C—d of Maine for similar reasons is probably right now. I may be wrong in my conjecture about Genl. C. He now occupies the neutral territory—ready to serve one or the other—and will be the most dangerous man, if he turns his back on us. He will reside in Cincinnati. RMJ was taken up before from fear [of] his military popularity.
There is more & better reason to fear the other. Same reasons may have a similar influence on our Convention. This is what we have to guard against. I think the influence of the Admn. & the Sec of State will be united with C—n agt. us & we have some reason to fear that Gov. Porter will lend himself to that concern. All united however cannot in my opinion affect Van. R.B.R. entreats a postponement of the Convention to May 1844—gives the strongest assurances that they will not separate—that public opinion will settle the matter before that time & we will all move on harmoniously as he says. I think his pamphlet ensures us the Convention in Nov. The prevailing opinion is that they will go off & if so, the sooner the better for us. If we delay until '44 and they have enough to hold the balance, we will be again treated as we were about the Speaker & as Bedford Brown was in N.C.

I think you will need no defence after M. Browns late letter. Of all the nonsensical attacks I have ever witnessed—this exceeds all. I am however ready & shall avail myself of the first opportunity to say a word or two to him. He has treated Benton & Wall about Bankruptcy as bad as he has us by garbling & misrepresenting their speeches. If I have leisure I will look into that also. I have been so little able to read or write from continued pain that I have not yet done any thing, & I must write a circular you know. We expect some movement on Monday on the Tariff & I expect a chance within the next 10 days. I fear you will suffer in your next election from so many Whig M. C. omitting to run. Whoever runs in their places will repudiate all the proceedings of the Extra Session & we shall have the more difficulty in making the Whig Measures tell on them.

It is understood, that immediately on the adjournment of Congress, the Clay office-holders will be washed up & I suspect the Democrats also who refuse adhesion. He dislikes one as bad as the other. But two Democrats voted for his exchequer—Caldwell (Conner's successor) & Bowne of N.Y. Cushings Bill approaches so nearly the sub-treasury, that if taken up, it will receive a good many democratic votes.

My health has improved slightly. Dixon Lewis is said to be very sick. We hope not dangerously so. Ben Howard succeeds Peters as Reporter & he tells some pretty tales of the improper expenditure of the Contingent fund of the court. I have it in writing & may use it. My respects to Madam.

25. Benjamin C. Howard and Richard Peters. Having won four terms as a Maryland Democrat to the U.S. House, 1829–33 and 1835–39, Howard served as reporter for the U.S. Supreme Court from 1843 until 1862. Howard succeeded Richard Peters, who had compiled the reports from 1828 to 1842.

FROM THOMAS R. BARRY

Dear Sir,

When I saw you last in Nashville you requested me whenever I had anything of importance to write you. There is much excitement in this county relative to an appraisement Law. Five sixths of the voters in this county are in favour of it. Missouri Ohio and other democratic States have passed such Laws. The Globe is strongly in favour of the policy. See the Globe of Jan 19th. Such laws are better calculated to defeat the Whig Candidate for the Presidency in 1844 than other policy—because when he proposes his great measure of Relief, a U.S. Bank, the people will say the Democrats have already given us a much safer and a more direct plan of Relief by enabling us to pay our debts with our property at fair evaluation. I believe if the Democrats were to come out boldly in favour of this policy it would give them possession of the State government for 20 years—besides as the Globe says it is perfectly right upon Republican and moral principles. It will not do for the Democracy to separate itself from the weak or poorer side; if it does it is certain to be defeated. It is wrong for a man to entertain unfounded suspicions against those with whom he is politically associated. I have for the last 2 years believed that Guild (the Col) by false misrepresentations induced you to believe that I would not have voted for you for U.S. Senator in 1841. I wish to know of you if this is so. I have no confidence earthly in him. And think the wire-workers of Davidson and Sumner will some day regret having used their influence to promote his claims over those of Trousdale and my own. I know with the genuine democracy of Sumner I can beat him 2 votes to one for any thing. But as it is likely that the nominee no matter who will be beat and as I was commited to Trousdale, who I found had not abandoned the idea of runing entirely I positively refused to let my name be used in competition with Trousdale's or to be canvassed before the delegates of the Convention. At the same time I am perfectly conscious that I am 300 votes stronger than any Democrat in the district owing to the decided stand I took for the Relief Laws. Let me hear from you.

In Massachusetts the evaluation law provided that the creditor, debtor, and county sheriff would each appoint one arbitrator and that the creditor would accept the mortgaged lands, as appraised, without benefit of a forced sale and in lieu of a cash settlement for that portion of the debt covered by the appraisement.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNEY

Dear Sir Washington Jan. the 31st 1843

I on yesterday had a conversation with Mr. Benton, which confirmed in the opinion I had expressed to you, to wit, that he is decidedly opposed to Col. R. Johnson. In this I am not mistaken. The conversation was rather casual. He commenced it, by enquiring about Tennessee. I told him our fate depended on the candidate for the Vice Presidency; that if Johnson was run we would be beaten beyond a doubt, and that it was cruel to sacrifice us a third time1 for a man who could not bring a single electoral vote to the concern. He agreed with me and said further, that Old Dick had loaned himself to Tyler & Calhoon to defeat our party, and that he would stand no possible chance for the nomination, and further that he was not to be relied on as a man or as a politician, and cursed him for a political hore. B. entertains bitter feeling for him—Johnson. I cannot be mistaken in this. In the conversation your name was not mentioned for the reason, that here there is no other person spoken of but you and Johnson, and I thought it best to put Johnson out of the way if possible without exposing any personal, or local, preference. Benton says that Johnsons prospects will rapidly decline, and that he will finally sink in the estimation of our friends, and likely join the enemy.

Van is gaining ground, Calhoon loosing.2 In a word I have strong faith that we will be triumphant in the convention.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

McMinnville, Feb. 1, 1843

My dear Sir,

I received yours of the 27th ult. last night and hasten to reply to it. Mr. Cullom does desire to run for Congress—is urged to do so by the Whigs universally in White, Overton and Jackson—and by his democratic kin and friends in Overton who are willing to coalesce with the Whigs to insure his success. Three fourths of the democracy of the district are for me. We have a thousand majority in the district. More than two thirds of the whole democracy are on this side of the Caney fork. If he takes off a thousand above, and all the Whigs he will beat me with 5000 democratic votes for me. If a Convention takes place, his friends will insist that the vote must be by counties—giving the 4 or 500 democratic votes in Jackson, the same influence as 1400 in Warren or 1200 in Coffee. They will insist on this or Convention without regard to party. In fact the first proposition is the same thing. If the first method is adopted, White County will hold the balance of power, and may decide against me, though the best men there, Isaac Taylor &c. are for me. If we have a Convention, My friends will insist that the vote in Convention shall be according to the wishes of the majority of democratic voters in the district as represented, and this will decide it for me. If Putnam claims and has a County representation—then there are 5 counties above the river and four below. But that county by law votes with the counties she is taken from. With her, counted as a seperate county, there are nine counties in this district—without her eight. Voting by Counties, it will therefore require 5 to be a majority of either 8 or 9. White must therefore decide it—as I expect majorities of the delegations of Jackson, Overton and Fentress will be fixed by himself and the Whigs to vote for him.

If Gen. Armstrong, Jos. W. Horton, who is the uncle or cousin of A. L. Davis of Sparta, and other friends at Nashville would write to Isaac Taylor, Davis, &c. urging them, if they think it right, to secure the nomination for me, it would have great influence.

Cullom, on enquiries made by me, and informing that I wished to run in accordance with the wishes of many friends, if I could do so without interfering with his wishes, wrote to me in answer, about three weeks before my name was announced, that he had no wish to run—that under no circumstances would he run at the next election—and thanking me for my frank Communication of my wishes and views. What am I to think of him now?

If he runs—and the Sparta Whig paper is out for him on that ground—he will take open ground against the course of the democracy, in the Assembly at the last and previous session, for not electing Senators to Congress as the Whigs desired—for not letting the election take place. I am sure he will do this, and I care more for the evil effect it may have on your election, and the state election, than I do for myself. He will be quoted as democratic authority against us all over the state. When you made him special Judge (and I advised you to do it) and made him a Colonel, a cold blooded viper was hatched, who cares for nothing and for nobody but himself.

In this county we have Armstrong & French, candidates for House, and Locke coming out. There is no candidate for Senate. In VanBuren & Fentress, the floating Rogers Whig—and Worthington of VanB. democrat are candidates. In DeKalb two Whigs are out, but no democrat as yet. One will run—and I think be elected. In Coffee Wm H. Coulson (Dem.) is out, but W. S. Waterson or somebody else will be most likely to be selected. In the upper counties no candidates are out. Sam Turney says a Democrat named Green will run in White.

If Dr. Robertson, Horton, Armstrong and our friends at Nashville were to send letters to their friends in White and Jackson, it would help me. I wrote Cullom a friendly letter last week, when I published my proposal for a convention, and quoted the words of his letter, which I received at Nashville in November. I did this, because his complaint is that I came out to soon—and he and his strikers say, to forestall him. I am to see him at Sparta next Monday & will write you from that place. If he has a spark of honor, he will be off without a convention—but I fear he has not. Our friends here are angry, but I cause him to be treated in papers and by myself with great respect. In haste . . . .

FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington Feby. 4th 1843

As you might well suppose from my former letters I find myself extremely reluctant to offer for Congress.¹ I will not say anything now about the "whys & the wherefores." I send you my letter of declination.²
Consult with your Brother\(^2\) & who ever else you please & if you shall believe that my not running will do any material harm to our party burn the letter I send you & request the newspapers to announce me forthwith. If on the contrary, we can run somebody else without danger or detriment, publish my letter & let them take the field.

You see that there is but one condition on which I am willing to run & that is that it is material to the success of our cause. If it is not I sincerely desire to be off. Your Brother having views it would be politic in evry respect, not to let it be known that I had thrown the whole subject so exclusively under your control. I am forced however to do this by the supposed necessity that exist for me to decide one way or other before I return. If the presumption now existing is strong enough that I will be a candidate, what harm would it do to let every thing stand so, untill I do come which will be by the 12 or 15 March? But I dont ask this if you think it would do harm. Do as you think best, without any delicacy in the case—with the certain assurance that that decision of the matter which lets me off from the service & leaves me to have some chance to enjoy the society of my family & to attend to my farm below will be most agreeable to me.

A V Brown

[P.S.] Feby 8th. I have retained this letter now 3 or 4 days expecting the letter from my Brother & Mr Martin\(^4\) stating the result of their consultations, but it has not arrived & I am very uneasy at the consequent delay in the annunciation of my final decision.

What is the difficulty in the way of your Brother? As to the Grand Jury nomination of Maury that is nothing\(^5\)—even if he had responded to it favorably & publickly. The only thing I can think of is the rivalship of B. Gordon.\(^6\) That however stands on as good a foot as it would have done if I had declared off last fall. But I cant Jud[ge] at this distance, of all these matters & so conclude again—to let him run—to let Gordon run or any other approved man whose success is certain & let me off. As to the role of Giles\(^7\) for the Assembly I will be responsible for that though I be off of the field.

But if none of these things will do—withhold my letter & have me announced as a candidate. A.V.B.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Washington Feb 5th 1843

I rec’d yours last evening. I have taken proper means to have our candidates brought forward early but fear we shall have some difficulty. In Dickson, W. B. Young is a candidate & would be beaten by a Whig if he is run. He will not decline or submit to a convention. The Democrats will therefore if they succeed have him & a Whig to beat. This probably will be done but there is some danger. Vhories wishes to run for the Senate & so does Gray & Stewart will not again yield to Dickson I fear. I have written to such men as I thought could settle it. I have also written to Benton & Robertson. I fear Doct. Norfleet cannot be prevailed on to run. Nor have I heard whether Sturdevant can. Willie Norfleet will run in Robertson, particularly if I should be nominated at Dover, which I fear will be the case. He wishes help in Robertson in making speeches.

I sent you some ten days ago the Journals of the Call Session & Verplanks Bill, & started last night the Journals of the House. I could not get a copy of the Journals earlier. G. & S. is not so prompt in public printing as the Globe was formerly. I shall not be surprised if the half the printing ordered at this session is done after we leave.

I know of nothing new to inform. I am so much confined on account of my health that I see nobody except in the House. The opinion is gaining ground & I think certain that if we hold a Convention in the faul that the friends of C. will not go into [it]. This is fairly inferable from Rhetts pamphlett & strongly intimated in the Mercury. I do not think Van’s friends will postpone longer than the 8th of Jany.

A circular letter signed by us all would no doubt be most advantageous but then we could not probably agree. When I finish mine I will submit it & see who will.

We are in the appropriation Bills & I suppose most of our time will [be] occupied with them—no modification of the Tariff, no Treasury notes, spoken [of]— & it seems now generally believed that the Whigs wish to make Tyler have a call session. He will not if it can be avoided as he now says. The making of the loan & the Tariff\textsuperscript{10} will not keep him half thru the year & if he keeps up until the regular session he must do so or trip.

I think my rheumatism is better tho I have nearly lost the use of my left arm. I have however but little pain. I shall with great reluctance enter upon another canvass even if nominated. I dont see how I am to ride over the hills & hollows as will be expected. Nor do I see how I am to get my family here & keep even if I should get them here. I still hope however that Hardwicke will re-consider & accept the nomination. There is a general feeling, I think without foundation, in Robertson & Montgomery, that he could not be elected. That together with the desire of my aid in Robertson & Montgomery, has made them talk more of me & press me more than elsewhere and I fear that, he has been hurt by the imprudence of some of my over-zealous friends.

Your election will suffer from so many whigs declining because those who run will repudiate the acts of the call session & still be whigs.

I suppose AVB\textsuperscript{11} will run tho he has not yet said so. J. G. Harris is here but I learnt nothing from him.

FROM JOHN A. GARDNER

Dresden, Tennessee. February 8, 1843

In response to Polk's letter of the "28th of last month,"\textsuperscript{11} Gardner informs Polk that conflicting claims to office among Democrats in his county\textsuperscript{2} have become "irreconcilable." Unless a single candidate can be chosen, Etheridge,\textsuperscript{3} the Whig candidate will win. Gardner has consented reluctantly to seek reelection to the Senate, probably without opposition. He does not know the extent of division in the Whig ranks, but declares that the Whigs are "more skilful in healing divisions" than are the Democrats. Having discussed the prospects of the several candidates in his own district,\textsuperscript{4} as well as those surrounding him, Gardner writes that Polk's chances were "Never more cheering in this quarter."

TO E. G. EASTMAN

My Dear Sir: Columbia Feby. 13th 1843

In the Nashville Union of friday last,\textsuperscript{1} it was announced upon my authority, that I would be a candidate for Governor and that I would open the canvass at Jackson on the first Monday in April. It is my purpose first to visit the Counties West of the Tennessee River. This I can do by the 1st or 10th of May, and can then go to any other part of the State, where my presence may be most needed. After my notices for the Western District shall be published,\textsuperscript{2} you will know my whereabouts from day to day. If my friends in East Tennessee shall advise me that they think it important that I should come to that Division of the State, before I canvass Middle Tennessee, I will do so; and I can I think reach E. Tennessee by the 15th of May. If on the other hand my friends in E. Tennessee think I had better be there late in the canvass, I will in that event canvass Middle Tennessee, before I cross the Mountain.\textsuperscript{3} When I go to E. Tennessee had I better cross the mountain at Morgan State, or at Marion & go up South of the River?\textsuperscript{4} After you have consulted our friends at Knoxville, write me on these points.

I hope our party will be thoroughly organized & have candidates in the field, in every District & County in the State, and that they will be out by the 1st monday in April at furthest. Let the whole party present an unbroken front & move boldly on that day.

JAMES K. POLK
P.S. I wish you to procure and forward to me the Knoxville Post, containing the answer of its Editor to Mr A. R. Crozier's of 8th February 1842, in relation to the Declarations made by Gov. Jones on the subject of the Senatorial election, whilst at Knoxville, immediately after the last election. I do not know that it will be necessary to use it, but if the subject should be discussed by him in the canvass, I wish to be prepared. I wish to have it in the Post, because that is Whig authority, which cannot be denied. If you have not preserved a copy of the Post containing it, it is probable Mr. Crozier has. J.K.P.

Jones had remarked to him that "the Senate would be justified in refusing to go into convention with the House for the purpose of electing U.S. Senators if he was elected Governor, as he considered that election a test between the two parties and would look upon his success as evidence that the people of Tennessee desired Whig Senators." In his reply, reprinted, in part, in the Nashville Union of March 31, 1843, Williams noted that Jones' statements were public and "his opinions were founded upon the express supposition that the Whig party had a majority in the State." FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Dear Brother Nashville Feb 14th 1843

I received your letter this evening and would leave in the Stage for home in the morning, but that Rufus Polk is not so well as he was a day or two ago—and I would dislike very much to leave him at this time, when the turn his disease may take is very doubtful. He has not had one of his suffocating spells since last night at 11 O'Clock, but is much weakened from the last attack. It would I think be wrong for me to leave him, although I cannot be of any use or advantage to him, until his case results either in death or recovery, or until his Brothers shall arrive.³

As to the political movements in Maury, I have had my fears, that Mr. N. in his sly, sneaking way would create some confusion for the present⁴—not that I believe he can in the least destroy the harmony of the party in the end. He may give trouble, but can inflict no injury. Tell my Wife⁵ to send me the letter, she mentioned in her letter, from Mississippi concerning my Tanner claims.⁶

Make what use you please of the communication enclosed.⁷

I got a letter today from Leatherman, stating amongst other things—that Shields was gone to Memphis in search of a new home. Now what I fear is that the publication of either of my letters of declination might enduce him to change his purposes. If you were to enquire & ascertain whether he was going & if going whether shortly it might be politic to delay a little “untill he had too far consummated the act to give it up.” It is desirable that he should go as it would help us some in Giles & Wayne & perhaps elsewhere. My Dear Sir, Charlotte Febry 16 1843

Your favour of the 11th Inst¹ came to hand yesterday. I presume from the tenor of it, you were not in receipt of my last note, to you,² in which I made Known to you my intentions to retire from Publick life and the probability of my leaving the State in a few weeks & &. L. B. Chase³ a Delegate to the Convention from this Co left to day for Dover. Before he started he called upon me to Know if I would under any circumstances accept a nomination, by that boddy. I told him I would upon two conditions: first, that he should in my name sincerely declare to the convention that I did earnestly desire they would agree upon some other good and true man and excuse me for the future; then if they should think that our cause and party would be endangered, with out my feeble efforts, and give me the nomination I would accept and forego all the evils that might attend me. I have recd. the warmest solicitations from every Co. in the District,⁴ & none more warm than from Henry. I saw the Shff.⁵ & some three other men from Henry some ten or 12 days ago and they assured me none but my self were spoken of. Since that I saw a friend of ours from Nashvl. who travelled through Henry & Benton, and said the same. That is the tone in which I have been addressed from each Co. and section of our District, Montgomery not excepted. Genl W. B. J.⁶ might have gotten his information from E. H. Foster for whose sayings, opinions and person he has a higher regard than any man now living. Nothing but a sence of duty and my attachment to our cause and party could have induced me to change my determinations formed upon mature reflection. I still hope the Convention will settle upon another; if so it will I hope be C. Johnson. A few days will however, disclose the whole matter.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,

Washington 17th Feby. 1843

I recd. yours from Nashville on yesterday.¹ The House Journal will reach you before this.² I begin to fear that no legitimate excuse for replying to M.B.³ will be presented. No Bill connected with the Tariff will come up. A Bill authorizing a re-issue of Treasury notes is the only measure in contemplation. So that if I do answer I shall have to get at it upon some amendment or pull it in neck & heels without regard to order or propriety. I shall try & do so. I have a half written circular⁴ but doubt whether I shall finish it. I am on Somers Com.⁵ & up to our eyes every day investigating the petty Larcenies about the House & shall not be surprised if it results in a dismission of Clark⁶ & during the sitting of the House we have to watch very close to expose wholesale plunderings. They have actually a project on hand urging it as a party measure to buy the book of debates Gales & Seaton—$150,000 to sustain that press.⁷ Some Whigs back from it & have disclosed to me as one of the watch dogs. If the effort is made we shall have some rare sport. I keep myself busy day & night but will try & finish my circular. Finding that we were not likely to make any arrangement with Reeves,⁸ I called this morning to see Smith⁹ Cashr. of Metropolis Bank¹⁰ & had a good deal of conversation with him. He submitted my suggestions to the Board & writes me that nothing can be done. They are discounting freely but only on short paper & are afraid to put their funds beyond their reach for any time—so he writes me. I should have got Catron to go up. I have voted so much agt. their Bank Bills that they feel no inclination to do anything that would oblige me. I suspect Reeves is shaving deeply. We will keep a look out & see what can be done.

We have heard but very little of late until yesterday as to elections. A pamphlet appeared in answer to Rhett¹¹ & was secretly handed about—denouncing Calhoun strongly. His friends attribute it to Benton—without any reasonable grounds. It is thought to be a forced imitation of his style & probably had its origin with the Whigs. This has produced a good deal of talk. I have not seen it nor could I get a copy. If I get a copy I will send it to you. Calhoun's friends say, that Benton has said, he would not support Mr. C. if nominated. Like Achilles he would retire &c. This produces much talk. I am inclined to think these things are talked of & greatly exagerated preparatory to their leaving us if necessary. There is no doubt that Col B. talks strongly, if not very imprudently agt. both C. & RMJ. Graham of N.C. had a long & very friendly talk about you today—calls you Cousins &c & believes that you will certainly & ought to be nominated with Van.

I hear but little further as to the Convention. The N. Yorkers approve our time but are afraid to move—waiting for Va. If we fix on Nov. C’s friends will decline going into the Convention I think. Rhett is now at home canvassing I suppose. He & Trotti are put in the same district—Rhett living in the negro region & Trotti among the whites & rumor says Rhett is likely to be beaten which I shall regret. Holmes is likely to be defeated by Rhetts brother.

It will be very unfortunate if I am again nominated. I do not see how I can again run. I doubt whether I shall be able to go over the district. I think I shall loose the use of my left arm. We have cut down all salaries by a vote of the H. without much rhyme or reason. It will do much good & a good deal of harm—but upon the whole we thought it advisable to vote it.

Rumor says that Webster will go out & become the agent of the holders of the State Bonds & head the assumption party. It will be made a great question in the next elections—that or the issuance of stock based on the public Lands—about the same thing. Our friends are generally very well.

George William Summers, a Whig from western Virginia, chaired the Select Committee on the Retrenchment of Expenditures of the House.
6. Matthew St. Clair Clarke. In its report dated February 23, 1843, the Summers Committee indicated that all House officers had complied with the retrenchment resolutions except Clarke, who had not reduced his staff as instructed. Clarke continued to serve in his post, but lost his bid for reelection on December 6, 1843, to Caleb J. McNulty of Ohio.
7. On February 16, 1843, William Woodbridge, a Michigan Whig on the Library Committee, introduced a bill in the Senate to publish "the debates and proceedings of Congress." The measure provided for a congressional subscription of 1,000 copies at a price of $5.00 each, of all volumes in a projected three-part series. Part one would cover the period March 1789 through May 1824. Part two would consist of the volumes in Gales and Seaton's Register of Debates in Congress from December 1824 through October 1837. The final segment would include the Congressional Globe and Appendix from December 1837 through March 1843. Gales and Seaton were named publishers of the first two segments and Blair and Rives, of the final one. After heated debate the measure died in the Senate.

11. See Cave Johnson to Polk, January 22, 1843. On February 17, 1843, the editors of the Washington Globe noted a recently issued pamphlet entitled, "A Warning to the Democracy." According to their report, the pamphlet speculated that John C. Calhoun would lead his supporters into the Whig ranks if he did not receive the Democratic presidential nomination in 1844.

12. The hero of Homer's Iliad, Achilles, was the handsomest and bravest of the Greeks who fought in the Trojan War. An intense quarrel with Agamemnon caused him to retire to his tent, and the tide of battle turned decisively against the Greeks until Achilles returned to slay Hector, the Trojan leader.

14. Reference probably is to James Graham, a lawyer and Whig congressman from North Carolina, 1833–43, or to his brother, William Alexander Graham, who served as a Whig in the U.S. Senate, 1840–43, and as governor of North Carolina, 1845–49. 17. A lawyer from Barnwell and former member of the South Carolina House, Samuel Wilds Trotti served one session in the U.S. House from December 1842 to March 1843.

18. Isaac E. Holmes and James S. Rhett. A Charleston lawyer, Holmes served in the South Carolina House, 1826–33, before winning election as a Democrat to the U.S. House, where he served from 1839 until 1851. Rhett, a planter and lawyer, represented Christ Church Parish in the South Carolina Senate, 1837–48. He was a brother to Robert Barnwell Rhett.

19. On February 15, 1843, the House approved a bill, introduced by Thomas D. Arnold, that would have reduced compensation and allowances of members of Congress, civil servants, and military personnel. The measure failed to win Senate approval.
20. Federal financial relief to the states, as in previous sessions, sparked lively debate in Congress and the press. The Senate debated assumption of state debts and finally postponed further consideration until the next session. In the House a measure promoted by William Cost Johnson, a Maryland Whig, drew the greatest attention. He advocated the distribution of $200 million in four-percent government stock to the states based upon their proportionate representation in Congress. The public lands were to be pledged as security until the stocks were redeemed by the government.

FROM ROBERT M. BURTON

Dear Sir
Lebanon 18th February 1843

I received your letter of the 30th of January and should have replied before this but I have been prevented by my engagements at the Courts up to the present day. Previous to the reception of your letter I had attended a court at Decalb and made the proper enquiry as to the candidate who should be selected to run upon the Democratic ticket: Colo. Floyd of Alexandria is the best choice and it is admitted by some sagacious Whigs that he can be elected. I am well acquainted with him. He promised me he would come out at the proper time and I think he will be elected. There are two Whigs out both of whom are determined to run. Let this be as it may Floyd can be elected.

The difficulty between Laughlin & Cullum for a seat for Congress in the mountain District I fear cannot be adjusted. Cullum is unwilling to submit the matter to a Convention unless the Whigs in the district are permitted to vote in the Convention which proposition is ridiculous and unheard of before. Judge Ridley staid with me last night on his way from one of his courts and I requested him to write to Laughlin and advise him to decline which he promised me he would do. I fear if this is not done it will damage our party materially and in the end drive Cullum over to the Whigs. Sam Turney I think from the last interview I had with him is opposed to Laughlins declineing but it is doubtless upon the ground that in future it would leave the way open for him. Cullum certainly will beat Laughlin with the aid of the Whig vote which he will get and you must see at once the propriety of Laughlins declineing. Guild I think will be the nominee for Congress in the Sumner District and if he will consent to run he can be elected and he is the only man of our party that can, as I think. He is much opposed to becoming a Candidate and I fear if nominated he will not run. The next best chance is Genl. Donelson. If Guild is nominated you must urge strongly upon him to run and it is possible he may be induced to do so.
February 20 1843

Your friends every where within my range are certain of your success and I can confidently assure you that your vote in this and the adjacent counties will far exceede your vote in the contest with Govr. Cannon. I have heard none express a believe that Jones can be reelected. So to the charge and the victory is ours.

FROM ISAAC TAYLOR

Sparta, Tennessee. February 18, 1843

Taylor informs Polk that both Laughlin and Cullom probably will run in the Fourth Congressional District. Neither man will withdraw in favor of the other, nor can they agree upon the composition of a district convention that might resolve the issue. Cullom wants the Democratic delegates apportioned according to each county's total voting population, and Laughlin prefers an apportionment solely by Democratic voting strength in each. Taylor favors Laughlin's approach because it follows traditional practices. He thinks both men will continue as candidates regardless of the decision of the convention, which is to be held in March. The Whigs probably will bring out a candidate later. Taylor believes Whig strength in the district is declining.

FROM ANDREW JOHNSON

Dear Sir

Greeneville February 20 1843

I received your letter some few days since, and in reply have to say, that all is right in Greene & Hawkins. We now have these two Counties Completely organized, and ready for the Contest. The only difficulty we have to contend with is that Bagh\(^2\) wants to run in Hawkins, and the democrats in the main are determined not to go for him. How the matter will be finally arranged I cannot tell. I am well assured of one thing, that it will not affect you in the slightest degree. As to the senate, it is now thought that Col Critze\(^3\) will be the strongest man we Can run, for floater over Greene Hawkins & Washington. Dr. Kinney\(^4\) will be the man, for Greene. Milligan is now a Candidate. For Congress Col McLelland\(^5\) wants to run. I am a Candidate subject to a decision of the democratic party through a Convention. The truth is that our democratic friends want him to yeald the field without a Convention, and thereby save his feelings. It is thought here by some of our friends, that a letter from you would have more influence with him than any thing that Could be done. We have been trying to get Col Robertson\(^6\) to run in Cock & Sevier. I fear we can not succeed. I saw him yesterday & talked with him on the subject. As to your election, from all the information I can obtained [it] is beyond doubt. The whigs here look upon your election them selves as being sure.

In Cock your vote can be increased 200 votes, in Greene 300 votes, in Hawkins 250 votes, in Sullivan 100 votes, in Washington 150 votes, in Johnson & Carter 200 votes, in all making 1,200 votes. If this congressional district\(^7\) is canvassed as it should be, I am certain that your vote can be increased 1,000 votes. Your election I put down as an absolute Certainty, and Just in this connection you must permit [me] to remind you of what I told you in your own House fall befor last, that your true position was to remain befor the people, that you could Carry the state at a propper time, to Give you prominence befor the whol nation, & that in case Mr Vanburen was nominated for president you would be put upon the ticket for the vice presidency. Your position gives you another advantage also. I have all ways felt a deeper interest in your political advancement than perhaps you ever supposed I did; during the last canvass I made more speeches for the purpose of advancing your election than I did for my own, and would have prefered defeat my self, if it would have saved your election. I was induced to think last fall, that perhaps you had been some what soured at me. In this I am in hopes I was mistaken. I did not know but what some of Nicholson enemies had made a false impression upon your mind. I knew that there was a coldness between you and Nicholson, and was resolved on being the last man to widen the breach. I was a friend to both of you, and wanted to soothe instead of exciting and widening the misunderstanding. I thought and believed we were not in a condition to loose prominent men. You have allways been my first Choice for any thing, and I am especially frank in saying that Nicholson has been my second, and I am in hopes by this time that you and him are on good terms.

FROM ABRAHAM McCLELLAN

My Dear Sir  Washington City Febry. 20th 1843

Yours of the 8th Instant1 has been recd. I feel grateful for your condolince in my late affliction.2 It was so sudden and unexpected that it well near prostrated me at the time. I have a vary bad cold—or I would have wrote you Sooner.

You wish to know the State of things in our Congressional Districte3—of which I Know but litle. The nuse of the Districts being laid of4 only reached Blountville the day I left for this place—and since I have not heard much except of late. There is several asperents in our party—and I fear things are working badly from what I hear. Theire is to be divitions in our ranks. Johnson and our friends in Hawkins County, have been making arrangements for him to be the candidate for Congress,5 so that Hawkins Co. can get the Senate, in his place. This they have don without consulting our friends in the other Counties. I understand Johnson has ere this or will in the next Sintnal6 announce him Self as a candidate subjecte to the desition of a convention. I think that Steps wrong for I am informed that our friends think that him and some of the Polititians of Hawkins have been manageing the mater so as to have a pacte convention to nomanate him. My opinion is if they attempt to have a convention and have Strife in that convention between different men which is to receive the nomanation that it will do more harm then good for our people do not understand much about conventions and are not vary partial to them. So I fear that there is to bee som disagreeable feelings and vary likely two or more Democratic candidates and in that event you know a Whig would be elected. True as you say I did express a disare not to run at the last election owing to my health and my wife not wishing me to be so much from home. I did then wish our friends in Hawkins Co. to run a man and let me of—but they would not. Indeed every time I have run it was because no other Democrat would. But this winter owing in part to the Sudin change in my Situation at home and understanding that there is so many asspirents in our ranks that would not give way to each other and that all would yield to me perhaps—I wrote to som of my friends that if this could be brought about I would like to be in Congress once more. I am told that Col A. Johnson said if I wished to run that he would not but he after that knowing I had consented still was going on making arrangements to have a pact convention. If him and our desining friends from Hawkins Co. would have consented for me to run I would have had no opposition. But I am not going to let my name be brought before a conventi[on]7 where there is to be strife and uncertainty—no, but if Johnson and his [friends] will [not consen]t for me to be nomanated, up [on the] whole I can but think they treate[d] me badly. They it seems took som pains to tell the people of Hawkins that I would not run—and there by got them to be for his nomanation. I suppos they think now that they can do without me. They will se. I can retire to privet life conscionous that my motives have been for the good of my country not Selfish.

I hope you will be out soon. The sooner the better. I hope as you say that you think we will cary the State. I Should [say] so that you may cary it. I have said too much upon this subject but it is to you as a friend. Excuse my hast. I have not time to look over this. Remember me kindly to your Lady and be assure of my sincere wishes for your well fare and the cause in which you are labouring.

FROM SAM MILLIGAN

Dear Friend, Greeneville February 20. 1843

I would have replied to yours of the 27th ult\(^1\) at an earlier day, had I not supposed I would be able to give you more information, touching the several matters of inquiry made in your letter, after the term of our circuit Court\(^2\) which was held in this place last week. During which time I had an opportunity of confering with many of our political friends from the adjoining counties, as well as those from every part of Greene, for there were an unusual number of persons attracted to this term of the court in consequence of some very exciting criminal cases that were pending; and I am happy to say, that I found much more soliciude among our political friends for the success of our cause at the approaching election, than I believed myself at all authorized to expect from the low ebb at which politics seem to stand. I also found our opponents more sadly disappointed and more deeply mortified at the course pursued by their leaders since they came into power, than I really had immagioned. They feel they had been duped—decieved—and missled by those upon whom they looked as their friends; and, therefore, they are under no obligations to support them. But whether they will turn round and support those whom they have been taught to regard as enemies is still a debatable question. I am, however, judging from circumstances, forced to the conclusion that "there are hundreds of the more moderate Whigs in E. Ten. who will not hesitate a moment to change their politics—acknowledge their error—and come up to the poles" and do their duty by voting for democratic men & measures.

Before this reaches you, I presume, you will have seen in the Ten. Sentinel of the 18th inst. the announcement of Col. A Johnson as a candidate for congress, \textit{subject to the decision of a convention}.\(^3\) This announcement was not made, as I understand it, with the view to supersede the necessat of calling a convention, if the people desire it, or to forstall the claims of other aspirants, but merely to set himself properly before the people of the district\(^4\) and to satisfy the urgint solicitations of his friends.
Col. A. McClelan\(^5\) also desires to become a candidate. He has many warm and zealous friends who are unwilling that he should yield to Johnson or any other man in the district. On the other hand Johnson’s friends are unwilling that he should yield to McClelan or any other man. In order therefore to settle this vexed state of things, Johnson has in his announcement expressed his willingness to submit his pretentions to a convention. And it is understood that McClelan will do likewise. I think from these circumstances we will be compelled to have a district convention, and by it, I entertain no doubt, but we can amicably adjust the whole matter and avoid a collision among our selves from this quarter.

I can not certainly inform you who will be the candidate for the senate in this district, but it is generally understood that Col. Critz of Hawkins will be run, and if so I think he will be quite acceptable to the party.

Neither can I certainly inform you who will be run for floater. But Dr. D Kinney\(^6\) of Jonesboro is spoken of, and I now think it most likely he will be the candidate, as there are no other aspirant for that office that I now am aware of. He will be an efficient and acceptable man.

For county representative, there are some three or four aspirants, but they all have mutually agreed to submit their claims to a county convention—which will meet on the 6th of march next. You will perceive we are making every effort to avoid a collision between friends. And I think we have things in such a train as will enable us to succeed in this most desirable thing without giving serious offence to any.

We have taken measures in “old Greene” for a thorough, and I hope, an efficient organization. And we are now standing "\textit{erectis auribus}\(^7\) waiting to catch the sound of the word \textit{Charge} from our file leader\(^8\) in M. Ten. and we will be down upon the whiggers with a vengeance. I speak without flattery, but the general feeling in E Ten is, \textit{that you must not be beaten this race}. The people are ready to do battle for you with more energy and zeal than they ever have done before.

FROM ROBERT B. REYNOLDS

My dear Sir

Knoxville February 20th 1843

Before and since the receipt of your favor of the 19th ult. I had & have busied myself in organising our forces, (by bringing out candidates & reconciling feuds), for the coming election. That too much apathy pervades our ranks, I am too well convinced—but a more general indifference exists among our opponents. Our friends will be animated sufficiently ere the day of the trial. Already do I see evidence of zeal in our ranks.

I concur with you that we ought to run candidates in every county and district where parties are nearly ballanced. In Roane Co. Col. Hembree will without doubt be reelected as the friends of Major Sevier have declared for him & places his election beyond a doubt. In that senatorial district, I do not believe that a suitable person can be found to take the field on our side. Col. Wheeler has joined the Methodist Church & refuses to run. Major Jarnagin is very easy on the subject & does not seem willing to make one effort to aid us—Major Burrus does not feel willing to enter the field. These are our only materials in that district & all of them refuse to make the necessary effort to secure the district. However by running Major Sevier we secure Hembree’s election & get at least a Tom Brown Whig in the Senate—so that arrangement is the best we can make. Major Brown goes into it with a great good will.

In Blount, we are looking every day for the announcement of Jas Gillespie Esq (the father of Findly) to run for the House on the dem. Ticket. It is the opinion of Gen. Wallace that he can be elected. In Monroe our friends will run Torbitt or H. H. Stephens. Torbitt’s friends are endeavoring to obtain for him the nomination for the senate. If that fails, he will run for the County. In Hamilton Col. Shepherd is out & will stand a good chance of success. I do not know who will run for Ham. & Marion, but some one must be brought out. Our friends are all satisfied that Anderson can be elected in McMinn. That we count as a gain. In Campbell & Anderson, R. D. Wheeler is out. Peterson, Tyler Whig & Sharp dem. also in the field. Old Col Tunnel will be out and I fear be elected. If Sharp would withdraw there would be a good chance to elect Oliver or Col. Petree. In Claiborne I hear that our friends are up and a doing & will increase their majority next summer. In Grainger either Col. McGinnis or Col Jas W Lafferty will run for the House. In Cocke, Doct. Ramsey is trying to get Squire Wilson to run. John Baker is a candidate in Jefferson. He will run as the independent Whig & if elected go for us. These three last named counties I do not calculate on carrying, but we stand some chance in Grainger & will certainly have a candidate there.

Col. Johnson will shortly be announced as a candidate for congress, subject, however, to the decision of a convention. He is the man who should go to Congress in the first district.

I have the pleasure to say that we are rapidly gaining, even in old Knox, altho. we cannot hope to over come the majority against us. Yet, we will greatly reduce it; and as to East Tennessee, if the election was to take place to morrow, I do not believe the Whigs would beat us one vote, in her borders. I feel sanguine that we shall be able to make large gains in every county where the proper efforts are made. We intend to have candidates in Knox—though She be the Vanguard of whiggery.

You have no doubt Seen by the Argus the proceedings of our meeting here. They take well amongst the people & will open the eyes of many hitherto led by the nose, as it were, to support the Whig party. I have no fears but that we shall gain several members in E.T. & overcome the Whig majority of 1841. I see by the Union that you commence the campaign at Jackson &c. This is as it should be, as I believe it will be best to wind up the race in this division of the State. It will be early enough to reach here by the first of June & I think you ought to commence at Montgomery & go up the northern side of the State—touching at Campbells Station & then to Clinton & as you return visit Knoxville.

2. Probably Elbridge Gerry Sevier, a Roane County Whig who had been defeated for a seat in the Tennessee House by Joel Hembree in 1841. Sevier was married to Mary Caroline Brown, daughter of Thomas Brown.

3. The senatorial district was composed of Anderson, Campbell, Morgan, and Roane counties.

4. Probably John Jarnagin and Lewis Burris. Jarnagin, a merchant and hotel keeper in Clinton, served as clerk of the Anderson County Court, 1834–36, and as a clerk of the circuit court for Tennessee's Second Judicial District, 1836–44. Burris held the sheriff's post in Roane County from 1838 until 1844.

5. Thomas Brown, father-in-law of Elbridge Sevier, was a pioneer settler of Roane County. Brown served two terms in the Tennessee House, 1817–19 and 1821–23, and was clerk and master of Roane County Chancery Court, 1834–48.

6. Brown's agency in the attempt to place Hembree in the Tennessee House and Sevier in the Tennessee Senate is not further identified.

7. Virginia born, James Gillespy migrated early to Blount County, Tennessee, where he built a mill on Pistol Creek in 1803 and engaged in farming. He served two terms in the Tennessee Senate, 1821–25. Gillespy was the father of four sons, one of whom was John Finley Gillespy.

10. Lewis Shepherd, a Hamilton County Democrat, wrote Polk on March 5, 1843, that he was “again” a candidate to represent his county. ALS. DLC–JKP.

11. A merchant and farmer, Richard D. Wheeler represented Campbell County in the Tennessee House from 1837 until 1845 and from 1853 until 1855.

Peterson served as sheriff of Campbell County, 1825–26, and later as one of the circuit court clerks for Tennessee's Second Judicial District, 1826–40. Sharp was register of Campbell County, 1841–42. Peterson and Sharp had both run for a seat in the Tennessee House in 1841.

14. Richard Oliver and Petree. Oliver, sheriff of Anderson County from 1834 until 1835, ran unsuccessfully for the Tennessee House in 1841. Petree, also an unsuccessful candidate for the Tennessee House in 1841, is not identified further.

At Dover Cave Johnston was nominated and a Letter read from him saying that he would serve &c.\(^1\) Copeland is now here. I Knew he would be from what Eastman said a few days ago. He is devoted to Johnston. McClennon\(^3\) ought to press him off. Their is danger in him.

All I can say to you in relation to your appointments from Jackson\(^4\) is that you make them, let them be yours. Keep Jones following. He will soon see Sights and Fly home for advise. FROM W. L. D. EWING

Hon & Dr Sir [Springfield, Ill. Feb. 24, 1843]\(^1\)

I was very much flattered at the receipt of your kind favour of some weeks since.\(^2\) I declined writing, in answer, immediately, in order, that I might sound the feelings of the Democratic portion of our Legislature and other democratic gentlemen in attendance at the Seat of Government.\(^3\)

I take great pleasure in announcing the not unpleasant intellegence (I hope) to you, that you are the universal democratic favorite for the vice presidency of the Nation. I went to work, immediately, on my arrival here in December to ascertain the truth on this subject—and to my very agreeable (I can't say surprise) I found every body with whom I conversed (and I conversed with all the democrats in & out of the Legislature at the Seat of Government) for you. There were some for Col. Johnson but these were pleased that he had put his name forth for the Presidency, relieving them thereby from any obligation to vote for him for the Viceship. He has not many friends here. Indeed no one can make a show of strength against. Carolinian, Tennessean, Kentuckian & Yankee, are all for you. If I live I shall be in the convention, whenever it may be held, if I live. I send you a half sheet of Illinois State Register containing a brief account of a very large & influential meeting of the democrats then at the Seat of Government, at which, I had the honor to preside. You will see the mode proposed for raising our delegation in the National Democratic Convention. This was done in order to propitiate what here was understood to be extreme Southern predilection. But they will all be on our side. For Van Buren & James K. Polk, at the convention and at the polls. The Senator recently elected (Judge Breese) and his Colleague (McRoberts) are for you & V. Both of whom will be in the convention.

So, my Dr Sir, in your reflections about your prospects (and no man can be without those reflections) put down the Prairie State unanimously for Van Buren & Polk. Calhoun has many friends, but let him bide his time.

FROM JONATHAN P. HARDWICKE

My Dear Sir Charlotte Febry 25th 1843

You will have seen ere this reaches you the result of the Dover Convention which I have no doubt is satisfactory to you at least so far as Cave is concerned.1 Our man Voorhies is doubtless the ablest Politian amongst us, and will I hope be acceptable to our friends in the District. Eubank will run on our side in Dickson, for the Lower Branch. Our Circuit Court is just over. It is believed by Caves nearest friends that he will not accept the nomination. In that event, I have very reluctantly agreed if the Convention men will upon his declining it, call me out in a proper manner [I will] take the field.

I do and will continue to hope he will accept and run till the contrary is made to appear. Nothing in my opinion but his bad health will cause him to decline it, and to the latest dates from him his health was improving. Judge Martin will be the Whig Candidate if one they have, and will run upon the Bank and Tariff alone. He expects to make a great change in Our district, on account of the great Iron Interest, here. The Judge can't come it, nor can any other Whig in our district if we do as we should & I hope we will.

Nothing but our cause could induce me again to enter the field. The Convention I learn were unanimously in favour of me next to Cave, or in the event he could not run. I do not want to run at all but if our folks do as they say they will, as before remarked I shall forego all the consequences, and meet you perhaps in Robertson at the Gov's first appointment.2

My dear Sir, Memphis Tennessee February 27th 1843

We are much pressed in this district for candidates—no one to run for Congress, for the Senate, or for the house of representatives.1 However, David Fentress of Hardeman wishes (as I believe) to run for Congress, and some of our friends think he would run well. But I have no such idea.
February 27 1843

The truth is, I apprehend he will injure our success. This belief is founded upon the fact that we were both electioning before the last election; and the result was, that he did not get the party strength in Hardeman, as you and myself both beat him; and he was running against an unpretending stranger, tho a man of good sense. Fentress does not make a good speech before the people—his address is uncouth and rough, and in my opinion would not suit a large portion of this district. But the probability are in favour of his being our candidate, and if so, we will do our best to elect him. He is a true Democrat and party man. I have done all in my power to get those to become candidates who would assist you in your election, but I have thus far failed. But be assured, that we will run those for the Legislature who will succeed. At the last election you beat Jones in Hardeman 229 votes. You will at the next election beat him not less than 300 votes. In this county Jones beat you about 96 votes, and at the next election I had rather have your chance than his for the majority. I am firmly of the opinion, from all the information I can get from all parts of this division of the state, that Jones can not beat you as far as did Gov Cannon. I have heard from some of our leading friends in E Tennessee and they assure me that you have gained ground there.

I will have the pleasure of seeing you at Jackson the first of April, and may possibly want a few letters of introduction from you, as I am going west and south this spring.

Henry Clay is in this town, and the Whigs are doing their utmost for him. They appointed 25 to visit him at New Orleans and invite him to call at this place on his return home, and only one out of the 25 went down, and he reached here last Saturday. He was recd at the river with more or less pomp & circumstance. From thence he went to the Exchange Hotel; and Leroy P[ope] flattered him; and he replied in a speech of one hour long, declaring himself for his old “American System.” I was not present, but the Democrats say, it was a perfect failure. He is still in town going from house to house, but he makes no changes, and a splendid defeat awaits him in 1844. I have spoken free of Mr Fentress, but not with malice, for we are friendly, and if by accident he was to hear the contents of this letter, it would offend him. Therefore it with you.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

My dear Sir, Washington Feb'y 28th 1843

I know you will be vexed when you find that we have not made a speech for circulation or written a circular.¹ I delayed making a speech upon M.B.² hoping for a chance upon a tariff Bill but none has been introduced & since the intention not to report such a Bill was made known, there has been no opportunity without thrusting it upon the House out of order and at the hazard of being coughed down. Brown³ has had a tariff speech ready for a month but I think has given up all hopes. As to the circular I had one half done but found that it would occupy so much space as to be unmanageable & gave it up & prepared myself for a speech on the expenditures but have not delivered it & probably will not. Times are not as formerly, when the Com. of the Whole afforded an opportunity of general discussion, particularly on the civil & diplomatic Bill.⁴ We took it up, had a slight discussion on Hasler⁵ for an hour or two on two days; then came the resolution to take it out of Com.; an half an hour after voting on Amendments without debate—& it was done; the previous question instantly called & voted thro. in half the time it would take a modest man to read it. I dont think five hours were spent on the whole Bill. So it is with every Bill. The freedom of debate is litterally crushed beneath the previous question and the res. to take Bills out of Com. We lacked but a few votes to day of taking an appropriation Bill⁶ out of Com. without its having been ever taken up in Com. The remedy we must adopt is this—when I get home whether a Candidate or not I will make my speech on M.B. in self defence & have it published. I will send it to you before publication. I must also make a speech on the Expenditures & publish it. B.⁷ must make & publish his speech on the Tariff—& so we must go thro all the questions, Tariff, distribution, assumption, Banks & Bankruptcy. I will do my part whether upon the field or not. I trust sincerely our friends may be able to unite on Majr. H.⁸ or some other available Democrat but chances are judging from my last letters that I shall be nominated. If I have to continue in politics, which I did not intend when I left home I shall avail myself on the solicitations of many friends recently & become also a candidate for the Senate unless some better & older soldier than myself should be selected by our friends. Whilst I am perhaps more indifferent to such honors than almost any other, yet if I have to bear the burthen I see no reason why I should not share the honors.

I see no prospect of a convention in the fault. Our N.Y. friends all wish it but are afraid to move lest C. & his friends should be driven off & they hope, that with a little delay his weakness will be so manifest, that they will yield & fall in. In this they are mistaken. They will hold the balance in Va. N.C. Geo. Alabama & Miss. & as sure as we are living, if it is postponed until May 1844, they will leave us & ruin us. It will be then too late to meet & overcome such opposition. I tell them so—but still they are not inclined to move—are afraid of a Congressional Caucus. My only hope rests upon the Va. State Convention in March. If that body selects our time, N.Y. & N. England follows & the Convention will be holden & C. & his friends go off. But then we shall have time to beat them. Hopkins takes the same ground & is active & doing all that he can. Jones is positively still & no body knows how he is. All I believe of the other Va Democrats are inclined in favor C. & yet Hopkins tells me that there is now two to one in Va Legislature for Van. In N.C. none stands firm but Genl McK. who is too timid to say any thing. It is a general opinion here, if Van gets the nomination that you will be placed on the ticket. Abijah Mann was here the other day. He is decided for it.

I have Judge C's promise to see Van Ness on your monied business. That is now the only hope. Van Ness would do nothing to oblige any of us, because we vote agt. his Bank, unless he thought we could be bought up by it.

We passed a Bill to day which keeps old Amos out of Jail but few of the Whigs knew it & they did not wish to interpose. Only 40 voted agt. the appropriations for the Ashburton treaty. Peel's speech created a good deal of sensation here & should have delayed any appropriation until it was understood. If the weather is tolerable I shall leave thursday or friday morning.

C. Johnson

[P.S.] I hope you will find it convenient to meet his excellency at Springfield, Clarksville &c. If you cannot you must let me know & I will be with him. I hear favorable news from Robertson. Our friends think they can beat the Genl but in this they are mistaken. If he does not run, we shall be apt to get that Co. & the Senator. We shall secure Montgomery any how.

4. On February 24, 1843, the U.S. House took up the bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic service of the U.S. for the next fiscal year. Discussion continued on February 25 and 27, 1843. Francis Mallory of Virginia offered an amendment providing an appropriation of $100,000 for continuing the survey of the U.S. coast. Charles Brown of Pennsylvania opposed that and suggested a $60,000 reduction. Brown further urged that the House dispose of Ferdinand R. Hassler's office as head of the survey and assign the survey to other officials in the general government. On February 27, Brown's amendment was defeated, and an appropriation of $100,000 was passed.
5. Ferdinand R. Hassler was professor of mathematics at West Point, 1807–09; first superintendent of the U.S. Coast Survey, 1816–18 and 1832–43; and superintendent of weights and measures, 1830–32.
6. Reference probably is to a resolution proposed by the Committee on the Library and presented by Joseph L. Tillinghast. That resolution would have authorized the purchase of so many volumes of the U.S. laws as might be necessary to complete the sets then in the Library. Cave Johnson tried to refer the matter to the Committee of the Whole, but his motion was ruled out of order. Johnson then moved to table the proposal and the House concurred.

19. On February 28, 1843, the U.S. House passed a Senate bill amending the laws regulating imprisonment for debt in the District of Columbia. That legislation provided that a debtor could not be placed in confinement pending an appeal or for one year after a final judgment by the U.S. Supreme Court. Amos Kendall, U.S. Postmaster General from 1835 until 1840, was placed under the imprisonment for debt law for a judgment given against him in the case of Kendall v. Stokes.

20. On February 28, 1843, the U.S. House passed an appropriation bill to implement the Webster-Ashburton Treaty, which required $217,728 to carry out the sixth article of the treaty and an additional $300,000 to “pay and satisfy the States of Maine and Massachusetts for the expenses incurred by them in protecting and surveying the disputed territory.”

21. Prime Minister Robert Peel’s speech of February 2, 1843, concerned the reciprocal right of maritime search. Sir Robert claimed for Britain a right to visit, as distinct from the right to search, vessels suspected of being engaged in the slave trade.

FROM GEORGE W. SMITH

My Dear Sir,

Memphis March 2nd 1843

Your esteemed favor of the 26th Jany. came due ly to hand. I have delayed my answer untill I might be able to give you the desired information. I agree with you, that much depends in the approaching Canvass, upon the organization & concert of the Democrats. Up to the present time, there has been but little doing on either side in the way of organization. Though our friends are now begining to bestir themselves & I think in a few weeks, will have our ticket complete. There is no doubt but our end of the State will be as you say the “battle ground” & therefore the more necessity for harmonious & energetic action. I have no doubt the Democrats will vote stronger at the next August election in the District than they have ever done before. And this opinion is based upon my personal knowledge of many Whigs who will not sustain Mr Clay, and when the questions are argued with which he is identified, they will not support the men who support him. We have had much difficulty in selecting our candidate for Congress. We would have selected by a convention, but thought it useless to go th[r]ough a public nomination, unless the nominee, would accept. Judge Dunlap was our choice, & would undoubtedly make the best run, & could unquestionably be elected but he declines the canvass, alledging many reasons which it would seem ought

...to excuse him. We then selected judge Wm T. Brown, but I do not think it likely he will be a candidate. Fentress will be the next choice (& with many the first choice) & I am informed he will be announced in the next paper. He is a good selection, & I think will beat Mr Ashe with great ease, if he & his friends use the proper exertion. Mr Stanton will probably run for the Senate, as Judge Brown, with whom he is associated in the practice of Law, declines becoming a candidate for Congress. Or Stanton will be a candidate for Floater, in case, Mr Monroe Williamson of Fayette is a candidate for the Senate, which I think most likely will be the case. These are among our most talented men & very able debaters, will do the cause justice I think, and we have no doubt of their election. As to our Representative from Shelby—we have some difficulty. We have some looking (in this way). Charles J. Nelson a plain farmer, a good Democrat, is anxious to run, & the great majority of our party oppose it, not believing, he can be successful. He has some strength in his neighborhood, & the matter is to ease him off, without offending him, & his friends & then we will start an available candidate. I am not disposed to engage in politics, and can not consent to become a candidate unless it is to save the county—though I think we will give a good account of Shelby. And Nelson out of the way, we will start Maj Edwin Hickman or some other Democrat who can be elected. I think the Democrats are greatly indebted to you. They feel it sensibly and you may have no fears, as to their giving you their aid. Since I received your letter, I have seen Gov Jones "flourish" and your response—am glad you have opened the canvass there early. I will be at Jackson, by which time we will have our candidates all in the field & I will be able to give you more definite information. Many of the most intelligent Whigs have acknowledged to me that you would beat Jones—of which fact I do not permit myself to doubt.

I see that their only hope is to make capital, out of the course [of] the "immortal thirteen Democrat Senators." Say they will call you or Gov Jones out upon that subject. They attribute the fail[ure] to elect Senators to the Democrats, and will try to make capital in that way. I believe they would be perfectly willing to say nothing about Federal politics. They dread to meet us upon these questions. You have no doubt seen an acct of Mr Clays grand entry, sojourn, & departure from our City. He disappointed his friends very much. Gave us a political speech, of an hours length, which you see reported in the Enquirer & Appeal. He made no political capital by his visit—made a very weak speech, and as to his oratory, which we all were expecting to hear, we heard nothing of it. I will probably write you again in a few days, if anything transpires worthy of notice. I will give you all the aid in my power, and wish you great success in the approaching canvass, having no doubt but that you will succeed in your present undertaking, and wish, that your life & health, may continue, to enable you to reap the great reward which the people have in store for you.

FROM JAMES M. HOWRY

My Dear Sir, Oxford [Mississippi] 3 March 1843

Since I saw you I have had a severe attack of piles which have rendered me unfit for business, or even writing to my friends. I have postponed from week to week writing to you & as I commence my circuit next monday I must drop you a line giving you the state of affairs here in short.

There is likely to spring up a family quarrel among our party here, owing to several reasons.

Our Southern friends have trifled with the North in forcing upon them a day for the State Convention which did not meet our approbation, and the Convention has been held & 37 Counties represented—21 not represented.¹ The Convention gave our present Gov Tucker the go bye and nominated Gen Brown,² who was in Congress 2 years ago. If the 21
Counties had been there, Tucker would have been renominated. But—1st Brown is a staunch Van Buren man (so is Gov Tucker) & made a speech a few weeks ago at a Dem meeting in his favor. 2nd He is a Dick Johnson man & last winter made a speech in his favor for V.P. 3. In his (Br's) section of the State recently R J Walker was nominated for V.P. on V. Burens ticket & I think in Browns county. The Convention refused to nominate candidates for Pres & V. Pres by 49 to 9, and for the present the rupture which we anticipated between V.B. & Calhouns friends has passed by. But at some of the county meetings there was exhibited a good deal of acrimony between the friends of these Gentlemen—a very imprudent & thoughtless step of our friends. Some even went so far as to allow Mr V.B. & others recriminated upon his Southern competitor.

The nominations to Congress, Dr Hamet & Col Stone & the present incumbents, will be well recd., but I think Stone & Hamet are V.B. but not certain. The others are Calhoun as you know. The conclusions of my mind are that Mr V. Buren is the choice of a majority of the Democracy of Mississippi and nearly all admit, that if he is chosen that you are their choice for the 2nd Office. But in the South, our leading men are against you in general. One very favorable sign is that in several of the counties you were nominated on both tickets—V.B. & Calhoun. Will not this have a salutary influence in your favor in a Natl. Convention? I See Col Johnson7 has been invited to Natchez & says he will accept this Spring. The counties most friendly to you refused to go into Convention & thus many did not speak at all. From all I can learn Mr V. Buren will be the candidate as he should be before all others, and from Washington I learn our friends look for a difficulty growing out of the rival claims of yourself & Col Johnson. Our county held a meeting. I was from home. Calhoun was nominated by a close vote, & you were unanimously nominated for V.P. Our strength was not present. It is close here however between V.B. & Calhoun if all were to vote.

I hear nothing about a day for the Natl. Convention. The Hon Milton Brown I See, is anxious to change the venue. I have no doubt the Nashville Junta would like to change the venue & they could combine a tremendous force against you through the press & send Jones around to keep you engaged before the people. How many would you have to fight in this way? Hard to tell. If the Banks had money to spare & the paper money gentry had the funds to write & print & spend in electioneering they would give you trouble. I think as far as their means will go they will do so any how. Get strong men out for all offices is the plan as you well know. Let old Cave be renominated. I am sorry to press a fair nag "but once more to the breach, dear friends, once more" & this controversy is setled for years. Cave is too much interested in the result to refuse unless his equal could be found & that you know [cannot]10 be done. I think Harry Brown will best Milton.11 [As for] the Legislature in that District the best men [will be] run. We will hold on for you, & every hope is [extended] for your triumphant success.

Clay has been among us. He cant keep from entering into politics, altho Democrats join in doing him honor. I've no news here of a local character. Some portion of our party are trying to stir up the question of repudiating the Planters Bank Bonds12 but it will not take. But there is danger in the question.

I know you are & will be busy, but if any thing occurs worth writing drop me a line.

I fear the seat of Govt question will do harm some where, but I dont know where it will fall, in your state.

FROM SARAH C. POLK

My dear Husband       Columbia March 3rd 1843

Agreeable to your order (or request) I write you to day. I have heard but little since you left on the subject of Politicks or candidates. The Observer\(^1\) of yesterday, did not have one paragraph in it to your notice. The Democrat\(^2\) contained McCay Cambell's letter announcing himself a candidate for the Senate, subject to a convention. His letter I do not like, and I have not seen any one to talk with since the paper came out. Dickerson is also out in the same paper, with a piece of writing, to the people of Maury, saying he had numerous personal solicitations to become a candidate, and takes that mode of thanking his friends, and that he had been fighting as a private and for two long years had been a daily labourer in the cause, says he is parentless & pennyless &c. All such stuff concludes, that if he is the choice of the convention he will serve. In the same paper, Dew, declines the solicitations of Many voters, and thinks his law office demands more of his attention. There has come no letter from Brown since you left. But one from Andy Johnson, Millegan,\(^3\) and some others all giving a good account of things. Johnson writes in good feeling, but like a skulk. The Nashville papers are attacking you, about your denunciations of the Bankrupts, in your speeches at different places.\(^4\) From the tenor of these articles they hope to prejudice all the Democrats who have taken benefit of the Bankrupt law. They appeal to them, will you vote for a man who has no feeling or sympathy for the oppressed—who [would] call you dishonest for taken benefit of law that will relieve your distresses and all such stuff and I fear they may effect something with some persons. This is about all the Nashville papers have said of you since you left. Zollicoffer is yet sick and I reckon Jones writes himself. Democrat yesterday has an article headed, Gov. Polk & the Vice Presidency, noticing, an article from the Lebanon Spy, Ohio,\(^5\) suggesting your name for the V.P. This is all that I know of Politics at present.

Rufus Polk died last saturday and was intered at the Polk chapel on Monday.\(^6\) Old Mrs. Lewis\(^7\) died Tuesday. And this is all that has tran­spired since you left. The last three days has been intensely cold here, and I have thought much of you haveing to travel such weather. We are all getting on as usual.

FROM THOMAS MARTIN

Dear Sir Pulaski March 7th 1843

Your several communications from Columbia came duly to hand. I regret to find Brown so fickle but it is in perfect keeping with his manner of thinking and acting on most subjects. I hope that when he reaches home that he will consent to remain a candidate; if so we shall have but little difficulty in this district. Brown is fearful of opposition, does not like to go thro the fatigues of a warmly contested campaign, but indeed opposition is the life of the man if he could only believe it. I have written to him at Louisville and will also take care to have a letter for him at Nashville in due time. Yesterday we had a fine meeting and things passed off well. Rowles made a warm an animated speach and we have managed to get him off of the course without wounding his feelings materially. I am sorry for Rowles; he is anxious for distinguishing and his pecuniary matters will not permit him to remain quite, thinking that he could bring himself favourably before the public by political discussion which I belive he could do. He possesses much information on many subjects and could he only condescend himself his information could be made valuable to himself and others. On some suitable occassion I think it would be well to write him giving him such assurances of friendship and consideration as you may think politic and reasonable. I should be glad to see him promoted and kept in a pretty good humor. This is rather a digression. We adopted at the meeting yesterday some pretty spirited resolutions, some complimentary notices of some of our prominent men yourself amongst the number. We have placed Calhoun & Van Buren on equal footing. Buford and Buchanon we recommend for Representatives and we confirmed the nomination of Colo Wilkes. The anunciation of Brown for Congress and the prompt and fearless presentation of candidates for the Legislature will do us good and we hope to keep the ball rolling—rolling—untill a hapy consummation.

ALS. DLC–JKP. See Aaron V. Brown to Polk, February 4, 1843.

3. On March 6, 1843, Giles County Democrats met at Pulaski. They resolved to support Polk for the governorship, A. V. Brown for reelection to the U.S. House, Richard Wilkes for the State Senate, James Buford for the Tennessee House, and John Buchanan for floating candidate for the House. Further, they resolved to support Calhoun or Van Buren for the presidency, should either be nominated by the National Democratic Convention.
4. William P. Rowles, an educator, clergyman, and newspaperman, edited the Gallatin Union from 1839 until 1841. By 1843 he had removed to Pulaski, Giles County, where he was an instructor at Pulaski Female Academy. On February 20, 1843, Rowles wrote Polk that he had announced his candidacy for the Tennessee Senate for Maury and Giles counties, but was willing to "fight as a private soldier," if the Democrats had a "better & able man" to "assume the batton."

FROM JOHN BLAIR

Jonesborough March 11 [1843]¹

Dr Sir:

I recived your communication of the 23d Decr. last² & expected to have had a favourable opening to reply with some degree of satisfaction to myself & interest to you, but such has been our unfortunate condition here owing to the number of our great men, that every thing was deemed in danger of being lost again. We had a meeting of a number of the most leading & influential men of our County³ on Saterday last & happily we removed the collissions between the aspirants to the House & for Floater & so settled the strife as to loose nothing from any one seeking to be a candidate nor their friends. We yet have another & still greater matter to settle & one which I fear will baffle our skill to manage it—I mean the selection of a Congress Candidate, or in other words to keep down the running of two or more democrats, for that appointment. A. Johnston⁴ has declared himself some time since subject to the action of a convention fairly got up & properly conducted. J. A. Aiken⁵ has declared himself under the like restrictions. Johnston's friends in Green & Hawkins have moved with hot haste & selected their delegates to meet at Jonesborough with the other County Delegates 1st May or thereabouts, but instructed to vote for Johnston. McClelland has not returned but writes to his friends that he wishes to be considered a candidate when he shall have returned.⁶ Brookins Campbell is exceedingly sore toward Johnston & will not vote for him under any circumstances.⁷ He does not wish to run save against Johnston, & only against him, to repel Johnstons attacks upon his public conduct as well as personal integrity. He is willing to be dropped in the District⁸ provided Johnston is subjected to the same ordeal & thereby give to the District a candidate who is exempt from all collisions with other aspirants. Brookins Campbell is certainly the most popular man living in this County & whilst our primary meeting did not think proper to nominate him, until McLelland\(^9\) had returned home & the whole ground explored. Still we as a salve to his feelings under Johnston's protest & charges, in the Legislature, unanimously recommended him to the consideration of the Voters of the District should he permit his name to be used. In any event this must work well for if Campbell should be nominated hereafter it will sustain him, if on the contrary he should not run, he has the gratification to know from his immediate County men that they do not endorse Mr. Js. charges of bargain sale corruption &c. We adjourned to meet again on the 1st Saterday in April next, that period being anterior to the time at which Greene & Hawkins propose to hold a convention in Jonesborough, to nominate a candidate for Congress. We in this quarter have nothing to fear, save from our friends. Doer. Kenney is the nominee for the floating member, & William Crouch for Representative.\(^10\) Doer. Martin & Kenney had become irritated each at the other & it was somewhat difficult to extinguish the spark. Our general prospects here are indeed very flattering. I must think a great increase will be shewn at the next ballot box, provided well enough be let alone, & we sustain no loss by the conduct of our own prominent men. Clay cannot go it in this County even to the Whig [\ldots]\(^11\) & that [\ldots] has been considerably circumscribed since you & Jones had your contest. I am gratified to see Cave Johnston again nominated by his freinds; he is best calculated to keep up the party in that District\(^12\) & is trust worthy in his stand in Congress. I write you this hasty scrawl at present that you may not imagine I have given up correspondence, & promise when future developements shall enable me, to write more at large. The people here on both sides are entirely free from excitement & it would be an extraordinary occasion on which they could be induced to turn out. The Democrats are more stedfast than ever, & the Whigs cry from fear, & seem unwilling to get into discussion on the dividing topics. In our divided condition it has been thought most adviseable to avert a line being drawn through our Democratic ranks before calling upon the people to express disapprobation to Clay & Co. If it should turn out that we can silence opposition in the congressional convass we will then be ripe for attack at any quarter. With either Johnston Campbell or McLelland alone the people would be satisfied & go into battle but with two or more, & a whig opposing them would be a failure of energy & foreboding of defeat. Our Ticket now is such as will be popular so far as adopted. Polk governor, Powel Senate,\(^13\) Kenney float & Crouch repr. With either of the persons before named for Congress, we need not fear a rapid increase. When the issue of our adjourned meeting shall be known, I will write you again, & I hope will then be enabled to give you a tighter picture upon which to look. I know not how our West Tennessee friends feel in reference to Clay's being the preferred Whig candidate, but I know here the wish is that he should run, as we can stick to his skirts the authorship of most of the wild & reckless schemes of Whig policy. I cannot be mistaken when I say that Clay would combine less Whig strength in this part of Tennessee than most others. John McLean would be the man most to be dreaded on account of his being the idol of the Methodist. I see that your appointments have been published, for the most of your time which will intervene between this & the Election. I would have preferred your being East of the Mountain before the last of June but if your presence elsewhere is more requisite, we can forego the pleasure of seeing you until that period. When did you see the old chief & how is he? I would be pleased to see him before he is called home & give him a parting shake of the hand at least. I recieved from C Johnston a prospectus of Kendle for publishing his life which I think will be patronized. Remember me to Mrs Polk. & accept for yourself my assurances of friendly regard.

FROM WILLIAM G. CHILDRESS

Dear Sir.

[Franklin, Tennessee] March 18th 1843

I avail myself of the present occasion to give you the outline or a rough skeleton of a speech delivered in Franklin today by your competitor Gov. Jones. It may be of some little interest to you & if it should not I hope it will not prove injurious. He addressed the citizens (a good crowd) more than two hours upon the various subjects or topicks of the day. He said he had seen a notice in the newspaper (Review¹ I suppose) that the county candidates would address the citizens of this county on to day it being the first day of the circuit court & on Saturday but he resolved to avail himself of the opportunity of meeting and addressing the citizens of Williamson county fearing he would not have an opportunity of doing so before the first thursday in August next as Govr Polk his competeteor had made a long list of appointments covering the State except this & Maury County.²

1st. He attempted to render as he said an act of his stewardship. He refered to his promise in the last canvass that if elected he would exert his feeble abilities to have the laws faithfully executed & to sustain in the best possible manner the Bank of the State although he had no confidence in the ability or practicability of such an institution to afford the great benefit not only deserved but expected by the people. Nothing short of a National Bank could suffice and that it was in redemption of those pledges that he had made a nomination of the two boards of Directors both of which was rejected by the democratic Senate.³ He also refered to his Message at the extra Session⁴ recommending the appointment of three men to examine the Bank which was also rejected by the same body because they prefered darkness to light, & said not so with the Bank of the U.S. or as termed by the democrats the Marble place. When called upon by congress through their committee for examination they made a surrender of their books. They made an expose as honest men should do.

2. He next refered to the election of Senators to Congress & his recommendation &c & charge the defeat to the democrats.⁵ Spoke of the long usage & custom of the country &c. and that a portion of those same democrats but two years before had gone into convention with him for the election of Senators & at a time when there was a less majority for them than he had in 1841. Charged the democrats of 1839 & 40 of having instructed the Venerable White & the Galant Foster out.⁶ Then entered national politicks. Advocated a Bank of the U.S. Said Washington Madison Monroe & Grundy admitted the constitutionality of it & charged the democrats of having seduced Tyler or the people would have had what the whigs promised in 1840. That Tyler admitted at the Harrisburg convention he had undergone a change in relation to a Bank. He next named the distribution act. He was for it and contended it furnished the only means of paying off our State Bonds save that of direct taxation. That the lands belonged to the States &c.

He was opposed to the Bankrupt law. That he advised his representative in congress\(^7\) to vote against it and charged that the law would have been repealed before it went into operation but for the democrats in the Legislature refusing & preventing the election of two Senators in the Congress of the U.S. That Foster was against it which fact was known by a portion of the democratic members. He charged that the democrats were at heart & in feeling opposed to the repeal because they desired to make political capital out of it. He knew it had relieved many poor honest industrious labourers honourable worthy men with an enuendo as to the charge of all being dishonest (I fear they are making something out of this falsehood). Went on with the usual slang that Vanburen was for a Bankrupt law &c & of T. Bentons dodging on the final vote after his great parade & that he was the greatest humbugger of the day.

Next the Tarriff, alleging that the democrats charge the whigs as the tariff party and that since the formation of our Government it has been the sole mode of raising revenue and that if the democrats are opposed to this they must be for direct taxation or as they term it free trade. Some he said had thrown off the mask & come out boldly for it to wit, McDuffee a great leader, Rhett & a small democratic journal printed at Jackson.\(^8\) Then went on in rather a low manner depicting the odious system & the great & Horrid manner of executing it. Described the tax gather[er] & assessor passing through the country seeking whom they may devour. Gave an instance that occurred in the reign of Alfred (I presume before his began) when a Black Smith was called upon to tax his property when the assessor was about to levy a tax upon the Black Smith's daughter, when her father alleged she was not old enough, then the tax gatherer or assessor was about exposeing of her by making an examination to asertain her age when the father slew him with his hammer, scattering his brains over the floor. He made this a most glorious act &c. He was in favour of a tariff only for revenue purposes & so far as that operated as an incidental protection it was right, and charged the protective tariff upon the democrats—that it commenced with them in 1816—J. C. Calhoun then the leader (and yet in another part of his speech he said this New-fangled democratic party had not existed more than five or six years—they had a short pedigree). He charged that Jackson Vanburen & Benton & he could name others but would not as they were not present, we had voted for a protective tariff. Yes he could mention other items besides tea & coffee—that the protective tariff consisted in the levying of the duty on the minimum principle of an article costing less than thirty cents supposed to cost thirty. Named the tariff of 1824 & 28 & 32. All those acts had recd the support of many leading democrats. He would refrain from giving the names of some as they were not present. He scorned to assail an enemy behind his back.

He charged that the act of 1832 levied a higher & heavier duty on all the articles of necessity than the act of 1842. He had compared them together item by item & he pledged himself to prove it if denied & made many insinuations as to the act of 1832.

He said the whigs had been charged & he really believed many democrats honestly believed the charge that the whigs were Federalist. Yes it had been said they were sailing under piratical colours all of which was untrue but more correctly applied to themselves & thus to the proof. What is a Federalist? It is the building up a strong federal Government, the power of the Government centering in one man. In a word it is taking from the many & giving to the few & then cited to the veto power in the president that the democrats were in favour of it. He said Alexander Hamilton was an avowed federalist & that he was for the veto power. Therefore the democrats were federalist. Again he said the democrats were for placing both purse & sword in the hands of the President by virtue of the Independent Treasury & finally stooped to the Hoe case & Vanburens giving a preference to free Negros over white men, the old slang over again. Such is a rough sketch of the Governor’s speech. I look upon it considering every thing as being one of the lowest & smallest things of the kind I ever heard from any man of the least pretentions to fill his station with that dignity that properly belongs to it.

Next followed Mr Sneed from Rutherford who is a candidate to represent the two counties in the Senatorial branch of our legislature. There seemed to be great commotion among the whigs before he was done, saying give me a Williamson democrat before him. One came to me that I had considered more bitter towards me than any other & said I know you are astonished when I call upon you to come out, but now says he, if you will run you may vote for who ever you please but do not discuss national politicks in this county. Yet the leaders are active trying to get the rank & file satisfied. A few weeks will show their success & the prospect on our part. Call if you can when on your way to Robertson.

On October 31, the Senate Bank Committee, chaired by Samuel H. Laughlin, refused to support the governor's recommendations. On November 9, 1842, Franklin M. Buchanan offered an amendment in the House providing for the election by joint ballot of the legislature of three commissioners to investigate the Bank. Two days later, the bill passed the House but was indefinitely postponed by the "Immortal Thirteen" in the Senate on the following day.

When submitted to the U.S. district attorney for an opinion, Hooe's objection was overruled; the testimony of free Negroes was admissible under U.S. law and could be changed only by Congress. Hooe submitted a memorial for review of his case to President Van Buren in December 1839. Upon review, Van Buren found nothing in the proceedings of the trial which required his interference. On June 14, 1840, John M. Botts, Whig congressman from Virginia, called for a House investigation of the Hooe case on grounds that colored persons were not competent witnesses in court. However, attempts in June and July 1840 to legislate on that subject proved unsuccessful. See House Document No. 244, 26 Congress, 1 Session.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Clarksville 16th March 1843

I reed yours upon my return & will meet you at Springfield the evening of the 23rd (the day before you speak & will return to Clarksville with you & possibly go to Henry). I find a good deal of confusion in this district but hope to be able very soon to settle every thing. But I fear it cannot be done without my becoming a candidate. I see your notices & would not perform what you have undertaken, to be the King of the Jews.
I should never be able to do it and I doubt your ability. As far as I can learn every thing looks well for the success of our cause.

I write merely to say, if you can, you had best come to Springfield the evening before. You will have a hard ride to Clarksville the day after.

The more I have thought of the suggestions in my last, the more I approve of them. Let us write out our speeches on different points & at different times & have them printed in detached parcels, so that all may read. If we can confine them to the new issues in their conduct we have them. AVB approves & will do a full share.

FROM GEORGE C. CONRAD

Dr Sir Springfield March the 19th 1843

The Whigs had a meeting here on the 1st Monday in this month, and nominated Genl Cheatham for the Legislature, Mr. Henry for Congress, & Hockett Allen Esq. of Montgomery for the Senate. It is thought Allen will run & perhaps Henry will. Cheatham accepted the nomination and made a Speech, commencing and almost ending with the U. S. Bank question. He how[ev]er abused the Democratic Senators in the Legislature for not electing Whig Senators, and for not confirming Gov. Jones’ batch of Bank directors,— charging that they refused to confirm, in order to prevent detection of Corruption in the banks &c. His main argument was that we could not get along with out a bank. That in consequence of the traitor Tyler they could not get one immediately. That the Senate (U. S.)
being democratic if the democrats had the majority in our State Senate, they could not get a bank, but if the Whigs had a majority in the next legislature, they would elect 2 Whig Senators & they could get a Bank &c. He said nothing about the Bankrupt law or Mr Clay. Felix Parker Jr.
Esq. of Common School fund Memory, followed Genl Cheatham & Hurrad. for Mr Clay against the field &c. I did not expect to say so much when I commenced writing my object being merely to inquire of you in behalf of your friends here at what time you would arrive, at this place, in attending to your appointment on the 24th Inst.? What rout will you come? Or will you come in company with Gov Jones? I presume the Bank will be the main hobby with the Whigs & I think the currency question will be the most important one to discuss here. It will be well to show that the Bankrupt law was purely a Whig measure & how many democrats & how many Whigs voted for it & that it would not have went into operation, but for Mr Clay. Also to Show the Constitutionality legality & consistency of the 13 Demo. Senators refusing to Elect U.S. Senators on the Whigs own terms &c. Has not the Whig Senate in Maryland refused to go into the election on the same terms? If you can lay your hands on the journals of the legislature wherein Adams & Clay were Charged & Convicted of corruption intrigue &c bring it with you. Please inform me at what time and by what rout you will arrive here. We would like to have your company to spend the evening with us. Can you reach here on thursday evening? If so stop at our house and remain while you stay here if you think it will not interfere with your arrangements &c. I would like to have company. If the weather is good perhaps I may go to Clarksville with you.

5. The Maryland legislature adjourned on March 10, 1843, without filling the Senate seat of John L. Kerr, a Whig whose term had ended on March 3. FROM JOHN A. THOMAS

My Dear Sir, West Point, N. Y. March 19th 43

In my last letter to you,¹ I was obliged to give such an unfavorable account of cadets Couts, & Armstrong, that I embrace the first opportunity, afforded by them, to make known to you, that their prospects are much fairer than at the date of my letter. Mr. Couts was released from arrest, with a reprimand from the Sec. of war, and some punishment by the Superintendent, & since has behaved very well. He will be graduated, I have no doubt.

Mr. Armstrong has improved in his studies, decidedly, and it is the opinion of his instructor in Mathematics, that he has the ability to get through, if [he] will apply himself. This I am pleased to hear, for I was under a different impression. I would suggest that his Father urge him to exert himself. I loose no occasion to impress upon him the advantages he is enjoying, and that he ought not to let them pass unimproved, but I fear he does not heed my admonitions.

I have learned from the papers that you are a Candidate for Governor. I wish you success, altho, I know you have no need of my wishes. Your opponent I suppose is a whig.

Our Secretary of War, you will have learned has left us, and I must add that I am sorry we have made such a poor exchange. Mr Spencer is a man of great ability and indefatigable in exertion, and commanded the respect of the Army, at least; but Mr Porter! Alas. I am informed by good authority that while an officer in the militia during the last war, he was tried for cowardice and cashiered. What a grand fight we would make with such a leader!

We are so much out of the way of politics here, that I am at a loss to know who to select for my candidate for President. If I were near you, I suppose I could settle the question. Nullification excepted, & I would be a Calhoun man; but the convention is to dispose of all doubts. For my own part, I would rather fight a real battle, than to undertake the political one in which you are about to engage. The bitterness with which the press attacks public men is past endurance. This letter is longer than it should be.

FROM TIMOTHY KEZER

Dear Sir Nashville March 20, 1843

I am now fully convinced that Col. A. Cullom, intends to be a candidate whether he is the choice of the convention or not. This I believe is settled beyond all contingency. Col. Laughlins friends are pressing his claims, with much zeal, and feel sanguine of being able to elect him, over all the combinations at work to defeat him. Under this state of affairs, there will [be] many things conspire to injure the party, and doubtless make a serious change against you. Though I would be proud to have Col. Laughlin elected to Congress, or to have a fair fight for a seat there, in opposition to any acknowledged Whig, I am yet unwilling that any local district election, should be the means of endangering our common cause, or operating to injure your election, on which the Unity of the party in this state now hangs.

I am sure of one thing, that Col. Laughlin would make any reasonable—if not unreasonable—sacrifice to secure your election. I have therefore concluded, without consultation or advice from any one, to visit McMinville and if possible to get him to withdraw from the canvass. This I think can be done upon high and honorable grounds, for the convention will surely nominate him. We can then base his withdrawal upon the ground to avoid dividing the party—for Cullom will still be in the field. And further, he can with great truth, plead the embarassed state of his private affairs and that they require his personal and undivided attention.

I am not sure that his declining, would be agreeable to you—but I believe it would prove a real benefit to you in the end. Still it would be quite humiliating to withdraw and leave one, who has acted so treacherous a course as Cullum, to a clear field. I am also aware that he would subject himself to great injustice and misrepresentation, as to the cause of his withdrawing. But in view of all these, I think the result will fully justify such a procedure.

I do not believe it will be difficult to get him to take down his name as a candidate. I feel confident it is not his own wish, nor never has been to be a candidate. He has consented to it from the solicitation of others. And believing as I do, that it is of but small importance, who represents that district, compared with who shall be our next Governor, I am therefore willing to yield my personal and still warmer feelings in the first case, even to have a chance of securing, or benefiting the latter.

In all this I am as sincere, as I have been frank in suggesting to you the motives which influence me, in the course I intend to persue.
You have of course, seen both tickets of our county candidates. I think we have nothing to fear on the score of personal, qualifications, or mental acquirements. We intend that they shall have no advantage of us, in point of marshalling forces, or of charging in a close fight.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir: Columbia March 20th 1843

I will set out on tomorrow for Springfield in Robertson County, where the canvass will open on Friday next. You will see from the list of appointments as published in the newspapers, that I will not be in your part of the State until July. I start under the most favourable prospects. That we have greatly increased our strength in the State since the last election I have not a doubt; nor can I doubt our complete success, if we use the proper energy, and can preserve harmony in our ranks. Nothing but a want of harmony and unfortunate collisions between friends can possibly endanger our success. I have silently looked on, upon the State of things in your part of the State, in the anxious hope that Col. C.1 and yourself, might be enabled to arrange the matter amicably and satisfactorily to both, and so as to avoid that division among our political friends, which I fear must follow if you are both candidates for Congress. You will I know my Dear Sir fully appreciate the reasons for my solicitude that perfect harmony and concert may be preserved in the action of our party in every part of the State. When I have expressed this solicitude I have done all I can do, and still hope that the threatened competition between friends may be avoided. I will only add that I have to day written a precise copy of this letter to Col. C.2 intending in no possible manner to interfere in the matter, further than to express my deep anxiety on the subject, and to tender to both of you my friendly advice. I shall inquire for letters at all the places where I have appointments, and will be happy to hear from you at Jackson, or at such other point, as you may think a letter will reach me. Give me your opinion of our prospects as far as you may have information.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

McMinnville, Tenn. March 27, 1843

My dear Sir,

I have received your letter of the 20th instant, dated Columbia, and one from our friend Kezer of the 23rd written after his interview with you in Nashville. It needed no assurance from him or you either to convince me of the real state of your solicitude in regard to our troubles in this district, or of your friendly feelings and wishes, present and prospective towards me personally. I had finally determined on my course of action here before I received either of your letters—and Waterson, Patton, Mercer and other Delegates who called on me on their return from the Smithville Convention, which met on Monday the 20th, concur with me in believing the course I had determined to take, in the event of my nomination. Before stating what I am about to do, let me premise, that the Convention met. About 3400 of the democrats were represented—being Warren, Coffee, Dekalb and Van Buren. About 23 to 24 hundred were not represented. Those represented are unanimous—those not represented are divided. A majority of the real democracy of White and Fentress are for me—and a minority of those of Overton and Jackson for Cullom. In the whole district, I would get perhaps 4 or 5 hundred Whig votes only—but so many of the democrats in Overton and Jackson, are daily becoming disgusted at the signs of a Whig alliance that I would get a majority of them even in Cullom's strongest counties, and I have no doubt I could and would beat him, but in the end, the cards are so stacked that our party would suffer a great falling off in the Governors and County elections, especially endangering the election of the floating members from Fentress, White and Van Buren. Already Cullom and his Whig friends, and personal friends and Kindred in Overton, have got out Micajah Armstrong a rank whig, and younger brother of Landon Armstrong—to all of whom Cullom is nearly related by intermarriages—who is running for the House upon the amalgamation and no-party hook—to put down party strife as is said—and who promises to vote the will of a majority of Overton for U.S. Senator. McCormack is running for the Senate on the same hook—put up by Ned Cullom, a rank Whig, for Alvans benefit, because he is a pliant tool, and because he is supposed to be strong in Jackson where he once got a strong vote against Isacks for Congress. He now lives, a poor creature at his coal mines on Obed's river in Fentress, but in that County, where I have lately been he has no strength. John B. Rodgers is running for floater and now lives at Bon Air in White. He, Ned Cullom, Judge Caruthers (who wants Cullom out of the way of a renewal of his Judgeship), Dibrell, Quarles of Jackson, Brooks and others have put all these plans in motion. A. Cullom tries to appear passive in the eyes of the democracy. The Whigs have two purposes in view. To run a candidate for Congress of their own, if they can see a hope of success; and if they cannot, then to injure us as much as [possible] in the manner above stated—and in which it will be impossible, if a split and conflict takes place to prevent the barter and changing of hundreds and hundreds of votes in the Governors and County elections. In a close contest between you and Jones, and between Rodgers and Worthington (a first rate friend of ours in Van Buren) irreparable injury, ruin and loss to our party may ensue. No sacrifice on my part shall be wanting to prevent it. No exertion I can make by myself or friends shall be pretermitted. I will look for justice and justification to our party hereafter. If I mistake the best course, it shall not be an interested and selfish mistake. I have not hesitated to sacrifice all I had to put on the altar heretofore, and I will do it again.

My plan. I am about to enclose the proceedings of the Smithville Convention, nominating me unanimously, in complimentary terms, with the correspondence which you will see accompanying it, to Col. Cullom. I will also enclose him a copy of the letter he wrote me, in answer to one from me, before my name was announced as a candidate last fall, in which he assures me, in terms of compliment and flattery that he would not, and did not desire to become a candidate. I will release him from every obligation implied by that letter. I will ask him to decide absolutely whether he is determined to run—and that if he will, seeing the state of the feelings of a majority of the party, that then, to avoid the evils which he must know will result from the split, that I will not—that for the sake of union—the sake of harmony—I will, at whatever sacrifice of my own personal wishes and the earnest wishes of my friends, decline the nomination and not run, and leave my justification to the judgment of my friends and the democratic party. This will submit the whole matter to his own discretion (honor he has none) and will enable me to stand rectus in curia, in all time to come. He will determine that he will run—for he has no sense of delicacy or honorable policy. I have no doubt of his having always concealed the fact from Landon Armstrong and others, that he assured me, when applied to as a friend, that he would not run. My course is, I hope right. I would not run the risk of losing the Governors election, and majorities in the Gen. Assembly for a seat in either House of Congress or any other office. If he elects to run, as he will, I cannot and will not have the slightest agency in starting any other candidate. Mr Turney or any body else. You will see the result in the papers. May heaven prosper you in your labors. Although a private combatant, I can become neither a silent nor idle member of the democratic family while I have a pen or tongue. Respects to Fentress, Coe, Maclin, Gardner, Copeland &c.

FROM J. G. M. RAMSEY

My Dear Sir

Mecklenburg March 27. 1843

I had written to Nashville about the same time & on the same subject I wrote to you last. It had given some of us here very serious trouble. But E. has at length returned. I went to see him immediately & told him that he had returned just in time to give a new impulse to the cause—that we needed it—and that we depended upon him & would not allow ourselves to question the same active agency he had heretofore given us. He needed some such encouragement & evidence of full confidence on our part—and it has had a very happy effect. You see his last paper proves it. It is the best one for months back. I believe he will continue himself. No efforts of mine shall be wanting. He has had an offer to sell out half his interest in the paper—he to be sole Editor. I believe a partner who has business habits & one that could manage the fiscal department of the establishment would be of essential advantage to him. Our friends rather advise the sale. E. is a New Engander but no Yankee & needs some one to look at the profits & disbursements of the Press. His health is better & he is now every way better than we could have expected.

I have a letter from Col. Blair—written just after their county Convention. He says it has had the happiest effects on their Assembly aspirants. Harmony is restored & conflicting pretensions reconciled. Col. Crouch is nominated for the county. Doctor Kenney for Floater. Powell

Senator. And a preference was manifested for Campbell for Congress should he be proposed by the Convention shortly to meet in the 1st Congressional District. B. thinks that matter not yet satisfactorily arranged & the Argus of last week makes an appeal to them that I think must have some influence. Here at home we hope similar dissentions among the Whigs may enable us to reap a countervailing advantage. They have five candidates for the House in Knox & 2 Senators. If they all run we can return two Democrats. But they have taken the alarm. An election of delegates to a County Convention was held or appointed to be held in each civil Dist. last Saturday—for the purpose of concentrating on one candidate for each station. It is too soon to tell to day what has been done or how it will work, but I believe we will be able to make something out of it, & also out of their Con. Con. shortly to meet at Athens. Till then we are upon our oars & will watch the course of things & act accordingly. Our friends report favorably from all the surrounding country. In Sullivan we are perfectly without discipline. Some six of our people running on the same side. A letter from a friend at Nashville says your competitor is in poor spirits, his friends not zealous.

I had written this far when I received your other letter requesting the Post containing the Posts admissions about Jones declarations two years ago at the Mansion House. Reynolds was here when it arrived & he has gone to town to procure it so as to send it by this days Mail to Jackson. He assured me it should be sent if a copy was in the county.

As to the change from Dandridge to New-market I know you would do more good at the latter place. From L. to N.M. is about 20 miles across Pigeon & French Broad Rivers & a bad road. From N.M. to New Port 28 miles & you would have to go through Dandridge at last & might affect a few friends there. The distance & character of the roads will make it fatiguing on you & I have therefore not made the change. You have time enough to write me again if you still think it best to change the appointment.

Can you have us informed how unlucky Friday went off? Edwin Polk of Bolivar has sent me a request for a Vol. on the Mecklenburg Inde. I can hear of no one but my own. Tell him if an opportunity offers I will send it, but he must consider it as a jewel & return it.

FROM SARAH C. POLK

Dear Husband Columbia March 29, 1843

According to your instructions I write you to Jackson. Though I have nothing that is worth communicating. Matters stand here pretty much as you left them. The anticipated meeting or convention of the people here on Saturday last nominated William & Gordon,¹ but did not settle the matter between Campbell & Wilkes.² Campbell’s friends wished no action on the matter promising that he, Campbell, would volentarily be out of the way in a few days. Bob Campbell³ has not acted up to what you or his friends had a right to expect from him. As well as I can learn he caused much of the difficulty. But I suppose that William will write you, all, on the subject,⁴ for you know that my opportunities for information of the kind is limited in your absence. The Observer of course poured out a new vial of wrath against you, after you left. But I think that it will be like Jones fidlers, tire and break down before August. Too much of a flourish to hold out. The Nashville Whig, not the Banner came out with the notice of the meeting at Springfield, a long sketch of Jones speech and a short one of yours, rather fairer than expected from such a quarter. Though you must have seen it before this. There has not come to you many letters since you left. I sent some to Nashville, which I suppose you received. One from the secretary of War, stating that the visiting board at West Point was done away, Which I enclosed to Dr. Ramsey. I send two to Jackson which I deem necessary for you to see. You gave me no directions where to send any letter to you after you leave Jackson. If you did I have forgotten. They may come something of importance that I ought to send to you and I am at a loss to know how or where to send them.

I must confess that I feel sad & melancholy at the prospect before me, or I should say before you. The fatigue exposure and absence for four months can not present to me a bright prospect. I have not the assurance that the body and constitution can keep up under such labours as you have to go through, and it is only the hope that you can live through it that gives me a prospect of enjoyment. Let me beg and pray that you will take care of yourself, and do not become to much excited. Don't think that I am down in the cellar, for as soon as I am done writing I am going to dress and go out visiting as this is the first good day we have had since you left. I received your letter from Clarksville. Do write me as often as you can find time to do so.

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

D Sir. Nashville 31 March 43

I send you herewith a sheet of the Post sent to me from Knoxville by Eastman.¹ If this matter is properly handled, it will tell in East Tenss. See the Union² of to day which I send you with an extract from this sheet and Editorial remarks, &c.

Harris has secured his appointment,³ is pleased and flat[tered]. It is as well so. He has lost his usefulness to our party; the Whigs have taken great pains to effect his standing and injure his influence &c.&c.

Hogan is a very true man with more care about him—and will be advised. We will get a long verry well, perhaps better than before.

Take a little time and write to Hogan. Address the firm.⁴ Urge them to keep us disconnected from Mr. Tyler, to endorse nothing or in any [way] to commit the party by what they say in their paper &c.&c.&c.

All is going on well here. Donelson has been up in Smith and is highly pleased with his prospects. So is Burford. The accounts from all Quarters is cheering. In Wilson, Jones⁵ is becoming very unpopular and I heard last night from a friend that his vote will fall off 500 to 700.

Laughlin is still trying to ease off Culloum.⁶ If he cannot he will with draw to save a division of our friends. Laughlin will then come to the Senate from his old district.⁷ Turney has declined and Long it is said will be sustained by Franklin, Bedford & Marshal. I want Jones⁸ to be re­buked. He is a good fellow but wants to go his own way. Turney may come to the Legislature.

At no time have I seen things look better and unless we injure ourselves we have nothing to fear. Keep the Prest. & his Cabinet and the last Congress Whig, Elected by the Whigs &c.&c.

Urge Our Candidates in the different Counties to press Home Fosters Refusal to answer Questions &c. No Whig will attempt to sustain him in their speeches, but will join in condemning him and slide off to some one else, for Senator. The object of Fosters friends will be as usual to get them committed to him on the stump &c.&c.

Waterson will succeed Hall.⁹ This appointment & Harris’s is realy more than poore frail Whiggery Can beare. I am fierfull that they will hang Tyler again for it.

FROM HOPKINS L. TURNNEY

My Dear Sir.

Winchester April 1st 1843

In this District,¹ M. A. Long is the only candidate for Congress. On my return home Jones and Long were both in the field. I instantly declined and set about Settling the matter between them. Jones refused to submit to a convention, which [refusal] dambed² him and he has withdrawn from the contest leaving no person but Long in the field. I could have gotten the nomination against either but not against both. I was the Strongest man single handed, but double and I was perhaps the weakest. Laughlin will decline and thus we will have no diffaculty or division in the mountain division. Jones and Cullom have both acted badly. I leave in the morning for Shelbyville court. If anything occurs I will write you again.

FROM HENDERSON K. YOAKUM

Dear Sir

You are now about to hold forth among the good people of Jackson. Success to you & the good old cause! I am so anxious to hear from you that I am prompted to write. You have laid off such a wide row to be weeded out between this and August that I expect not to see you except on the wing. I will give you the news. We have waited here with sanguine hopes that Williamson would put forth a candidate for senate. She has failed to do that, & the Whigs here having put forth Mr Sneed (who has little or no personal popularity), we have given a loose rein to Crockett, who is a good hand for electioneering, and who, at the same time that he will be beaten, will greatly diminish the Whig majority in this district. This is my honest opinion. Our great object is to give all hands a majority in this county. And will not that be doing something! We consider that the democratic is far superior to the Whig metal in this county and district. The announcement of Sneed as a candidate produced a better feeling towards Crockett among our friends. I had a conversation the other day with a gentleman who knows, and he informed me that Webster was losing cash with Tyler—Bob Tyler said he was a traitor, & was trying to get himself up as a candidate on the assumption question. "Is the president aware of it?" said the gentleman to Bob. "He is," said he, "& Webster goes out of the cabinet in one month." You may rely upon this as authentic. Another thing you may rely on; by the month of June the missions at Sardinia, Portugal, Russia, & Venezuela will be recalled.

I enclosed a copy of the proceedings of our meeting here to Mr Van Buren, and took occasion to say, that we had expressed no preference for the men we wished to fill the two high offices, because we had a partiality for one of our own citizens, &c. He replied to my letter, & among other things said, "The eyes of the democracy of the Union are upon the Tennessee election to a greater extent than usual. The condition of your representation in the senate, the feelings of the old chief, and a very proper desire to see Gov. Polk's praiseworthy exertions crowned with success are among the prominent causes of this general anxiety. I sincerely wish you success and have but little doubt of your obtaining it." In my humble opinion more depends upon our success in this state in August next, than upon any election for the last ten years. Will you not feel this in every speech. It seems to me there is little doubt; yet I feel that we should be safe. I think that Hogan will fight well. Since 1839 Harris' influence has been paralized. Drive Jones off of that distribution. question. To obtain the little that was distributed before the repeal took effect, the govt had to borrow the money. This view strikes everyone.

You will excuse the haste & plainness of this letter. There is a contest in Turney's Congressional Dist. I fear that it will do us harm in Lincoln. Be careful how you write to Jones or his friends on the subject. If you have time, I would like to have your honest opinion of the prospect. Any thing I can do for you name it. I am told that Laughlin will decline his nomination & run for Senate.

replied in which he took up the cudgels for Brown & boasted lustily that he was my man, but before he was done announced that Brown would also address the people on the next day (to day) at 11 O'Clock. 11 O'Clock came and he did not make his appearance. At 1 O'Clock the bell rang, and the crowd repaired to the Court House, & I with them. Brown made his appearance in a few minutes loaded with documents & Seated himself on the stand with old Pleasant Miller & Old George W. Gibbs by his side. He made a speech of two hours—at which his friends stamped and applauded as much as they could. I followed, and I suppose it will not be immodest for me to say to my wife, that my speech was perhaps the happiest effort of my life. I drove him to the wall upon the facts and the argument, and as in his speech he had made a great effort to turn the occasion into a frolic, I concluded to close my speech by fighting the old boy with fire, and accordingly I turned the laugh upon him—and almost laughed him out of the Court-House. Without going into further details the result is, that my victory is the most triumphant I have ever achieved. The democrats to night are all rejoicing whilst the leading Whigs are sullen & melancholy. My friends say that I have made a great & decided gain among the masses & I have every reason to believe it. I will remain here three days more & then proceed on the canvass, in the highest spirits. I am satisfied that there are very decided gains in every County through which I have passed, less perhaps in Gibson than any other.

I receivd your letter to day. I will be at Savannah on the 14th at which point I shall expect to receive another letter from you. After that the points which are on the main-stage route & where letters will reach without delay are Somerville, Memphis, & Camden, and I shall hope to hear from you at each of these places. If any letters come which you think important enclose them to me. I was never in better health & stand the canvass exceedingly well. I have not time to write to brother William, but you can shew him this letter. I will write you again before I leave here.

Since the speaking on monday & tuesday, the Democracy have kept up a constant rejoicing; Mr McClannahan, who is the strongest man of the Democratic party in this County, has been so much encouraged, by the events of the week, that on yesterday he announced himself a candidate for the Senate in this District. Mr Ewell (Democrat) who is also a talented, energetic & a fine debater announced himself as a candidate for the House. FROM JOHN J. GOODMAN

Worthy Friend Huntsville Texas April 10th 1843

I seat myself to write you a line which I flatter you will not take a miss. I further flatter myself that you will respect this communication, and give me intelligence of all the views, both personal & political, that is convenient for you to do and who is, or will be the candidates for the next Chief Magistrate of the United States. This I wish to know because we feel much interested in the prosperity of your national affairs. We take much interest in your welfare, as well as our own for the feelings and kindred bind us together all most as one people &c.

I will now say something of our difficulties with Mexico. We have had some fears of much hard fighting but we now believe all the threats of that black Hater Despot Santaana is a Hoax; he has long since bin satisfied that Anglo Saxons were thorns in Texas and it was Truly remarked by that despot in '36 that Texas was to Mexico as a fractured limb to the human body, that it was only calculated to destroy the hole body, and that Texas was only a bead of Thorns. Well a bed of Thorns it is to him and I am of opinion if he ever tryes the Experiment again of conquering Texas again he will be taught to believe that Texan valor is a perfect Toronado, for if it were not for our Cautious and Patriotic President we would of had before this time a considerable force on the west of the Rio del nort. We fear not Mexicans which has bin farly proveen, by the fact of the small band of Texans only 280 in number attacting Near where they knew there was a Mexican force of near 3000 but what was the result—11 Texans killed 18 wounded, that of the enemy 602 killed and 251 wounded, but alass at the eve of conquering the hole Mexican force at that place their amunition failed and they were bound to surrender but Coln Fisher their Comander did not consent to surrender until certain conditions were entered into by the Mexican commandres. After enter into the proposed agreement our brave Commander held his Sword over his head and broke it in Thre peices and threwed it on the ground. His men all did likewise with there rifles by beting them on the corners of the Houses and throwing them on the ground &c. It is rumored that those prisoners rebeled against their guard at Saltillo and made their escape and are on their way back. I also have just received intelligence that there is a Mexican in Washing baring dispatches to this Goverment, from the Goverment of Mexico thought to be of a character that we possess all the privileges we have as a republic, but to consent to remain as a state of Mexico. This cannot winn for Two reasons. First this Goverment has declared herself Free and Independant of Mexico and never will submit to hover under that tyranical flag. In the 2d Place she has bin acknowledge a free and independant nation by the most Powerful nations of the earth by which she has contracted national debts, and cannot and will not forfit an honest Contract.

I must conclude by a remark or Two in regard to the advantages of this Delightful Country. It presents at this time the most beautiful seanery to the eye that was ever beheld. In her wide spread praries and all over her Timbered lands all presents that beautiful Green as if it all were an oats field in Tennessee in the month of May. Our Cattle our hogs and all are fat on what nature has done for this Country and every thing we plant in the soil flourishes and grows Luxuriously even more so than in any Country I ever have seen. I am mutch pleased with my moove &c.

[P.S.] Since closing this I have received oficially that our prisoners taken at Mier is free from Mexican Cruelty and has had an unparaled battle in which the enemy lost in Killed 700 [and] our loss 25 Killed. In the battle were 2000 Mexicans and 150 Texans. Mr. Walker⁹ will tell you the particulars. J.J.G.

TO SARAH C. POLK

My Dear Wife: Perryville April 10th 1843

I received your letter by Mr. Walker last night. The meeting at Pleasant [...] former years been almost unanimously Whig, but now such have been our gains that there are great divisions, & my vote will be greatly better than it has ever been. In this county we will speak to day. My friends give me very favourable accounts. The contest is becoming warm. I find it to be necessary to expose Jones's gross misrepresentations in very pointed terms. My health is good, except a cold—from which I am recovering. I will write you again from Savannah. I most sincerely hope that the Senatorial difficulty in Maury and Giles may be speedily settled. See Dr. Hays & William & tell them to see Jonas E. Thomas and have it settled. Whilst all things are going well, at a distance, it will effect me most disastrously, if the Senatorial divisions at home should not be healed. In haste.

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Columbia April 10th 1843

I returned home from Giles on Saturday evening last, having spent the week there attending Court. Col Wilks and Maj Campbell were both at Pulaski on Monday last urging their claims for the Senate. The Whigs having on that day nominated Col. Cahal for the Senate and Mr. Goode for the House. From this movement it was clear and important, in the absence of all knowledge, as to the course Cahal would persue, and fairly concluding that his party in Giles had some authority to nominate him—that something must be speedily done to accommodate the difficulty between Campbell and Wilks, and secure entire harmony in our ranks, to avert the danger of defeat. Col Wilks, as you know, at no time anxious to run, solicited his friends in Giles, to persuade Campbell to agree that they should both decline in favor of some third man. This was accomplished without much difficulty, and Houston Thomas was agreed on as the candidate by our leading friends in that County, with the consent and approval of both Campbell and Wilks. The particulars of all this arrangement A. V. Brown can give you. When I arrived home I understood from the women folks, that from the account of Mr Walker, great dissatisfaction prevailed in Maury County. Such though, you may rest assured is not the case. There are as far as I can learn but two or three men including Mr. Walker & Jack Johnson who are dissatisfied. This being monday, many persons were in Town from the different sections of the County. And I have made it my business to enquire & ascertain the true state of the case, and I repeat you need not be the least uneasy. Thomas is more than acceptable to the people, and will make a splendid run. Jonas E Thomas, Allen, Mumford Smith, and many others of our leading friends say that Thomas will do well, and be supported warmly, unless Jack Johnson & our cousin Bob Campbell who are very busy in endeavouring to prejudice the people against him, should succeed to a great extent in their purpose. Bob Campbell is busy now in advocating a Convention, in the hope that Mr. Walker's and Johnson influence will be cast for McKay Campbell, their dissatisfaction being so great against Thomas. My own opinion is, that if they succeed in bringing about a Convention, that Nicholson will scheme himself into the position for the Senate. This I desire by all means to avoid, for with him, our party would be but little better off, than if a Whig represented the district. From all I can learn, the nomination of Thomas would have gone down with the people without a murmer, if Mr. Walker had not openly on the public street expressed his disapprobation in terms harsh and vindictive. This encouraged the others to raise the cry. He acted very imprudently for a man who pretends to have any interest for the safety of the party. It would be well for you to write to Dr. Hays. He has been very silent and will do what is right.

Since writing the above Bob Campbell has been here, and is very warm, harping on Mr Walker's opposition and influence, saying he will put the leading men on the North side of the river in motion against Thomas. I could do nothing with him. It would not in my opinion be entirely safe for you to write to him on the subject; but in your letter to Dr. Hays, you might authorize him to show parts of it to Bob. Write me fully from Savannah. All [are] well.

WILLIAM H POLK

Columbia April 11th 1843

I wrote you on last Friday by Mr. Walker, who expected to meet you. Since then I have learned nothing of consequence. I received your letter from Jackson. And your letter is all that we have heard from there, as there has been no notice in the papers as yet. But I suppose we shall have something to day. I have feared since I last wrote that my letter and Mr. Walker's views concerning Houston Thomas prospects would give you some uneasiness. William will write you all. Since his return from Giles I learn, the objections are confined to the kin, one family & Jack Johnson, which you knew all about before. There are no letters important to send you. One from the plantation. All well, there. One from T. J. Read & Son, giving an account of sales of 11 bales of cotton at 4 1/4c, which is all that is worthy of notice. Every thing is quiet here and I think but little said on the subject of Politicks. At least I hear but little; you know that my opportunities are limited. All my fears are you can not stand the hard labour of the canvass. I am not patriotic enough to make sacrifices for my country. I love myself (I mean my Husband) better or more than my country. You have rather tantalized me in making appointments so near home and yet giving me no opportunity of seeing you.

My Dear Wife:

Savanah April 14th 1843

I did not reach here until this morning, when I received your letter of the 11th and also one from William. I saw Mr Walker and wrote you from Perryville. I met good crowds at Bath-Springs & Carrollville, & found the Democracy very firm & zealous & some gain, though in these Whig regions not so great, as in the other Counties through which I have passed.

It distresses me to hear from various sources, that the only trouble in the Giles & Maury Senatorial District, springs from two or three of my kin & one or two other friends. I am well satisfied, that the compromise by which Campbell & Wilkes withdrew & Thomas was announced is entirely satisfactory, to our whole party in Giles, and if my immediate friends at Columbia would yield their personal wishes for the good of the cause, all will be well. I wish you as soon as you receive this, to send for Dr. Hays, and urge him, for my sake and the sake of the party, to induce Bob Campbell, and the two or three others who are dissatisfied to give up their objections, and whatever they may think of Thomas personally, to support him for the sake of principle. If they refuse to yield & are determined to persist, they will do infinite mischief—to me and the cause. Tell Dr. Hays & William & Saml. Walker, that surely the trouble can be prevented.

My health continues good; I stand the canvass well; I will speak here to day & will leave this evening & speak at Purdy on tomorrow. You must write me as soon as you receive this, directed to Memphis. I will write you again at Somerville.

FROM WILLIAM FITZGERALD

Dear Sir

Paris April 16 1843

The paper which I herewith enclose is one taken by my wife who is & long has been a member of the Methodist church. I thought it quite probable that you did not view the paper and I send it to you on account of the pastoral address of the ministers of that church which you will find in its columns and because of what they say in relation to the Bankrupt Law.

You Know as well as I do that the Methodist church is numerous & powerful in Tennessee & that the members have much respect for the opinions of their ministers.

I wish you had seen this before your meeting with Milton Brown. He is a member of that church. It would seem that he has disregarded the will of his constituents, the instructions of his Legislature and the admonition of his church. Instead of there being only the voice of a shylock against this Law it seems that the good & pious ministers of the church with the Bishop at their head are found warning their people against this Law. Some of the Baptist churches in this District have made rules to expell members who take benefit of this Law. Things go on well here.

My Dear Husband

Columbia April 17th 1843

I received to day your letters from Perryville & Savannah. And I am sorry to say that since I last wrote you, there has been nothing effected, among the friends in the Senatorial matter. I sent for Jonas E. Thomas on saturday last and had a conversation on the subject, and urged him to have the matter settled. He said he had been and was doing all he could, but thinks there must be a convention now; it can not be avoided. Dissatisfaction has been sent out from this town to every part of the county towards Houston Thomas. I talked with Dr. Hays & Bob Campbell this evening. Bob is holding on to McKay Campbell. The truth is they are all at sea without a compass, no one to guide, all leaders, none with judgement and all controled by personal feelings or interest. So you may know that the result will be a matter of chance. And you need not be surprised to hear that Nicholson or Barkley Martin is the candidate. I expect this to be the result. Mr. Walker & Sam Walker are not at home. Knox & William at Hickman court. So you may see that I have not much to operate on and I doubt if any thing could be done if they were all here, as every one pulls his own way and according to his liking, not principles. Such is the state of things. You need not be surprised to hear anything. I do not wish to make you uneasy, and I do not think you could do any good by writing now, to any one. Campbell promised to come to see me in the morning, and I will try to get a talk with Jack Johnson tomorrow and I assure that if I can do any thing by urging them to union and harmony and getting our own sort of a man I will try. There is no excitement here on the subject of politicks. Only this jaring among our folks. I see from the Knoxville Argus most encouraging accounts from E. Ten. stating that the Democratic vote will be increased in every county, even in the strong Whig Counties. I beg and pray of you to take care of yourself. I can not feel happy and reconciled whilst you are undergoing so much fatigue at the risk of your health. Don't permit yourself to become to much excited.

FROM JAMES M. HOWRY

My Dear Sir, Oxford [Mississippi] 19 April '43

I was in hope that I would be able to meet you at Memphis and hear the discussion but my health has been bad ever since I saw you in Novr. and my courts requiring my attention, I am denied the pleasure. I write you a line to apprize you of the state of things in our state. We are split into many fragments and owing to the nature of the split, or cause I see no remedy to save us from general defeat in the fall. A set of caucus candidates which are any thing but acceptable to the Northern Democracy. We have Union Bank\(^1\) Bond repudiators, Planters Bank Bond repudiators & most of the first are for paying the latter bonds. We have bond paying Democrats, McNutt Democrats, Tucker Dem, Howard Dem & Dem against them all, but they will not unite on any one man or principle and from present appearances I anticipate a general defeat in Novr.\(^2\) Our Leg Treasurer\(^3\) will aid the Whigs too. If we could save the Legislature so as to secure a Senator and elect our Congressional Ticket,
The State Govt. might go & do but little damage & it would have the tendency to cement us for the contest in 1844 which will be a bitter one.
The feeling is growing too between VB\(^4\) & Calhoun Democrats & the postponement of the Nat Convention until May 1844 will only increase the rivalry & not leave time to counteract it before Novr. especially if Mr VB should be the nominee.

I see Dick Johnson is to visit our state soon & has accepted invitations to Natchez, Jackson & Pontotoc, and what course your numerous friends will take towards him I do not know, nor do I know what they should do in the premise. But if any of his friends urge a meeting to invite him among us perhaps it would be best for your friends to unite, but it might be made capital of against you.

This Calhoun feeling here, will cause that interest to make a very great man out of the Hero of the Thames,\(^5\) in our State, and I heard the other day that a high functionary in our neighborhood sneeringly remarked that “if VB was nominated you would not be & he was surprised that you had not the sagacity to see it”!! My opinion is that there is Juggling going on in our State and that some of our great men are determined to do every thing to defeat your nomination in their power.

I think it is highly probable that I will be in Hawkins as you pass through in July. Your friends are well pleased with the vigor & ability with which you prosecute the great task before you. They sympathise with you on account of the great labor you have to perform.

But we hope you will reestablish the principles of Jefferson & Jackson in the Hickory State, which will decide its political caste for many years.

1. Chartered by the State of Mississippi in January 1837, the Mississippi Union Bank, located at Jackson, issued 50,000 shares of stock to the state in exchange for $5 million in state bonds that were subsequently sold by the bank.

2. Alexander G. McNutt, Tilghman M. Tucker, and probably Volney E.
Howard. A native Virginian, McNutt moved to Mississippi in 1824, held a seat in the state Senate in 1835, and by appealing to strong anti-bank sentiment won election as Democratic governor two years later. For two terms he opposed corruption in Mississippi's banking institutions. In his message of January 1840, McNutt detailed abuses in the banking system and recommended repeal of all bank charters. Howard, born in Maine, represented Scott County in the Mississippi House in 1836, served as reporter of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, and edited the Jackson Mississippian. He served in the U.S. House as a Democrat from Texas, 1849–53, and later moved to California.

Since I last wrote you there has nothing transpired but what was anticipated in the settlement of the Senatorial matter. ¹ Nicholson is the candidate and every thing is quiet: your friends goin for him and there appears good feelings. I can not write you all that has been said and done on the subject; but will leave it open until you come home. The Whigs did not bring out candidates on Monday as was expected. There is a good feeling prevailing here. Cahal & Dave Looney² are all that talk much. The Whigs are dispirited. Genl. Pillow & Humphreys³ has given such a fine account of things in the District⁴ that the Democrats are in extacies. Pillow done nothing but talk on Saturday & Monday last, and it has had its effect. Dr Sir,

You will perceive from the enclosed Eagle, that Gov Jones has answered the questions propounded to him & yourself through the Appeal. He also answered those propounded in the Enquirer before he left. They are in the Enquirer which I presume you have seen. The Whigs are talking about your not having answered &c. We think you had best forward your answer to the Appeal when you do answer them as that paper contained the interrogatories and our Editor is a little sensitive any way since the Democrats have started a paper at Jackson. Matters are going well here & we have every thing to animate us in the approaching Canvass. We think you made a fine impression here. There are a good many Whigs who have declared their intention to vote for you since you left.

Dear Sir

Your favors from Covington & Brownsville are both to hand this week. I would have written you by the way but apprehended you might not receive my letter. I sent to Nashville by last Tuesdays mail a communication to be published over my own name. The Mempis & Nashville Whig papers attempt to make me approve Jones acts. This I have thought proper to notice & in a manner that I think will make them regret they named me at all.

Our candidates all met at Bolivar last Monday. I feel that our cause in this region is safe & that there will be a small gain in all the countys south of Hatchie River. Enough I hope in this County to elect Fisher.

I recd. reliable news from McNairy Cty yesterday. You will reduce Jones majority 100 votes under his majority of 1841.

Judge Brown & myself & some others intend if circumstances call for it to take the field the 1st July and make speeches until the day of election. This we say to you in case a score of Deputy Governors turn out speech making under excuse of Jones sickness. This however is a delicate game and we must if we start at all be sure it is advisable.

Subsequently Jones paid the reward when the fugitives were apprehended. The Democratic press argued that only the governor could issue proclamations of this nature and that the governor had abused his constitutional powers by making an improper delegation of authority to a "deputy" governor.

My Dear Sir

I presume you have a number of vigilant correspondents in E Ten, who keep you informed from time to time of the state of the political atmosphere in E Ten, but for fear they have been negligent of late, I...

embrace a leisure moment to address you a line. 1st you have seen that Col Johnson is the nomanee of the Democratic party for congress in this District, and that our old friend Col. Aiken is also the Bank Democratic candidate. For fear that you may form some unfavourable opinion, as the result I have to say that I do not think Col Aikens running will effect any thing. The Democrats will not touch him. Neither do I believe will a number of the Whigs. All seem distrustful of him. I entertain not the least fear, of the result between Johnson & Aiken. Johnsons majority will be large. I was fearful at one time the difficulty between B Campbell & Johnson would injuriously effect Johnson, but that matter is now pretty well settled and reconciled. I was verry sorry of the split between Johnson & Campbell & not withstanding Campbell may have conceded too much to the Whigs in laying off the Districts. Johnson was equally culpable in being so personal in his protest, tho I am happy to inform you that I think this matter all settled & that we will hear no more of it. We are getting our Candidates for the Legislature all on the track and I hope our friends at a distance will feel easy in reference to the Block of counties in this quarter. They will do theire duty. You are doubtless aware that we have had some little difficulty, too many great men, too many aspiring for office. Still I think all things are working for the best. Our friends every where seem in high spirits in reference to the Canvass for Gov. & it is now reported in our part of the state that the Gov. (to use a sportsmans phraze) has let down. Your friends are anxious to see you and to hear you & his Exc. discuss polatics in general. Some of the Whigs have become verry desperate on acct as they say of Tyler deserting them & appointing Democrats to office. The truth is they do seem to have a hard lot after doing all they could to elevate Tyler. Now that he is bestowing the patronage of the Gov. on those who Opposed his Election. Col Johnson soon Opens the canvass & will meet with you at Newport. In the mean time I should be pleased to hear from you frequently as also our friends what are prospects ahead.

My Dear Sir:

I have [not] heard from your District\(^1\) since I received your letter at Savannah on the 14th April.\(^2\) Write me to Columbia where I will rest next week & let me know all about matters in your District, as they are now arranged. I have passed through 22 Counties. My prospects are better than they have ever been: better decidedly than they were in 1839. The Democracy everywhere are buoyant, confident of success and more active than I have ever known them. We have a gain in every County. I have not heard of the loss of a single man. The mass of the Whigs are dispirited, lukewarm & indifferent, & many of them will not vote at all. They cannot be roused by all the efforts of their leaders. FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Clarksville 10th May 1843

Dear Sir

I have intended to write you but have had nothing that would interest you. I have only been to Charlotte & made one Speech in this County.¹ There can be no doubt that you will gain on your old vote in the four counties² around me, more in Robertson than any other. Jones will lose more than you will gain. Many White Whigs³ will not be Clay Whigs but from pride or something worse refuse to vote. We hope yet to bring them all in. So far I have not heard the loss of one vote to either of us. I am fearful that Jones giving out & our friends exulting over it will aid more than his Speeches. Our little paper⁴ is doing us good service. Overton⁵ has returned from Arkansas & will probably take charge of the editorial department. The Union is loosing ground here & should be edited with more spirit between now & the election.⁶ We were compelled to run Willie & Dortch,⁷ our strongest men unless so many of our family running may injure one or more of us. I fear it will, but on whom it is to fall I cannot yet tell. I could bear it but neither of the others can. I think (under the circumstances) as we were all literally forced out we may perhaps all be elected. Singly there would be no doubt of either. Willie Norfleet (my wife's cousin)⁸ is pressing Cheatham hardly & I have scarcely seen a man who does not believe that Cheatham will be defeated tho I cannot believe it. I leave to day for Paris & shall be absent ten days & shall be hereafter very active, if I can keep up. I have been very unwell with my old disease & am very fearful I shall not be able to keep up. If I keep well I think I can make my majority larger than ever before. Every Whig candidate in my old district⁹ except Cheatham is an old Adams & Clay man & take up the Bank & a protective Tariff. The exchanges are working admirably for us. Every one returning from N. Orleans gives such accounts as adds to our cause. Clark M. Shelby¹⁰ returns an Anti Bank man & will vote the first time for Polk & Johnson. Beaumont¹¹ the Pres. of the Planters Bank returns & openly expresses himself agt. a U.S. Bank such as Clays or Biddles.¹² He would like Jackson's old suggestion a Deposit Bank & selling Bills. Our old land lord Chilton¹³ can't stand the Tariff & takes ground openly for the first time for Polk & Johnson. We strive here to make a distinction between White Whigs & Clay Whigs.

I will write you, on my return from Henry, to Knoxville. I omitted an appointment for you at Maysville. I thought you had too much on hand.
You may fairly calculate upon every member in my district being democratic except Cheatham. Willie & Dortch are of course doubtful but the chances are for us.

My Dear Sir

Mecklenburg May 11, 1843

By this days mail I received yours of the 3rd inst Post Marked Dresden. I hasten to reply to it. I could not satisfy myself that letters from here would certainly reach you at the offices off the Main lines of mail communication or you should have heard from me more frequently, & besides there was little that was really new or interesting to be communicated. Still I was desirous of keeping you informed of what we were doing in E.T. & a week or two back I wrote to Mr. Walker of Columbia, giving him a general outline of the condition of things here & requesting him to have its substance forwarded to you. As you are to be in Columbia on the 14th you will hear or see it. Since writing that I hear that Genl. Stone is out for Congress in the 3rd Dist. & tho he will get but few votes it is believed that his running will make Blackwell's election certain. Late accounts from the Crescent (2nd.) Dist. say that the Democrats who generally were sympathising with Reneau & would have voted for him to beat an 11th hour Whig, Senter, are suddenly animated with a burning desire to defeat both of them & are going into the support of Wallace with great spirit, & many of the Whigs disgusted at the mutual criminations & recriminations of their two candidates are also supporting Wallace. R. & S. are saving you a great deal of trouble. The former accuses S. of being an original Jackson man—against a Bank & all that & calls him a deserter of his party & of their principles. S. on the other hand calls R. a real old fashioned Federalist of the real Adams kind as far back as 1825 &c. &c. In this way their canvass was carried on till W. W. Wallace offered. Let their election terminate as it may I think it will operate against Jones & for you. Col. Blair writes me that Aiken will not carry off any considerable portion of the Democrats, is closely identified with the Whigs. Johnsons election is considered certain. For the Assembly I believe I communicate nothing new, except that in this county A. R. Crozier on last Saturday met his Whig competitors on the stump & made so favorable an impression that one by one in evidence of his devotion to the cause of Whiggery each competitor declared his willingness that moment to decline & let but one Whig run. They mentioned a Convention to be called the 5th June for that purpose (You may not recollect that an abortive Convention met for the same object in March & 17 set of delegates met then with 17 set of instructions & could not so far harmonise as to agree upon any nomination, broke up in confusion & five aspirants came out on their own hook. But worse & worse for them the 2 Williamses proposed Knoxville as the place of the meeting & the other three dissented—one for one place & one for another & if any thing definite has been arranged yet it has not transpired. The names of all of them are still in the Whig papers as candidates. This state of things is decidedly in our favor every way & if it continues Crozier will be elected. They cant decide who is their strongest man & the complexion of things is so discouraging that a man that is worth any thing or has future aspirations is afraid to offer. I expect however they will unite as a dernier resort upon (perhaps a new) some candidate & beat us, but just now Crozier would get 1000 votes. A good deal of interest is being felt in Jones denial of C's statement & we will make capital of that. Jones won't deny here for many Whigs heard his remarks. I can give you names of his former friends. By the way will you allow some one to copy Croziers statement & the Post's reply to him, admitting substantially its correctness. C. wants it himself. Some of the 13 & others who are candidates have requested its republication for their own use on the stump & the No. we sent you is the only one in our reach. Please have the copy forwarded immediately to me. This is a moment to use it here efficiently.

T. N. McCampell is Nelson's opponent & he is daily gaining upon him. He is a strong Anti-Bankrupt Whig & as he that far helps us we will vote for him. Several of his Whig friends are going strong for you. There is a perfect apathy in the Whig masses & the leaders cannot remove it. Our friends are somewhat indifferent too but far exceed them in spirit & zeal. It is so above us & I have no doubt that changes in our favor are taking place, silently often & calmly but not the less surely. I am gladened by every letter I receive especially from the West. No wonder Jones is sick—some of his friends are sick of him. The masses care nothing for him. I will have the Argus to meet you somewhere weekly. Eastman is doing well & his pen & his countenance show not only zeal but the assurance of success.

I got a letter last week from Smith at Memphis. It is already in the Argus as also one from Bolivar (E.P.). The latter I have answered & will the other by this mail. Success to you in your arduous struggle for our cause. I feel scarcely less sanguine of your triumph than in 1839. The fight is hard but the victory not the less sure. May the reward be equal to your services.

FROM HENDERSON K. YOAKUM

Murfreesboro, Tennessee. May 11, 1843

Yoakum reports to Polk on politics across the state. John O. Cannon1 of Athens foresees Whig victories in McMinn and Monroe; Reneau is gaining on Senter; and Blackwell may be defeated by Campbell. The Fifth Congressional District is divided and has not chosen a candidate. Jack Fletcher2 is running against Ross for the Tennessee Senate in Franklin and Lincoln. From the West, Gaines3 give a “cheering account” of Polk’s visit. Hogan thinks the Democrats have a ten-thousand-vote majority and a “ten majority on joint ballot.” Yoakum regrets the controversy between New York and South Carolina over the date for the National Democratic Convention and concludes that “every good democrat should agree to any time.”

FROM HENRY STRANGE1

Dear Sir

Huntingdon May 12th 1843

Since my return from Camden accident threw me into the Company of several of our small village politicians by whom I was informed that their file leader Gov Jones held in reserve & would use on the first Suitable Occasion evidence with regard to your Course on abolition which they pretend will startle the public mind and throw you into shame and Confusion.

These disciples assert that some years since while you were a member of Congress a petition from some abolitionists residing in No[r]th Carolina was sent to Mr Shepherd a Member of Congress from that State with a request that he would present it to Congress.³ That amongst the prominent abolitionists who figured on that Occasion was the Celebrated Mr Mendenhall who was brought up to be slaughtered by Mr Clay some time since at a public meeting in Ohio.⁴ That when Mr Shepherd received this petition he declined to present it, and that he handed it over to you with a request that you would present it, which you did. They also assert that Jones has in his possession the public records to prove these facts, and that there are now living witnesses by whom they Can be proven.

Upon inquiry I find that this matter has been talked of amongst the Whigs several weeks before your arrival at this place, and I have no doubt the Slanderous imputation of your Connection with the abolitionists has been secretly and insidiously circulated by Gov Jones throughout the Western District, with a view of having some influence in the pending election. The game has been to lie low and Keep dark while you were in this section of the State for fear of exposure, and in your absence to speak out and assume that bold front that is Characteristic of many of the reckless of your political adversaries.

I have thought proper to advise you of the above facts to put you on your guard as to the Course which your dignified opponent is taking as well as to enable you to take such notice of the matter as you may think it deserves.

4. At a Whig meeting in Richmond, Indiana, on October 1, 1842, Richard Mendenhall presented Henry Clay a petition requesting that he emancipate his slaves. With great oratorical skill Clay argued that colonization accompanied by gradual emancipation was the only practical remedy; his vigorous attack on abolitionism won the admiration of the crowd as well as considerable notice in newspapers across the country.

Kezer & Hogan will go out and I hope to do so by Thursday mornings stage. Write me. I may not be able to go. I have every thing to do here. Humphreys is become efficient and will do much good if you write him and urge him on. My opinion is that Foster is alarmed and gives up the Lower House. He is fighting for Davidson and our people will soon see that the way to Aske a Democratic majority for a favour is to send Democrats to power, not Whigs. Fosters agency for the Banks give him great power and influence. What of Nicholsons nomination?¹ What is doing &c &c? I have letters from all the East Tenness. Counties and the report is good, better than could be expected, wanting only for you to Kindle up the fires &c &c.

My opinion is that Jones will not meet you at all your appointments but fall in occasionally. If so, you ought not to exert yourself too much. Make short speeches and take care of yourself.

All that is necessary is for you to make the Trip, to go the rounds, meet your friends and set them to working. Jones, Norvell, &c &c are preparing a publication.² I hope to hear from you tomorrow night. It is late. Excuse me. In haste.

FROM JOHN W. CHILDRESS

Dear Sir MurfreesBoro. May 15 1843

Upon my return from the South a few days since I found my farm in such condition, as to require my constant attention, for a while—and I shall in consequence, not be able to meet you at Columbia this week as I had all along expected. I see from your appointments that you will be in Shelbyville about the 26th Inst. and I will be able to meet you there. My horse is in fine condition, and I will have him with me, and if you still want him, you can take him at Shelbyville, and I will send your horse home, or keep him for you as you may desire.\footnote{See John W. Childress to Polk, December 26, 1842.} If yours has or will fail and you have one to buy, I believe you could not get one any where that would suit you as well. If you should want him earlier and will write immediately I can send him to you.

Our friends here think that the prospects are very fine for the election of Smith & Currin, and a majority for Crockett in this County,\footnote{Rutherford County.} and some say in the District.\footnote{Rutherford and Williamson counties.} From all I can learn I have no doubt of the success of the County ticket. Currin makes splendid speeches, and has acquired the reputation at home of being the most talented young man in the State. Smith is very effective on the stump.

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Columbia.

TO WYATT CHRISTIAN ET AL.\footnote{Gentlemen:} Columbia, May 15, 1843

I have received through the Memphis \textit{Enquirer} the communication of yourselves and other citizens of Shelby county addressed to Gov. Jones and myself,\footnote{propounding to each, certain interrogatories upon public subjects, to which I now proceed to reply.} propounding to each, certain interrogatories upon public subjects, to which I now proceed to reply.

Your first interrogatory is as follows, viz:

\blockquote{1st. Are you in favor of a mixed currency of paper money and the precious metals?}

I answer, that I am in favor of such a currency—and for my views as expressed on the subject, I refer you to my Message to the General Assembly of this State, of the 22d of October 1839.\footnote{In that message you will find that after earnestly urging the propriety of an early resumption of specie payments by our Banks, I say:} In that message you will find that after earnestly urging the propriety of an early resumption of specie payments by our Banks, I say:

Banks, and the use of Bank-paper and credits, have become from long habit interwoven and intimately connected with all our extensive commercial operations, and if it be conceded that their employment to a reasonable extent, in conducting our trade, has in the existing state of the currency, become conducive to our prosperity, it must also be allowed that no Banks or Bank issues should be tolerated which do not rest on a solid and substantial specie basis, and be required to meet the demands of trade.

The circulation which they issue should be based upon a solid metallic foundation, such as will ensure an ability at all times to meet their liabilities promptly, and its quantity should be kept as nearly as practicable at the same amount, varying as it necessarily must to a small extent, with the seasons of shipment of our produce to market, and the return of the proceeds; but this variation need not be such as to affect materially, the amount or value of their circulation.

To these views I now add, that in my opinion the precious metals should be the basis of whatever paper circulation may be authorised or tolerated by law. Like individual debtors, Banks should meet their liabilities honestly and promptly, and whenever they fail to do so, I hold it to be the duty of the Legislative power to take efficient means to compel them to do their duty.

To your second and third interrogatories, which are in the following words, to wit:

"2d. If so, from what source should paper money emanate; from the State Governments or General Government?"

"3d. If from the General Government, in what mode should the people receive it—through the agency of a Bank, or otherwise?"

I answer that the States, having exercised the power of chartering Banks of issue, from an early period of the government, and with the general acquiescence of the people—and being in this respect beyond the power and control of the General Government—all must expect and concede that there must and will continue to be a State Bank paper circulation, whether a National Bank exists or not. There was a State Bank paper circulation during the whole period of the existence of the two Banks of the U. States—and if another National Bank were established, there would undoubtedly still continue to be such a circulation. Many of the State Banks have charters which have many years to run, and some of them I believe are perpetual. The establishment of a National Bank therefore, could not supersede them, but must, if established, issue a paper which would circulate with State Bank paper. The State Bank circulation would constitute much the largest amount of the aggregate paper circulation and the experience of the twenty years of the existence of the late Bank of the United States proves, that the paper of State Banks, used as it was by the great mass of the people in their daily transactions, was at much more ruinous rates of depreciation than it now is. The rates of exchange between different sections of the Union were higher and exchanges more difficult to be obtained than they now are, without a Bank of the United States. I am therefore in favor of a circulation to consist of the precious metals and the paper of specie paying State Banks, convertible on demand into specie—and should any such Bank suspend payment, or refuse to redeem its circulation in specie, I would adopt the most rigid means within the power of the Legislature, to compel such Bank to pay, and in the event of failure I would put it into a state of liquidation and wind it up. I will add further, that I would not yield my individual assent to the chartering of any future Bank by State authority, without making the Stockholders liable in their individual estates for the payment of the paper which they issue; I would place them upon the footing of other partnerships. Capitalists form partnerships and invest their money in merchandizing, manufacturing or other business, with a view to make profits, and are liable in their individual property for the payment of the debts of the firm, and I can see no good reason why capitalists who join together and invest their money in the business of Banking with a like view to make profit, should not in like manner be held liable to pay the joint debts of the Banking corporation or firm. I am opposed to the chartering by Congress, of a National incorporated Bank—I believe that Congress possesses no constitutional power to charter such a Bank, and if it did, it would in my opinion be inexpedient to exercise it. These opinions I have long held. The reasons for them have been often communicated to the public in writing, in printed speeches, and in public debate before many thousands of my fellow citizens of Tennessee, and I presume that it cannot be necessary that I should here repeat them.

To your fourth interrogatory, in the following words, viz:

"[4th.] Are you in favor of the Sub Treasury system passed by Congress in 1840, and repealed in 1841?"

I answer that I am; and for my views as given at some length on the subject, I refer you to my two published addresses to "the people of Tennessee," the one bearing date on the 3d of April, and the other on the 25th of March, 1841. In my address of 1839, I avowed myself to be "in favor of keeping the money of the people in the Treasury of the people under the care of officers elected by the people and responsible to them, where it can at all times be commanded for public purposes, and not in Banks, not elected by the people and not responsible to them, to be loaned out for private purposes."

In speaking of a fiscal agent of Government, I said in that address:

The Bank of the United States had been tried, and proved faithless. The State Banks had been tried and proved faithless. Was it not time to devise a system which should fulfil the requirements of the Constitution, and prevent any money from being "drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law?" It has been the endeavor of the President and of the Republican party, for almost two years, to introduce such a system. They propose to establish an Independent Treasury—a Treasury independent of Banks—a Treasury in fact, and not in theory. They propose that the Government shall keep its own money in its own Treasury, where it can, at all times, in peace and in war, be commanded for the public uses. To a proposition so simple, and which, in earlier days of the Republic, would have struck every mind as self evident, many objections have been started, some of them plausible, but none of them substantial.

In my address of 1841, I said:

Another measure of the party in power is proclaimed to be the removal of the public money from the constitutional Treasury, where it is now kept, and where it has been kept safely under a financial system that has thus far worked well, and which will no doubt continue to work well, if it be preserved. Where it is proposed to place the public money, if the Independent Treasury law shall be repealed, has not been distinctly avowed. It was undoubtedly at one time, intended by many of the leading men of the party, to place it in the United States Bank of Pennsylvania, and thus bolster up that rotten institution by furnishing to it the money of the public to Bank and to speculate upon. That Bank, which it will be remembered Mr. Biddle declared was stronger under the charter from Pennsylvania, than under that from the United States, and in reference to which Gen. Harrison in his letter to Sherrod Williams, dated "North Bend, May 1st, 1836," declared "Pennsylvania has wisely taken care to appropriate to herself the benefit of its large capital," it has, however, recently gone down, and now lies a heap of ruin in a state of utter prostration, if not of insolvency.

The market price of its stock is down below $20 in the hundred. They cannot, therefore, place the public money in the bank. Where else will they put it? Most of the banks in the United States have suspended specie payments. Will they place it in their keeping, and if they do, will they receive and pay out to the Pensioners, the laborers on the public works, and other public creditors their depreciated paper? Do they mean that the taxes of the people, paid for the support of Government shall be furnished to these or any other banks, to be a part of their banking capital?

If it is not to be so kept and used, where is it to be kept? There is no National Bank, and if one was created it could not be put into operation in less than twelve or eighteen months so as to receive them. And yet it is manifest that the immediate repeal of the Independent Treasury System is one of the leading measures of the party in power.

It is not now my purpose to enter upon the argument of the policy of the Independent Treasury System, or of the necessity which led to its adoption. These have been often presented to my fellow citizens, and if necessary, will be again, in my personal intercourse with them. It has been sometimes urged by my political opponents that I, at one time, gave my support to the State Bank Deposit System. This was fully explained in my address to the people in 1839. In that address I stated that the late Bank of the United States had been tried and proved to be a faithless fiscal agent. For its long catalogue of crimes and misdemeanors, Gen. Jackson withdrew the public money from its keeping, and dismissed it as a fiscal agent of the Government. The State Banks were again employed. At that time they were generally in good credit. They paid specie for their notes, and it was believed they would continue to do so, and that as between their employment and that of the bank of the United States, they were to be preferred. It was believed that they would be faithful, and might be convenient fiscal agents. The Government was willing to try them; upon trial they proved to be unfaithful, and the State Bank System utterly failed.

It is unnecessary to enquire whether the failure of the State Bank Depository System in 1837, happened from accident, an inherent defect in the system, from inevitable necessity, by design or by fraud. It is enough that it has once happened to put the Government on its guard against a recurrence for the future. After the Bank of the United States had been dismissed as the fiscal agent of the Government, and the public money had been placed in the State Banks, it was deemed to be proper to pass a law "regulating the deposit of the money of the United States in certain local banks." A bill with that object was accordingly introduced at the session of Congress of 1834–5. It was violently opposed by all the friends of the Bank of the United States, and all those who were in favor of restoring the public money to the keeping of that institution. After a protracted discussion, and after the bill had been matured and was ready for the final action of the House, a proposition of amendment was made by a gentleman (Mr. Gordon) who disapproved the removal of the deposits and was avowedly in favor of their restoration to the Bank of the United States—to dispense with the use of all Banks as fiscal agents. The proposition was presented in a crude and undigested form. It provided no vaults or other place in which the public money could be safely kept. It provided no punishment for the fraudulent or improper use of it. It contained none of the guards and checks of the present Independent Treasury law, by which the public money is so amply secured in the Treasury against peculation and fraud. It was a naked proposition without details, and had it been adopted would have been wholly impracticable. It was not brought forward in a manner, or in circumstances to attract the serious consideration of any considerable portion of either party in the House and the highest evidence that it was only intended to embarrass the measure before the House consists in the fact that all who voted for it with a single exception, were the friends of the Bank of the United States, and in favor of restoring the public money to that institution. The fact that it was intended only to embarrass the measure before the House and to coerce the restoration of the deposits to the Bank of the United States, has been distinctly admitted by one of the friends of the Bank, who voted for it. (Mr. Wise, of Va.) in a letter addressed to his constituents on the 24th of March, 1840. In that letter he says—"I am asked whether I voted for what is called Gordon's proposition in 1837, and for my explanation of that vote." And after making some explanation, he adds: "And I now declare that I would not have voted for either of these propositions if there had been the least prospect of its passage. This I expressly declared to General Gordon in relation to his amendment when he first named it to me."

The struggle at that Session [1835] was between the Bank of the United States on the one hand, and the regulation of the deposits by law in the State Banks on the other. The friends of the Bank of the United States, insisted that the deposits should be restored to that institution. The opponents of the Bank insisted that so utterly faithless as a fiscal agent had that Bank proved itself to be, that they ought not to be restored, and that in the existing state of things it was proper to pass a law to regulate their safe keeping in the State Banks—calculating, doubtless, that if no law was passed that that system of deposite would soon get into confusion and the Government be compelled to return the public money to the Bank of the United States.

The condition of the State Banks at that time, and their condition after they suspended specie payments in 1837, was widely different. Whilst they paid specie and faithfully performed their duties as fiscal agents, it was considered that their employment was to be preferred to that of the Bank of the United States. When they ceased to pay specie, and faithfully to discharge their duties to the public they were dismissed. Whilst they paid specie the friends of the Bank of the United States objected to their employment, but when they failed to pay specie they became their apologists and advocates. On the other hand, whilst they paid specie the opponents of the Bank of the United States were willing to try them, but when they failed to do so, they were unwilling longer to continue the deposite of the public money with them. The Bank of the United States and the State Banks having both been tried, and both proved faithless, the Government learned wisdom from experience, and proposed to establish an Independent Treasury—a Treasury independent of Banks—a constitutional treasury in fact, and not in tory only. Such a treasury has been established, and I see no reason why it should be discontinued, and the Government resort back again to the Bank depos­ ite system, either State or National.

I now only add, that I have seen no reasons to change my views as expressed in these addresses. The Constitution of the U.S. contemplates a public Treasury. It provides that “no money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law.” 12 Such a Treasury is provided by the Independent Treasury Act, 13 called by you “the Sub Treasury System.” It provided that the public money between the periods of collection and disbursement, should be kept in the vaults of the Treasury at Washington, and in strong boxes provided at the principal points of collection, that it should be under the lock and key of the Government—under the care of officers elected or chosen by the people according to the forms of the Constitution of the United States, that these officers should be placed under bonds with approved security, be under oaths, and be subject to ignominious punishment by long imprisonment in the common jail or penitentiary for a violation of their duty. The system had worked well, and was working well, when the party in power, at their extra session of Congress in 1841 repealed it. 14 It is error to attribute the defalcation of Swartwout 15 and others to this system. They occurred long before the Independent Treasury law was passed. Swartwout's defalcation commenced (though he was not detected until afterwards) during the period when the Bank of the U.S. was the fiscal agent depository of the public money. (The party in power repealed the Independent Treasury act, but have provided no substitute in its place.) They have been in power more than two years and where yet is the substitute which they have provided. They have left the public money to be kept under the act of 1789—which provides that it "shall be received and kept by the Treasurer of the United States." 16 They have left it to the discretion of their President Mr. Tyler to direct the place and manner in which it shall be kept. When the same thing occurred after the removal of the deposits from the late Bank of the United States by General Jackson, and before the act was passed regulating their keeping in the State Banks, the same party charged that there was a union of the purse and the sword in the hand of the President which was dangerous to liberty; and yet the moment they obtained possession of power, they did the same thing themselves. The charge that there was a union of purse and sword was false. They however made it, and if they still maintain its truth, they have themselves united them.

But the party in power may say, that they have attempted to furnish a substitute by passing Mr. Clay’s Bank Bill “To incorporate subscribers to the Fiscal Bank of the United States,” vetoed by Mr. Tyler. 17 That Bill proposed to make the Bank the fiscal agent and keeper of the monies of the United States. It provided that the “deposites of the money of the United States” should be made in that Bank, and that “all public monies in deposite in said Bank, or standing on its books to the credit of the Treasury, shall be taken and deemed to be in the Treasury of the United States.” 18 This Bank then—by Mr. Clay’s Bill was to be the Treasury of the United States. Mr. Clay’s Bill provided that the United States was to subscribe for one third of the Capital Stock and other Stockholders for the remaining two thirds of the stock.—It provided that the Bank should be governed by nine Directors, three of whom were to be appointed by the United States, and six of whom by the other Stockholders. The public money was to be placed in its keeping; and when there, was declared to be considered in the Treasury of the United States. The Treasury of the United States was thus to be placed out of the power and control of the Government and in the keeping of six out of the nine Bank Directors not elected or appointed by the Government or people of the United States, owing no responsibility to either, under no bonds, no oaths, and subject to no punishment for an abuse of their trust. Such was the fiscal agency by Mr. Clay’s Bank Bill. I fully submit to you, Gentlemen, whether such a treasury or plan of fiscal agency, is one which you can approve, or which you prefer to the Independent Treasury System, under which the Government kept control of its own money by placing it in a Treasury in fact, and not in theory only under the care and control of responsible agents, selected by the people according to the constitution and laws.

Your 5th and 6th Interrogatories in the following words to wit:

“5th. Are you in favor of a tariff or direct taxes for the support of the General Government?”

“6th. If a tariff, do you approve of such a tariff as would give protection to home industry against foreign industry?”

I answer that I am opposed to a system of direct taxation and am in favor of a moderate scale of duties, laid by a tariff on imported goods for the purpose of raising the revenue which may be needed for the economical administration of the Government. In fixing the rates of a tariff, my opinion is, that the object in view should be to raise the revenue needed by government leaving the interests engaged in manufactures, to enjoy the incidental advantage which the levy of such duties will afford to them. If by “giving protection to home industry,” you mean to assert the distinct principle, that a tariff is to be laid solely or in any extent not for revenue, but for the protection of capitalists who have made their investments in manufacturing establishments, so as to compel the consumers of their articles, the agriculturists, mechanics, persons employed in commerce and all other pursuits to pay higher prices for them, then I say that I am opposed to such a principle, and to any tariff which recognises it. “Home industry,” terms so often used by the advocates of the protective tariff system, are comprehensive in their meaning, and by a just legislation should be made to embrace the industry employed in agriculture, in the mechanic arts, in commerce and all other pursuits, as well as the industry employed in manufactures. I have at all times been opposed to prohibitory or high protective tariff laws, designed not for revenue, but to advance the interests of one portion of the people employed in manufactures, by taxing another and much the larger portion, thus making the many tributary to the increased wealth of the few. I am opposed to the tariff act of the late Congress, considering it to be in many respects of this character—and, indeed so highly protective upon some articles as to prohibit their importation into the country, altogether. I am in favor of repealing that act, and restoring the compromise tariff act of March 2d, 1833; believing as I do, that it would produce more revenue than the present law, and that the incidental protection afforded by the twenty per cent duty, especially when this would be paid in cash, and on the home valuation, will afford sufficient protection to the manufacturers and all that they ought to desire, or to which they are entitled.

Your last interrogatory is in the following words, to wit:

“7th. Are you in favor of the election of U.S. Senators by joint ballot of both Houses of the Legislature? If not, by what mode should they be elected?”

I answer, that by the Constitution of the United States it is provided that “The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof, but that Congress may at any time by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators." 21 The Legislature of this State have never by law prescribed the times, places or manner of electing Senators. Our practice has been to elect by joint ballot. In other States a different mode has been adopted, and in some of them the practice has been to choose by the concurrent vote of the two Houses—each House acting in its separate and distinct Legislative character, as it does in passing laws or performing any other Legislative act. Senators elected in each of these modes have been permitted to take their seats and serve as such—no constitutional question as to the "manner" of their election, so far as I know, having been raised. I think then, in the absence of any Legislative provision prescribing the "manner," that it rests in the sound discretion of each House of the Legislature, to select the mode or manner, which in its judgment will best subserve the public interest. The mode by concurrent vote of each House is concededly constitutional, and if by insisting upon it as the preferable mode—that be the only means of effecting a great public good, or preventing a great public injury—such as preventing the election of persons to the Senate of the United States who conceal their opinions upon public subjects interesting to the people, and who refuse to make them known, or to say whether they admit or deny the right of instruction, when respectfully interrogated upon these points by any portion of the constituent body. In such cases, or similar, I hold that either branch of the Legislature would not only be justified in adhering, but it would be due to the rights of their constituents whose interests were to be deeply affected that they should adhere, to the manner, by which these rights would be protected and preserved. The chief, if not the only value of the right of suffrage consists in the fact, that it may be exercised understandingly by the constituent body. It is so, whether the immediate constituency consists of the Legislature, as in the case of the election of United States Senators, or of the people in their primary capacity, in the elections of their Executive or Legislative agents. In either case the constituent has a right to know the opinions of the candidate before he casts his vote.

I have now, gentlemen, answered your several interrogatories. I have also answered certain other interrogatories propounded through the public papers at Memphis, by a portion of your fellow citizens of Shelby County—and as the answer to each set of interrogatories, is, in some degree, connected with the answer to the other—some of the interrogatories in both being upon the same subjects—I shall forward both answers by the next mail which leaves for Memphis, that they may be published.

TO GEORGE W. SMITH ET AL.¹

Gentlemen: [May 15, 1843]²

My attention has been called to the interrogatories³—addressed by yourselves and others—to Gov. Jones and myself through the columns of the Memphis Appeal—and I respectfully submit to you and through you to the public, my response.

Your first interrogatory is as follows:

1st. Are you for or against the first Bank charter passed at the extra session of the late Congress commonly called Clay's bill⁴—which was vetoed by Mr. Tyler.

I answer that I am "against the first bank charter passed at the extra session of the late Congress, commonly called Clay's Bill," which was vetoed by Mr. Tyler." In a speech delivered at Pulaski on the 29th of September last, and which was afterwards published in some of the newspapers,⁵ I stated the character of the bank which was proposed to be established by that Bill. I beg leave to refer you to the following extract from that speech, to wit:

The time was, and but a few years ago when the avowed bank party in this State was exceedingly small. All the prominent and leading men of the party who were now its advocates, including members of Congress, members of the Legislature, and others, were opposed to a National Bank. They supported with great unanimity General Jackson's Veto of the Bank bill in 1832. They supported Judge White and this same Mr. Tyler for the Presidency and Vice Presidency, in 1836, with their known and publicly avowed opinions against an incorporated National Bank of any kind. They had since that time changed their opinions. That, certainly they had a right to do; but it came with an ill grace from them to censure those who had not changed with them. One of the greatest difficulties which the opponents of a bank had had to encounter in this State, had been in meeting the vague generalities in which the bank advocates had dealt. They all, with perhaps rare exceptions, professed to condemn and oppose the bank of the United States, or any other bank organised on similar principles. They would say, we are opposed to the old bank, but we are in favor of a new bank, with suitable restrictions and modifications. What these modifications and restrictions were they would not specify. They talked of them in general and vague terms, but their plans of a bank they did not and would not give. Some, to be sure, had in their minds an uncertain and undefined notion of the plan of a bank with which they would be pleased, such as that there should be no private stockholders and that it should be owned by the General Government and the States. Many honest men had been made to think that a proper sort of bank might be framed that might be useful. He said he regarded it as fortunate in the future discussions of the subject that the party advocating a bank, in this State at least, had at length been driven from their vague generalities. They have brought in and passed a bank charter at the extra session of Congress. Mr. Clay was its author—President Tyler vetoed it, and because he had done so, they had denounced him as a traitor, and burnt and hung him in effigy. If President Tyler had signed that bill they said the whole scheme of Federal measures would have been complete. That bill, then, we must presume, contained their plan of a bank, and to get it they were now prepared to elect Henry Clay President of the United States.

Now, what was that bill, and what was the kind of bank which they promised by it to the country if they continued another Presidential term in power. A slight inspection of its provisions would show that it was an old fashioned incorporated Stock Bank, to be owned in part, and controlled by private stockholders, retaining all the bad features of the late bank, and embracing others that made it more objectionable than that bank, bad as it was. Its capital stock was to be thirty millions of dollars, with power reserved to increase it to fifty millions after the year 1850. One third of the capital stock, or Ten Millions of Dollars, was to be subscribed for by the United States, and two thirds or twenty millions of dollars, was to be subscribed by individuals, companies, corporations or States. The ten millions of dollars to be subscribed by the United States, was to be raised by borrowing the money. A public debt of ten millions of dollars was by the charter authorised to be created, and for that purpose a public stock of the United States was to be issued, bearing interest at the rate of five per centum, per annum, which was not to be paid until after the expiration of fifteen years. This loan must most probably, he might safely say, certainly have been made from foreigners. Thus presenting a nation of seventeen millions of freemen in the humiliating, if not degrading attitude of borrowing money on interest from foreigners to make a bank upon. The interest on the loan which was to be paid half yearly, was five hundred thousand dollars a year, and would have amounted for the fifteen years (sooner than the expiration of which it could not be redeemed) to seventeen millions five hundred thousand dollars. The bank was to be located at Washington City and was to be governed by nine directors, three of whom were to be appointed by the U. States and six by the private stockholders. All know that six would control three—so that the bank itself would in fact have been under the absolute control of the private stockholders. Indeed this seemed to have been designed by the charter itself—for it is provided that “not less than five directors shall constitute a board for the transaction of business, of whom the President shall always be one, and at least three of the five shall be of the directors elected by the stockholders.” This provision made it absolutely impossible even in a thin board, for the three Government directors in any possible case, to constitute a majority. The principal board were empowered to appoint the directors or managers of the branches. The public money was directed to be deposited with the bank and as a considerable amount of it would necessarily be always on hand, it would be used and traded upon as banking capital. The taxes paid by the people for the support of Government would constitute a part of the banking capital, to be loaned out, and upon which the private stockholders would make profit. This was the outline of Mr. Clay's Bank Bill which President Tyler vetoed. He had searched in vain through its provisions for those restrictions and limitations which were so often and so vaguely spoken of, and which were to prevent it from running into all the corruptions and abuses of the late Bank of the United States. The United States was made by the charter to go into partnership with private stockholders, to place all the revenues in the concern, and was yet placed in a minority in the directory, and was therefore deprived of all power or control over them. Who would probably have become the private stockholders in such a bank? In the west and south, where there was but little surplus capital and where money bore high rates of interest, but little if any would have been taken. Scarcely a share of the stock in the late Bank of the United States was at any time owned in Tennessee. There could be no doubt that much the larger portion of it would have either been taken at first or been ultimately owned by the federalists of the northern and eastern sections of the Union, who were the largest capitalists of the country. This was the case with the old Bank. And though the stock could not be taken directly by foreigners, there was no doubt but that much of it would have been ultimately held by them under cover of secret trusts in the name of others. He could have no doubt that if it had been established it would have soon become an immense political engine, of deadly hostility to the purity of elections, and to the liberties of the people; and would have been wielded by a corrupt faction, as was the late Bank of the U. States, and for the worst of purposes. The thanks of the country, he had no hesitation in saying, were due to Mr. Tyler for having arrested it as he did by his Veto.

Was this the kind of Bank which the body of the party in this State wanted? He thought he could answer with certainty that it was not. And yet this was Mr. Clay's Bank, and to get it, they were not told by leading public men and newspapers, they must vote for him to be President of the United States. He did not deem it necessary, and if he did time would not allow him to enter upon the general discussion of the bank question and the currency on that occasion. He would only add that neither a National Bank nor any other Bank could prevent commercial revulsions or furnish a remedy against hard times. When we had a National Bank we had witnessed such times, and when we had none we had witnessed them.

Your second interrogatory is as follows, to wit:

2d. Are you in favor of restoring the principles of the Compromise Tariff Bill of 1833?

I answer that I am.

Your third interrogatory is as follows: to wit—

3d. Do you approbate the course of the Whig nominees for the Senate of the United States at the last regular session of the General Assembly, to wit: E. H. Foster and S. Jarnagin, in refusing to declare their opinions upon the subject of the Bankrupt Law, and other subjects, and the right of instruction when called upon by one branch of the elective power?
I answer that I cannot approve the “course of the Whig nominees for the Senate of the United States, at the last regular session of the General Assembly” or of any other aspirant or candidate for public station, in refusing to declare their opinions freely and without reserve, upon all public subjects, upon which they may be interrogated by a portion of the constituent body. The right of instruction by the constituent body to the Representative or public agent, and the duty of the latter to obey in good faith or resign, is one of the cardinal principles, held by the political party of which I am a member. Destroy this principle, or permit the candidate for office by his silence to evade it, and be thereby at liberty to act as he pleases, after he is elected, is to place the servant above his master. No man in my opinion who denies the right of instruction, or by his silence, refuses to admit it, ought to be intrusted with the care of the public interests.

Your fourth interrogatory is in the following words; to wit:

4th. Do you believe that, under the constitution of the United States, Senators in Congress may be elected by the separate actions of the two branches of the General Assembly?

I answer I do. Some of the States elect in that mode; and the constitutionality of such elections has never been denied or questioned.

Your fifth interrogatory is as follows; to wit:

5th. Did the proposition made by the Democrats in the last Legislature to elect one member of the Senate of the United States of the Whig party, and the other of the Democratic party meet your approbation, or did you approbate the refusal of the Whig members to accept such proposition?

I answer, that under the circumstances as they existed, the proposition of compromise, in the election of the United States Senators made by the Democratic party in the last Legislature, did meet my approbation. By the popular vote, it was apparent, that the political parties in the State, were very nearly equally divided. By the elections of members of the General Assembly, it appeared that one party had a majority of three in the popular branch, and the other of one in the Senate. There being three times as many Representatives as there are Senators, it follows, that one Senator represented precisely as many people as three Representatives, and that the majorities in the respective Houses, were precisely equal. I was desirous that the State should be represented in the Senate of the United States, and believed at the time the proposition of compromise was made, that it was fair and proper; and that if it had been acceded to, it would probably have been satisfactory to the moderate men of both parties. When the proposition of compromise was rejected my opinion was and is, that the majority of the Senate acted properly, in insisting upon a mode of election conceded to be constitutional, by which the rights of their constituents could be preserved, and the election of Senators be prevented who concealed their opinions on public subjects, and refused to avow them, when respectfully asked, by a portion of the constituent body to do so:

Your 6th and 7th Interrogatories are as follows; to wit:

6th Are you in favor of withdrawing the proceeds of the public lands from the support of the Federal Government and supplying the deficit occasioned thereby in the National Treasury by an increased Tariff—are you in favor of appropriating the proceeds aforesaid to meet the current expenses of the Government, and reducing to that amount the Tariff?

7th. If you are in favor of distributing the proceeds of the public lands among the States, are you of opinion that such distribution should be confined to the lands within the limits of the cessions of Virginia and other States to the United States—or are you in favor of distributing also the proceeds of the lands purchased by the United States from France, including Louisiana and the lands purchased by the United States from Spain, including the Floridas?

I answer that I am opposed to the policy of "withdrawing the proceeds of the public lands from the support of the Federal Government" and distributing them to the States—but would retain the moneys, derived from the sales of the lands in the Treasury, and apply them to the payment of the necessary expenses of the General Government. I would retain and thus apply the moneys derived from the sale of the lands, whether embraced in the cessions from the States, or the lands purchased by the U. States, from France and Spain. It has been sometimes assumed (erroneously as I think) that the lands, embraced in the cessions from the States, were conveyed in trust, and upon that ground it is said the moneys derived from them, may be distributed. I do not regard the acts of cession as containing such a trust; but if they did, the cost of extinguishing Indian title, of Indian wars, rendered necessary to get possession of them; of surveys, of salaries of officers, and other expenses of bringing them into market it will be found on examination, have cost more than the United States have ever received from the sale of lands—bringing the lands actually indebted to the Treasury. The lands purchased from France and Spain, it is not pretended constitute a trust fund, and it cannot be maintained that upon that ground the proceeds of their sale can be distributed. For my views more at large on this subject I refer you to my published address to "the people of Tennessee," bearing date on the 25th March, 1841. In that address I said:

The distribution of the proceeds of the sales of the public lands among the states, and the consequent increase of the Tariff to supply an amount of revenue equal to that which may be abstracted from the common treasury, will undoubtedly be among the measures of the new administration. This is not a new question. It has been repeatedly before Congress. It was brought up by Mr. Clay during the administration of Gen. Jackson, and was deliberately considered and settled at that time. At the Session of 1832–3, a Bill for that purpose passed both Houses of Congress, and was sent to the President for his approbation and signature on the last day of the Session. The President did not approve it, but not having time, before the adjournment, to prepare his reasons, withheld it until the opening of the next Session in December, following, when he communicated a message containing them, to the Senate of the United States. The President placed his objections to the measure upon Constitutional grounds, as well as upon the grounds of its inexpediency. All the members of both Houses of Congress from this State, who were present at the vote, except one*7 of the Representatives, voted against it. Judge White and Judge Grundy voted against it in the Senate; (see Senate Journal, 2d Session 22d Congress, p. 138). John Blair, Wm.

Hall, Jacob C. Isaacks, James Standifer and myself voted against it in the House*8 (see Journal of the House of Representatives, 2d Session 22d Congress, p. 460). Three of our representatives were not present at the vote,*9 but it was well known at the time that they concurred in opinion with a majority of their colleagues, and would have voted against it if they been present. The veto of the President was every where approved by the Republican party, and by none was it more heartily or generally approved than by the people of Tennessee. The measure had been recently revived, was the subject of protracted discussion in the late Congress, and from the developements before us, will be pressed as an administration measure in the next.

The proposed distribution is in truth, but a branch of Mr. Clay's famed "American System"—a system embracing as its primary and leading objects, a high protective tariff, a profuse and wasteful expenditure of public money for objects of Internal Improvement, and high prices of the public lands; a system which operated so unjustly and oppressively upon the Southern and planting States, as to compel its advocates reluctantly to yield to the "Compromise Act" of 1833. Mr.
Clay is the author of the measure, as he was of the "American System." The limits of this address will not allow me to enter upon an extended argument of the question. A few of the principal points of objection are all that can be here stated.
If the receipts from the sales of the public lands amounting to several millions annually, shall be abstracted from the Treasury and given to the States, it follows that an equal amount must be raised by an increase of the tariff, or by a tax in some other form, to supply the deficiency; and if raised by an increase of the Tariff, it requires no argument to prove that the tax will be paid in unequal proportions by the people of the different sections of the Union—the Southern and planting States bearing much the greater part of the burden. To avoid this objection, and to conceal from the tax paying portion of the Union, the fact that the ultimate effect, if not the main object of the measure, will be to afford a plausible pretext for an increased protective tariff, it is said that the increased tax may be levied on Wines, Silks, and other luxuries. Still it will be a tax upon labor, and will naturally affect the value of our products given in exchange for them.
Must it not strike the advocates of distribution too, that the power of this argument is lost, when they reflect, that if luxuries are not sufficiently taxed, that the better plan would be to leave the monies arising from lands in the Treasury, to defray the public expenses, as far as they will go, and then to lighten the duties on necessaries and increase them on luxuries?

In another view, the proposed distribution is a tariff measure. If it prevail, Massachusetts, Vermont and other States, containing within their borders no portion of the public lands, will be immediately vested with a local pecuniary interest in them. The public lands will in effect be mortgaged to the several States, in proportion equal to their Federal representation in Congress, and they will have an interest in having them sold at the highest possible rates. They will have an interest in opposing the graduation or reduction of price, and in opposing the grant of pre-emptions at low rates to that hardy and enterprising race of pioneer occupants who have gone with their families to the West, built their "log cabins," opened their little farms and settled upon them, because they would apprehend that the amount of their respective dividends in the distribution would be thereby diminished. The manufacturing States would have a peculiar interest in resisting the reduction of price or the grant of pre-emption to settlers at a low rate, because to keep up the price of the lands, and withhold grants of pre-emption would be to check emigration, retain the laboring population at home, and thus reduce the wages of labor, and increase the profits of the capitalist engaged in manufactures. The manufacturing interests would be advanced by it for another reason. They would receive their federal proportion of the distribution, and would not contribute in the same ratio in the payment of the tax to supply the deficiency. They would in addition to this receive the bounties to their manufactures, which an increased tariff would afford, whilst these bounties would be paid by the South; in every view of the measure, it is an auxiliary to the protective policy. It is presented, it is true, in the seductive, but at the same time deceptive and disguised form, of giving money to the States out of the Federal Treasury, when it is in truth laying new burdens on the people. The manufacturing States so understand it, and hence the Legislatures of Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware and some other States, have during the past and present year, passed Legislative resolves instructing their Senators and requesting their Representatives in Congress to advocate the measure. The State of Connecticut, publicly declares that such is her object by passing Resolves, at the same time instructing her Senators and Representatives in Congress to "resist by all constitutional means every attempt to destroy or impair the protective policy," and to use their exertions to procure the passage of such laws as will effectually protect the labor of this country, "the manufacturing labor" of course is meant. The Legislature of Pennsylvania, in the month of January last, avowed in direct terms that an increase of the tariff was their object. They passed a Resolve instructing their Senators and Representatives to advocate and vote for the distribution, and passed a second Resolve in the following words viz:

Resolved. That our Senators be further instructed and our Representatives requested to vote for such remodification or adjustment of the tariff, as may increase the revenue derived from imports equal to the wants of the National Government, so that at no time hereafter, under any pretext whatever, shall any money, arising from the sales of the public lands be issued by the General Government.

All the Resolves referred to were passed by Legislatures, a majority of whose members were the political friends and supporters of the present National Administration. They have all been officially communicated to the Executive of this State, (as I presume they have been to the Executives of all the States,) with a request that the same may be laid before the next General Assembly of Tennessee. The States of Alabama and Mississippi have passed resolves responsive to the Resolves of Connecticut, in which they maintain the old ground of the South against the "protective policy." That this State will maintain similar ground with her southern sister States, when the Resolves of Connecticut come to be considered by her Legislature, I cannot doubt; in the face of this evidence before us, none can be so blind as not to see that the measure to "distribute" the proceeds of the sales of the public lands among the States, is but the pioneer step to the revival of a "protective tariff."

But there are other reasons which are conclusive against it. If the money derived from the public lands be taken from the use of the General Government to be distributed among the States, the States would receive it in sums diminished not only by the cost of distribution, but would be subjected to the additional cost necessarily incident to the collection of an equal sum by a tax in another form. In a more fiscal point of view, therefore, the policy of the measure cannot be justified. But there is still a higher and a weightier objection. The public lands are the common property of all the States, and when the money derived from them is collected and placed in the Treasury, it goes into the common fund of the nation, and is subject, as all other public monies collected from other sources are, to be applied to defray the necessary of expenses of Government—when in the Treasury, it cannot be distinguished from money collected by duties on imports, and the Government possesses the same power to distribute or give away money derived from the one source, as the other. What would be thought of a proposition to distribute or give to the States, as a mere donation, the money collected by duties on imports, thereby creating the necessity for a new tax, or increased tariff, to supply the deficiency, and yet there is the same constitutional power to do this, that there is to distribute the money derived from the lands. To distribute or give away to the States money in the Treasury derived from either source, would be in effect to make the Federal Government the tax gatherer for the States, a power not conferred upon that Government by the Constitution; and in this view the measure presents such insuperable objections to my mind that I cannot yield to it my support.

Should the policy of distribution prevail, another consequence which will follow will be the revival of that splendid and wasteful and corrupting system of Internal Improvements by federal authority, which was checked and arrested by the veto on the Maysville Road Bill. Indeed a system of Federal Internal Improvements is the hand maid of a protective tariff, and furnishes the absorbent or spunge which is to suck up the revenues necessarily collected by a high protective
Your 8th Interrogatory is as follows, to wit:

8th. Are you in favor of restoring to General Jackson the fine imposed on him by Judge Hall at New Orleans, immediately after the siege of that city, and if so, are you in favor of doing so without condition or restriction—or would you impose as a condition of such restoration a provision in the act of approving the conduct of Judge Hall implying a censure of General Jackson.

I answer that I am in “favor of restoring to General Jackson the fine imposed on him by Judge Hall, immediately after the siege of New Orleans and I am in favor of restoring it, without condition or restriction. I would not in the act of restoration, approve the conduct of Judge Hall, and thereby imply a censure of General Jackson. I believe that the declaration of martial law by General Jackson was probably the only means of saving New Orleans. I believe that the act, which was charged against General Jackson to be a contempt of judicial authority, was one which was necessary and proper for the continual safety of New Orleans. I believe that the conduct of Judge Hall was unpatriotic and vindictive, and the fine which General Jackson was required to pay under his sentence ought to be restored to him with interest from the date of its payment.

Your 9th Interrogatory is as follows, to wit:

9th. Are you in favor of the bill reported by a Whig Committee of the Senate of the United States in the last Congress, proposing to pay the heirs of General Hull his salary as Governor of Michigan, from the time he surrendered himself and the American army to the British commander during the last war, until he was exchanged for, tried by a Court Martial of American officers, sentenced by them to be shot, and pardoned by President Madison?

I answer that I am opposed to “the Bill reported by a Whig Committee of the Senate of the United States in the last Congress, for the benefit of the Heirs of General Hull, not being able to perceive any principle of patriotism or of justice, which would entitle them to the donation which it proposed to make to them. In striking contrast with the proposition made for the benefit of the heirs of Hull, is the refusal of the same committee of the Senate to restore to General Jackson, the fine imposed on him at New Orleans, without accompanying it with a provision, acquitting Judge Hall of all improper conduct, thereby implying a censure on the conduct of General Jackson. The difference between the conduct of General Hull and General Jackson is; that the former commenced the war with disgrace to himself and the latter closed it with honor to himself and his country. The Whig committee of the Senate, proposed to reward the heirs of the former, and refused to do justice to the latter by restoring to him his own money, improperly taken from him, by a vindictive judge without accompanying it with a condition implying a censure, and thereby inflicting a wound upon his reputation.

Your 10th Interrogatory is as follows; to wit:

10th. Are you of opinion that it was constitutional or expedient to pass the act which was passed at the extra session of Congress donating to Mrs. Harrison, widow of the late President Harrison, almost twenty­ three thousand dollars of the public money?¹²

I answer that in my opinion it was not constitutional or expedient to make the donation which was made by Congress to Mrs. Harrison, widow of the late President Harrison. Congress possesses no power to make mere donations, such as I regard this to be. The precedent if followed will lead to the worst of consequences. Upon the same principle, upon which the grant was made to Mrs. Harrison, similar grants may be made to the widows of our ministers abroad, of the members of Congress, of the Judges of our courts, and other civil officers, who may happen to die whilst in the public service. The precedent is a dangerous one, and if followed may lead to the establishment of an immense civil pension list, such as exists in the English monarchy. In the short debate which occurred in the Senate of the United States, whilst the Bill granting this donation to Mrs. Harrison, was pending before that body, a distinguished Senator declared that, "The aid of precedent is invoked in this case, but in vain. It has no precedent, but will form a dreadful one."¹³

And again he said:

At the head of these cases so cited, stands the act for the benefit of Mrs.
Brown, widow of General Brown,¹⁴ which was passed by Congress, in the year 1828, and gave to her the remainder of her husband's pay for the year in which he died, that is to say about nine month's pay.

I was contemporary with this case—know all about it—acted a part in it—have its history in my mind, as well as in the debates of the day—and can show that it has no analogy to the present case, and was respectably opposed at the time as being without warrant from the Constitution—of evil example—and would be quoted in after times for even worse acts. I voted against it, and so did many others, and among them those who were usually found standing as a body guard around the Constitution. The vote against the bill was, Messrs. Bell, Benton, Branch, Chandler, Cobb, Dickinson, Ellis, Foot, King of Alabama, Macon, Noble, Parris, Tazwell, Tyler, White and Williams.¹⁵ We were sixten who stood together on that occasion—a number not large—but graced with some names which have weight with the country. This case of Mrs. Brown's is quoted as a precedent for Mrs. Harrison's bill, but most unjustly. It is a military, and not a civil case. Her husband died in the army, and the reporter of the bill
(Gen. Harrison) produced the statements of the Surgeon General of the Army,
(Dr. Lovell) and of another physician, (Dr. Henderson) to prove that Gen. Brown died in consequence of a disease contracted in the public service, and was to be classed with those who were killed in the line of their duty. "It will be seen (said Gen. Harrison) that the Surgeon General asserts that if General Brown had lived, and retired from the army, he would have given him a certificate for a full pension under the existing laws of the country." This was the argument of General Harrison, and in conformity to it, proposed a preamble to the bill in these words: " Whereas the late Maj. Gen. Brown died in consequence of indisposition, contracted in the service of the United States," &c., and another member of the Senate, now a Senator (Mr. Berrien) offered an amendment to the body of the bill, declaring the reasons for the grant in these words: "Whose death is supposed to have been caused by disease, contracted while in the service of the United States on the Niagara frontier." This preamble and this amendment were not adopted, for fear they would make precedents; and now the act becomes a far more dangerous precedent without these clauses than it would have been with them.

Such was the case of Mrs. Brown—a military case—coming within the equity, as the friends of the measure agreed, of the then existing pensions laws. And this case is to be made a precedent for Mrs. Harrison, whose case is a civil one, having nothing upon earth to do with pensions, and incapable of being assimilated in a solitary particular with the one to which it refers for justification. Such is precedent—such the folly—the danger of construeing our Constitution by precedents. The first instance is got upon one reason; the next upon another, and so on, until all good reasons are lost sight of; the Constitution itself is lost sight of—and the Legislature reigns supreme without a limit upon its power, or a guide to its acts!

The other precedents usually quoted, bear as little analogy to the case of Mrs. Harrison, as does that of Mrs. Brown. The grant to La Fayette for example was based upon the ground of military services rendered in the War of the Revolution, for which he had never been adequately compensated. The case of Mrs. Decatur, and the officers and crew of the vessel commanded by her late husband, the gallant commander Decatur, was not an application for a donation, such as was granted to Mrs. Harrison, but was a claim presented for prize-money, under the equity of the act of Congress, which grants prize money to the captors of vessels of war from a foreign enemy. Decatur and his officers and crew performed one of the most gallant deeds, of any age, by recapturing the Frigate Philadelphia under the walls and guns of Tripoli. By the order of the commander of the squadron before he set out on the expedition, he set fire to the vessel and burned her after she was recaptured, when, but for such orders, he could have brought her safely out. His widow after his death, and the brave officers and seamen, who were with him, claimed that they were equitably entitled to prize money. This is the case of Mrs. Decatur, sometimes referred to, and there are no points of analogy between it and the case of Mrs. Harrison. The one is a claim: the other is a mere naked donation. I cannot refer to the other precedents quoted, without swelling this answer to unreasonable length. I will only add that it is the principle involved in the grant to Mrs. Harrison, to which I object.

Your 11th Interrogatory is as follows, to wit,

11th. Are you in favor of the Tariff Act now in force passed by the last Congress?

I answer that I am not in "favor of the tariff act now in force, passed by the last Congress." It is in my opinion, in many of its provisions, highly protective, and not designed as a revenue measure. For my views as expressed at some length upon the subject, I refer you to a speech delivered by me at Pulaski on the 29th of September 1842; and also to one delivered by me at Jackson on the 3rd of April 1843; both of which have been published.20

Having now, gentlemen, answered your several interrogatories as I trust, satisfactorily, and having also answered certain other interrogatories, propounded by others of my fellow citizens of Shelby county—I shall forward both answers, by the next mail to Memphis, to the end that they may be published.

A bill considered by the U.S. House on May 3, 1826, would have provided compensation to her and her husband's crew for their recapture of the U.S. Frigate Philadelphia on February 16, 1804, but the measure failed to pass.

20. The Nashville Union on May 5 and 19, 1843, carried lengthy extracts of Polk's speech, which was also published that year as a pamphlet addressed “To The People of Madison and Adjoining Counties.” For the publication of the Pulaski speech, see above note 5.

FROM HENRY CLAY

Sir Ashland 20th May 1843

I have received information, through so many concurring channels, public and private, that, although loth to believe, I am constrained to conclude, that you have made my conduct and motives, in the President­tial election by the House of Representatives of 1825, a frequent topic of discussion, in your public addresses to my fellow Citizens of Tennessee, during the political canvass now in progress in that State; reviving and propagating the charge, which originated against me at that epoch. Now, Sir, I recognize your clear and indisputable right to controvert any sys­tem of public policy which I ever supported, to animadvert upon any public measures which I may have sustained, or to question the correct­ness of any opinion on public affairs, which I ever expressed in any terms of language you may think proper to use; but I do not admit your right to assail my honor and probity, or the purity of my character, behind my back, and at a distance from me. And, if you choose to indulge in such a theme, I claim the right to be heard by the same tribunal before which you have arraigned me. I regret that it is impracticable for me to appear before every popular assembly which, I understand, you have addressed on the subject of my character and conduct, on the occasion alluded to. But I can present myself, upon the theatre which you have selected, to a portion, at least, of the People of Tennessee. My reputation is dear to me. After a long service in the public Councils, I have but little else to leave my descendants; and, according to the usual course of nature, I cannot expect to remain long with them.

The high offices which you have filled—member and Speaker of the H. of Representatives of the United States and Governor of the Common­wealth of Tennessee—and those to which you aspire, give to your charges a grave consideration, and demand a notice of them, to which, coming from any other source of less prominence, I should not deem them entitled.

I repose great confidence in the zeal and ability with which Governor Jones and other friends in Tennessee will, I am sure, defend me; but they have other objects to attend to, of far greater public importance than my vindication, and I have no right to impose on them entirely the burden of defending my character.

I have, therefore, to request that you will agree to meet me at such time and place in Tennessee, as may be mutually designated, and publicly discuss the charge which you have revived against me. I disclaim explicitly, all intention to interfere or influence, in the slightest degree, the approaching election in Tennessee. I have no such desire or purpose. My sole and exclusive object is, to repeal charges, deeply affecting my honor and the purity of my public conduct, which you have voluntarily renewed.

And, whilst I may have this opportunity of self-vindication, before my neighbours of Tennessee, you will have an equal opportunity of sustaining your charges, without being longer liable to the reproach of seeking an advantage from the absence of a fellow Citizen, residing in another State.

With these views, and with that single purpose, on my part, I propose that we meet at Nashville, Knoxville, or the seat of Justice of the County of your residence,1 at such time, during the month of June or July next, as you may deem most conformable to your own convenience, and publicly discuss the charge which you have revived against me, of improper conduct in the Presidential election of 1825. And, as I have full confidence in the intelligence, love of truth and justice of the great body of my fellow Citizens, of both political parties, in Tennessee, I further propose that twenty-four of them shall be selected, embracing twelve whigs and twelve democrats (you to choose the Whigs and I the Democrats) to whose final decision shall be submitted the question, whether you have or have not revived and propagated against me an exploded and groundless calumny, and whether you are—or are not bound to make any and what reparation.

Entertaining a just and confident hope that your sense of propriety and justice will prompt you cheerfully to accede to these proposals, through the same or a similar public channel to that which is the medium of this note, I remain, in the meantime, respectfully . . . .

Dear Sir

Nashville Monday night 22d [May 1843]\(^1\)

I will be at Shelbyville on Thursday night. Try and reach there yourself and write me a line if you will do so, and where I ought to stop &c.

While at Fayetteville see Jones and arrange that Turney\(^2\) be run in place of Long. It is better and puts all bad feeling down. Their is some and it had better be quieted. I hear that Genl. Moore and Nicks\(^3\) &c. say they will go against the nomination. This may be for effect &c. Long could come to the House. Akin\(^4\) will withdraw in the first district. Fentress is off and Staunton\(^5\) in the field. In this County Foster’s exertions are greater than ever they were. The party are dispirited and dissatisfied and will not hold togeather. Claiborne is at Home and in the field. We will do well and may succeed. Donelson is gaining daily. All we hear is good and looks well. As I told you Jones\(^6\) will not follow you, be with you now & then. Make your task as easy as possible. Move as far as you can, but save yourself. Pay no attention to any striker he may send. My Impression is that Gentry, Carruthers\(^7\) and all the great men of the party will be in the field. Write from every place or have it done, that we give the first Gun.

I assure all is safe and East Teness. only waits your coming to sett every thing in motion. You will see as you advance, Whiggery flying in every direction. I can see the feeling, it is so. No news.

Dear Husband

Columbia May 23rd 1843

I received your letter to day from Pulaski.\(^1\) I was pleased to find that you had time to play the beaux in receiving flowers from young ladies, for
I am sure that you did not act the beaux towards your wife when at home. There has nothing occur since you left worthy of remark. I have heard of none of Jones bragging whilst here. I do not think he had much to say, only that he would be here on the day of the Election and address the people. We have not had any Whig report from Lawrence yet. All I know or have heard Gordon told me, who called at your request. I look out for another fiddling, bragging, stunt for Jones to bolster him up. Your address appeared in the Union to day or a part of it. I send you a letter by the mail to morrow from Brownsville.

For Jones' Address, see Robert Armstrong to Polk, May 15, 1843.

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

Dear Sir

Nashville May 25 43

I find it impossible to leave at this moment. I was ready but had a Post office agent here and it is proper for me to remain. I will meet you some where before it is over.

The efforts of the Whigs continue and the fight will be a hard one. They are Insolent and Overbearing, which shows that they expect defeat. Foster is bitter, more so I understand than usual. I Know & see that he is exerting himself.

Now Govr let your whole aim be to reconcile conflicting claims &c to Keep our friends firm and togeather and excited, Confident. And urge and press on our friends Organization so that our full force may be turned out on the day of Election. Keep and make all smooth in the different Counties as you pass. It is all Important. I shall never feel again the same Interest in a State Election. If you have time write your friends before and behind you. All looks well, but still it is necessary to watch and some times pray.

Moseley made his first speech last night and made a fine Impression. We will soon be warm here. From other points our accounts are good; Stanton is out in place of Fentress. Our friends say that Akin will be off. Laughlin will come to the Senate and I hope Turney may be nominated in the Shelbyville District. He is True to you. Have it done if you can. Push Rice in Marion &c. If he keeps sober he will be Elected. The same with Lewis Sheppard. Of Waterhouse there is no danger. Have Sherrill committed. It is very easily done. He is inclined; and we ought to have a Candidate for the senate in Roane &c. Ross is by no means strong. Tom Brown told me that he would go home and offer; Scarborough of Anderson will be Elected. I know him well. Let some friend commit him; have a particular Conversation with him yourself.

We have nothing to fear if our party are only True to themselves. Exertion and a good understandg will insure success.

Your address on the Expenditures, Bank, Tariff &c must be printed—Your answer to Memphis—and your reply to Jones's address &c which you tell Hogan you will prepare and send from Fayetteville. Conner and myself will try and effect this. Publish say 10 thousand cops.

I send you some newspapers—last appeal &c.

We will make a hard fight in Davidson. "May be killed but never can be Whipt." All well no news.

TO SARAH C. POLK

My Dear Wife: Kingston, June 9th 1843

I receivd your two letters the one from Columbia and the other from Murfreesboro', by the mail of this evening. I wrote you from Cleveland and Athens, but suppose you had not receivd them before you left home. It pains me that you write so despondingly. You must cheer up. It is now but 7 weeks until the election. The worst of the canvass is over. I am blessed with fine health, and am in good spirits. That I have gained considerably in the 8 counties in East Tennessee through which I have passed there cannot be a doubt. My estimate is, that the gain in these 8 counties is from 600 to 800 votes. It may be much greater, by the failure of the dissatisfied Whigs to attend the polls, and by the fuller vote of the Democratic party. Our friends every-where are active & confident of success. The Whig leaders are using desperate efforts to rouse their party, but as far as I can judge, without success. My friends in middle Tennessee, I hope will be vigilant and active.

JAMES K. POLK

P.S. Write me to Knoxville, where I will be on Saturday next. If I shall have passed there it will be forwarded. Greeneville & Jonesborough are on this main stage route, & letters addressed to me at either place will come direct. J.K.P.

FROM ROBERT ARMSTRONG

Dear Sir

Nashville June 12th 43

What are you doing, how goes every thing in East Tenss? I get nothing from you. Are you realy used up, or have you no time to give a line of prospects &c &c?

All is going on well here. Our Candidates by their Industry and boldness have alarmed the Whigs and every exertion is made to get up Meetings in the County, in the City & in the Wards. All will not do. They cannot get up an excitement. From every Quarter our friends write in spirit. Glenn¹ says that Stanton's Election is now safe and sure. He is whipping Ashe badly.

Mathews² of Bedford says Dean³ will be Elected and requests me to say to you that the Democrats are gaining and things look better. Huntsman writes in spirit, and has hopes of Madison and a great gain for you in that section. Settle as far as you can all the conflicting Interests and have no clashing with our friends. Smooth every thing down and let us succeed this time. Then second matters. I want to see you but it is Impossible. I cannot leave a moment and will not untill the Election is over. Our friends on the stump ought to show (where a Bank is urged) That the old notes or the issue of the old Bank are selling here and every where at 40 Cents on The Dollar.

Cave & Wilie Johnston are both in high spirits. Some Doubt of Dortch. Norflit will give Genl. Cheatham great Trouble if he does not beat him.

The Prospect for Donelson and Burford is good. Barry can effect nothing in Sumner. Crockett is howling in Rutherford & Williamson but to little purpose.

Give me all the news, our prospects &c &c. Tell Eastman and Crozier to write me freely including their views of East Tennessee. Tell them to make up a true case as our friends all want to Know what to do here.

Doctor McCall will not go to night. Therefore I send the sack containing your Letters &c &c for Knoxville & East by the Stage with this Letter. I put them in a small sack marked Robert B. Reynolds Knoxville Tenn. baggage freight paid from Nashville to Knoxville, on a Leather Labelled. A Mr. Suggert will take charge of them to Sparta & will send them on to Knox. Enquire Immediately at the Stage Office. All for Middle and West Tennessee off.

If you succeed as you must and we carry the State we must then look to the Convention for Electing Delegates to nominate a Candidate for President & Vice President. These men must be of the true stripe. Their may be a clash between the friends of Van Buren & Calhoun that cannot be settled. Then your prospect as a compr[om]ise is best. The friends of V.B. &c are Democrats and could with great propriety agree upon you.

As you pass on look to such men as would be suitable. Take care of our friends settling on any particular person for Senator. Leave all open untill the Legislature meets. Any doubtfull men (Candidates) should be made safe (if to be Elected) pledged for Senator, &c. Write me all the prospects. We will have out next week a Bank pamphlet.

FROM WILLIAM WALLACE

Maryville, Tennessee. June 16, 1843

Wallace relates that the “Bank question is the most important Lobby” of the Whigs in his county and urges that Polk direct his “strongest artillery against it.” Wallace argues that the old Bank “did not regulate exchanges, nor the state Banks, and above all it needed regulating itself.” Wallace further maintains that the electorate is being misled by those who say that relief would have come “but for Tylers veto.”

TO GEORGE W. MAYO ET AL.

Gentlemen: Knox County June 17th 1843

Your communication of the 14th instant enclosing the proceedings of a public “meeting of a large and respectable portion of the mechanics of the County of McMinn,” was handed to me at Madisonville on the day it bears date.

My opinion is, that the convicts in the state Penitentiary should as far as practicable, be employed in such branches of labour, as will inflict upon them, the punishment designed by our criminal code, prevent the institution from becoming a charge upon the State Treasury, and at the same time avoid bringing the state into competition, with the labour of that large and respectable portion of our citizens who are engaged in mechanical pursuits—a portion of whom you represent. I concur with the mechanics of McMinn in the opinion expressed in their proceedings, that a "reasonable change in the present mode of prison labour" can and ought to be effected and that such modification as is believed to be practicable, would prevent the degrading operation of the liberated convict, with the honest mechanic, of which the meeting you represent so justly complain. I will only add, that should I have the honour to fill, the office of Governor, it will give me sincere pleasure to recommend to the General Assembly, the adoption of all practicable measures, by which the desired change may be effected. That such change can to a great extent be effected, and that without prejudice to any public interest I do not doubt.

TO SARAH C. POLK

My Dear Wife: Mecklenburg Knox County June 18th 1843

I receivd your letter of the 14th last evening. You say that you have receivd no letter from me, since I left Winchester. I have written several times to you since that time, addressed to Columbia. I wrote you from Kingston, on the 12th to Murfreesboro'. You continue to write despondingly, and it distresses me that you are in such low spirits. If I could be with you, you know I would be. It is however impossible for the next six weeks, and I hope you will endeavour to recover your former cheerfulness and good spirits. Since I wrote you at Kingston I have passed through Monroe, Blount, & Knox, in each of which there is a decided gain, though not a large one. The increase I think in these Counties cannot be less than 300, and my more sanguine friends think it will be double that number. The leading Whigs in this part of the State are making a desperate struggle. The Democrats are equally active, and as our canvass progresses, there are gradual & slow accessions to our ranks. I will be in Sevier, Jefferson, and Cocke on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Whiggery has its strong hold in E. Tennessee in these Counties. I have favourable accounts from them, but will write you again when I get through them. I am still blessed with fine health & am in fine spirits. I shall be elected, as I think, but still the contest is becoming so fierce, that I hope my friends in the West will not relax their caution. Tell your brother\(^3\) to write to me, to Bean's Station, where I will get his letter. Do write to me often.

My Dear Wife: Blountville Sullivan County June 29th 1843

I am sure you cannot complain that I do not write to you often enough lately. I have been in Carter & this County, since I wrote you from Jonesboro.\(^1\) In Carter there was a very large crowd on yesterday, and although a strong Whig County, it was the most attentive assembly I have met in the state. My friends think a very decided impression was made and estimate that I will reduce Jones's majority in 1841—from 100 to 150 votes. This County (Sullivan) is still strongly Democratic. There has been & still continues to be some confusion here among the local candidates which is calculated, to prevent an increase, if not to weaken us a little. We have 5 Democratic candidates, and one Whig in disguise calling himself a Bank Democrat, running.\(^2\) I hope some of them may yet be induced to withdraw. I continue to enjoy fine health, and will turn my course homeward on tomorrow morning—the next place of speaking being in Hawkins. Do write to me often.

Dear Brother

I received your letter from Greenville, but have been so busily engaged that it was not convenient to answer it according to request in time to reach you at Sparta. Sam Walker informed me last evening that he had written to you expressing the decided opinion that it would be better, if not deranging your plans materially, for you to meet Jones at this place on the day before the election. I have but little doubt, but what the friends of Jones here, made the alteration in his appointments, so as to throw him at Columbia the day before the election and at Lewisburg the day of the election. They discovered the ruinous effect of Jones being here the day of the election, concentrating all their operating influential power at Columbia. It would have given us much advantage, therefore the change. I scarcely know how to give an opinion, as to your course, but from present indications am induced to believe, in view of the unsettled state of the public mind, (applicable alone to a portion of the Whig party), that it would be of much advantage, if you could be with him at this place, having the last speech. It would have the effect of sending our friends home, with renewed energy and feeling for the contest the next day. If you are not with him here, may not his friends raise the hurrah, and unballance many of the waverers, and succeed in casting a partial gloom over your prospects, thereby enlisting that wandering portion of the voters, who have no settled and fixed political opinions, but sheer off in all cases, with what they consider the strong party. It is better in any case to battle against argument, reason, and principles, than contend with the noisy, shout of triumph, which men are excited to raise, on the eve of an election. You know best what to do. I throw out these suggestions, in the full belief that your presence here the day before the election, would be of much advantage to you, and would greatly aid the Democratic county candidates.

The election of Devenport in Lawrence is beyond all doubt. Buford of Giles will defeat his Whig opponent. A. V. Brow[n] left his county on yesterday to fill appointments in Hickman. Every thing looks well. Boling Gordon will beat his opponent beyond all doubt. Since you left for East Tenn my clear impression is, that your prospects have been brightening in this section. The proper feeling pervades our ranks; our friends go into the battle with a full confidence of success, leaving no means unemployed to ensure victory. Write me.

SHELBYVILLE TEN JULY 16, 1843

I embrace the present moment to drop you a line nearly to keep up your drooping Spirits. I expect they are quit languid about these times as you are in the midst of the coons. How are you getting along in your campaign? I should like to hear from you, and know your prospects throughout the state more particularly the Eastern division. I can assure you that you are loosing nothing in old Bedford but you must get an increase vote here. From the best calculation that I can make you will get some votes which you did not get in 41. Dean will beat old Barrenger. I believe that is admitted but the Whigs will use every coercion that lies in their power either fair or foul. They are trying to swap votes. They propose to the Democrats if they will vote for Barrenger they will vote for Long and go so far as to say they will not vote for Long unless they will vote for Barrenger, but I hope & trust that the Democrats are wide awake on that score. I think our men are getting more firm than to be guiled in that way. I think Warner & Black both will be elected. My prayer is for you & Dean in preference to all others. I cannot say how the thing will be between Long & Jones. I had a line from Watterson by last mail. He is at Winchester Springs. He appears to be in fine Spirits about Long. His opinion is that Long is gaining in Franklin County very fast. I presume that will be a close run. He did not say anything relative to your vote in Franklin. I hope it will be an increased one there and everywhere else. If you have it in your power drop me a line and give me the news. We are more active about your Election than we ever were before but you know we were always glad at your success since 1825.

If any thing very particular takes place I will drop you a line at Woodbury. I am afraid to write to many places for fear my letter might fall into the hands of our enemy.

Long ran against fellow Democrat, George W. Jones of Lincoln County; the Whig Party did not run a candidate in the congressional race.

FROM AUSTIN MILLER

My Dear Sir

Bolivar July 18 1843

Your favor of the 9th\(^1\) has been received. I am much pleased to learn that yr prospects are so flattering in E. Tennessee.

Things are working better here than we expected last spring. We see and hear of changes every day. Mr. Stanton is an able and efficient debater. He sustains the issues wherever he goes. Messrs. Turley and Williamson\(^2\) are also doing there part well. Upon the subjects of the Bank & Tariff the Whig candidates take the Whig Banner\(^3\) for their text Book. That paper has been of infinite advantage to us in this canvass; it has been the means of bringing out the Whig candidates in favour of a protective tariff. It has also Shewn to the people that the Whigs are in favour of protection and that to stick to that party they must submit to protection. We have recent inteligence from every county in this congressional
They are all favourable and report gains. Mr. Stan[ton]'s majority will be about four hundred. He is much Ashe's superior as a public debater and is gaining on him wherever they go. We set down the election of Williamson, Turley, Fisher, Glen, and myself as certain. Banks of Shelby will be elected if Alexander does not get some of the democrats to support him. He advocates so many of the democratic doctrines, and is not altogether a strong Whig together with his personal popularity, may enable him to save his election. There is no doubt, of Shelby County giving a democratic majority. Judge Dunlap received a letter last night from Mr. P. G. Gain's in which he says that the whole Democratic ticket will succeed in that county. There were some fifty odd Irish and Dutch naturalized at the June term of the Circuit Court of Shelby, all Democrats but three. The judges of the election at Memphis, are two Whigs and one democrat. I am told that the Whig judges will decide that the votes of these persons cannot be received because they have not been naturalized six months previous to the election.

From the best information from Haywood, Taylors' majority will be about fifty—and the democrats will carry the whole ticket by thirty or thirty-five votes. Col Meeks' chance to beat Mr. Trice in McNairy is considered good. Both Whigs and democrats consider the election in that county doubtful. Your gain in McNary and Madison Counties will be more than in any of the adjoining Counties to this—but the news from the middle Counties are flattering but the information is not such as to be relied on with the same certainty as from the adjoining counties. I shall speak & tomorrow and at Slabtown on Saturday. Messrs Stanton & Ashe will also speak at Burlen tomorrow and in La Grange on Saturday. We will be completely organized before the election and every thing in our power will be done. Never have I seen the democrats in better spirits. We have fewer absent; all appear determined to remain at home until after the election. I know of several who have business of importance abroad but are determined to remain to vote before they leave. On the other hand the Whigs are leaving daily. And some who have been leaders in their neighbourhood declare they will not go to the polls. From every thing we can learn and it is the opinion of every democrat I have heard speak upon the subject, that your gain over the vote of 1841, will be greater than it was over the vote of 1840. It certainly is so in this part of the State—and should you do as well in the balance of the State you will receive ten thousand votes more than at the last election.

FROM A. W. GOODRICH

Dear Col.

Holly Springs, July 20th 1843

In the political excitement of the times generally, you will not be surprised to hear, that in this state the interest manifested in regard to the Tennessee election for Governor is almost equal to that felt by your own Citizens.

Under this state of feeling much bantering & triumphant boasting by the Whigs are to be met with at every corner & in every part of the Town among that party. For the purpose of cooling them down, your friends desire to know your opinion candidly as to the result of the election, & when that is ascertained, let me assure you, a good account will be taken of their vain boasting & swaggering impudence.

Please let me hear from you immediately on the receipt of this, as delay would be dangerous to our purpose.²

FROM ROBERT B. REYNOLDS

Dear Governor

Knoxville July 20th 1843

I returned home on yesterday from Morgan County. Your speech made some impression upon the Whigs in that county, and I was informed that you would gain at least 20 votes upon Jones in that Co. Brown & Ross were there & made speeches & the vote will be close between them. Brown cannot electioneer well & if he is elected, it will be owing to the exertions of the Democrats.

Brown & Hembree both agree that you have gained considerably in Roane. I think Hembree will be elected. Brown's election is doubtful owing entirely to his want of tact. I saw the leading Democrats of Anderson & Morgan & they promise to go to work & beat Ross.

During the circuit court at Clinton, I managed to get Sharp off, & Scarborough & Cooper⁴ are the Democratic candidates in Campbell & Anderson—result extremely doubtful. You have gained handsomely in Anderson, if our friends are not deceived. I learn from Cocke that you will certainly get 150 votes & perhaps 200. In Jefferson you will have a decided gain from the best information I can get. Anderson will be elected in McMinn & Blackwell's election is quite certain.

The news from Grainger continues good and our friends calculate upon a gain of at least 100 votes.

Gen Frazier & Hugh Graham² both write that we will have from 4 to 500 majty in Claiborne.

In this county³ I set down our gain as 100 votes of the election of 1841, but our friends say 200. I think we may possibly give you 500 votes, but not more—though we are making great inroads upon the Whigs.

Crozier stands a good chance for success & is fighting the battle with energy. He has been utterly unable to get any certificates to sustain him in the issue drawn between himself & Jones.⁴ Even those who heard Jim Williams say that Jones used the language attributed to him by Crozier have refused to give a statement. The statement of Jones should have been denied here in person, but it effects nothing against us here—that it would operate against Jones if properly made out, I have not a doubt. Crozier says he will yet fasten it upon him if possible. I shall urge Crozier to expose the Governor & brand him with falsehood as soon as the materials can be had.

To sum up our prospects in East Tenn. I set down Jones's majty at 1000. That we shall have two members to Congress and the Whigs one—that we shall have four senators certain, the Whigs 3, and one doubtful—and that we shall have 12 representatives to 7 Whigs and 3 doubtful. Grainger, Anderson & Campbell, & Hamilton & Marion are doubtful districts. Gillespy & Hammill are both still on the track and I believe they will continue to run it out—either of whom could [be]\(^5\) elected.

Reneau is no longer in the field; hence Senter will be elected. Wallace will gain some on Senter, yet he cannot overcome the odds against him.

We Shall make every effort to improve our prospects in this division of the state that can be made. Judge Green\(^6\) is full of political talk & harrangues the lawyers in repeated conversations upon the tariff & other federal measures. I suppose that they may go home & retail them out again. He ought to [be]\(^7\) remembered when the time comes &c.

I wish to hear from the result of the election in Middle Tennessee as soon as possible & will be obliged to you for early news from the counties adjoining Davidson.

FROM JAMES FULTON\(^1\)

Dear Sir. Fayetteville, 22nd July 1843

Your letter dated, Jacksboro, 6th inst.\(^2\) postmarked 10th was received the 17th inst. when it was too late to address you at McMinnville.

Long has not been here since the 1st Monday in June, I know nothing of his movements. Geo. W. Jones set out for Bedford & Franklin about ten days ago, expected to be here today, but has not yet returned. I have delayed writing you, until 10 o'clock Saturday night, hoping I might see Jones, and induce him to meet the Gov.\(^3\) at Lewisburg. He will certainly be here in a day or two. Gov. Jones will effect nothing by a speech at Lewisburg on the day of election. The time will have arrived for voting, and the people, at 9 o'clock, will rush to the polls. I have written to some friends in Marshall, and insisted that our friends should attend the polls in their respective districts, and deposite their votes in the ballot box as soon as possible. The contest between Jones & Long will in no way effect your election. Jones\(^4\) will receive a majority of more than two thousand votes.

Your friends here are active and vigilant. The Democracy of this county\(^5\) has been aroused to the utmost, and every Democrat will attend the polls. I think your majority in this county will be 1,650 votes; it cannot be less than 1,600, which will be a gain over your vote of 1839. Your majority then was 1,843. In 1841 it was 1,776. The Lincoln portion of Marshall votes 500, to 550 votes, where your majority was fully 300 votes. A majority of 1,550 votes in Lincoln as it now is, is equal to a majority of 1,843 as it was.

You are at head quarters,\(^6\) and can, by this time, guess the result with some degree of certainty. Upon receipt of this, write me three lines, & say, what are your prospects. Without giving publicity to your letter, it may do you some service. It will inspire a few friends with renewed confidence, and renew their arms for the coming contest. You must not omit to do this immediately. I write in much haste.

Dear Sir

I am glad to learn that your labors are so near an end, that your health is good and your prospects of success so flattering.

I think our majority in my district\(^1\) will not be far from 1000. The Whigs stick together better than I had expected. I fear W. B. Johnson will be beaten. Cheatham has gotten up a fever in Robertson that will probably unite the Whigs. It will be a close contest in this county\(^2\)—and I fear the result—the chances I think for Dortch. Willy\(^3\) will beat Marable.
Eubanks now has substantially no opposition. Cherry is safe by as large a majority as ever. Frazier will be elected—none but himself & Edwards running. I am glad to tell you that DeWitt has declined & Gardner safe. Vhories is beyond doubt. I have just finished a tour around my district & my health much improved. If I am in any danger I have been unable to find it out. Scarcely excitement enough in any county out of Robertson to bring out the voters. I shall spend the balance of my time in Robertson & Montgomery.

I wrote you to Sparta giving you the signs of the times. Since then things have been moving with us finely. The Democracy of this County are united & determined. Our Bank Democrat Bell has declined & is no longer a candidate. I am of the opinion we will increase your majority in this County from 1 to 200 votes. I feel well assured that in E Tenn. from every indication that we will cut down the Whig majority to 500 or at farthest to 1000. So that If you can retain your vote in the middle of the state or increase it a little all things will be well. Johnson will beat Aiken I think from a 1000 to 1500. Tell your friends that East Tennessee will do her duty and that we are all Organised and egar for the Contest. My dear Husband Columbia July 23rd 1843

I have not any thing of particular interest to write about since I wrote you last. The Democrats appear in good spirits and say that every thing is going on right. As far as I can learn the Matlock affair\(^1\) has made no impression one way or the other. Jones appointment here for Wednesday has not been withdrawn by the Whigs and they say he will be here. Nicholson told me to day that I might write you he would be here whenever he\(^2\) did speak and reply and that Brown would be here also. Your friends I believe generally think that you ought to come as they\(^3\) boast so much that you tried to keep him from coming to Maury and now afraid to meet him here. All this is stuff, and my advice is to act according to your own judgement. Yet I would like to know when you are coming home.

S. P. Walker will go to Nashville to meet you and can tell you more than I can write. All the object he has in going is to confer with you more fully than he could write. I will put in my letter a slip from the "Review"\(^4\) on the subject of the Jones appointments and the Observer\(^5\) had one of course simular to this—So that you can see what the papers say. I send you five shirts, socks, drawers and a white vest, which you can send back after wearing it at Nashville. There was no necessity for Elias to go, but I was afraid Samuel might loose your clothes—and the servant was so anxious to go—that I consented.

1. On July 20, 1843, Gideon C. Matlock of Carthage shot Jesse J. Bryan of Clarksville in a confrontation at the Nashville Inn. Matlock fled to Maury County, where he surrendered himself to local authorities. Robert Armstrong wrote Polk on July 22, 1843, that Bryan deliberately provoked the fight with Matlock for political purposes. ALS. DLC–JKP. Returned to Nashville, Matlock was arraigned in court on July 24 for examination and released on bail. Matlock had

TO ROBERT ARMSTRONG

My Dear Sir: Columbia Augt. 7th 1843

I have received no further returns, since your letter of friday night¹ except from Perry & Henderson. A traveller reports the vote in these Counties to be:

</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Perry for Jones</th>
<th>726</th>
</tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Polk</td>
<td>450</td>

These returns show a gain over 1841 of 124 votes in these Counties. This indicates the anticipated gain in the District. Still after the most unexpected giving-way in the middle Counties heard from, I have now no doubt but I have lost my election, and I fear the Legislative elections have gone the same way.

However discouraging this may be, it is no time to indulge in a desponding feeling. We have a great and a united party in the State, and though beaten I think it probable that my vote is larger than it has ever been. There must be an immediate and a bold rally of our friends through the Union.² Let them be urged to keep their armour on, and to fight on for principle. For myself so far from surrendering—my sword is still unsheathed & I am still ready to do battle for our principles. I shall write to Hogan if I have time before the mail leaves this morning. Shew him this letter and let a strong rallying article appear in tomorrow's Union. In haste.

TO MARTIN VAN BUREN

My Dear Sir: Columbia Tennessee Augt. 18th 1843

You have seen the result of our late election. It was as unexpected as it was unfortunate. Though temporarily defeated the Democracy of the State are neither conquered nor subdued, but are ready and willing to renew the contest as they will do in the Presidential canvass of 1844. Having laboriously canvassed the State for near five months, and made more than ninety speeches to popular assemblies of the people I think I can form a just opinion of the causes of the result. We were unfortunately greatly embarrassed and weakened by local causes, and questions of State policy. Upon these our opponents mainly relied, and by constantly urging them, they partially succeeded in drawing off the public mind, from the questions of federal policy as the exclusive tests. In addition to this, great frauds were undoubtedly practiced. The vote polled was larger than was ever before given, not excepting the vote of 1840. My vote was upwards of 54,000—a number greater than Gov. Jones received when he was elected in 1841, or than I received when I was elected in 1839. Upon the naked questions of Federal policy, I have not a doubt. The Democracy are now in a clear and decided majority in the State, and this is the prevailing opinion with our best informed friends.

Measures are being taken for the call of a Democratic State convention, to assemble at Nashville early in October, for the purpose of adopting a more efficient organization than we have heretofore had, and for the purpose of appointing delegates to the Democratic National convention at Baltimore. The late indications are, that May 1844, is preferred to Nov. 1843, as the period of meeting of the National convention. The latter was the period proposed by Tennessee. Our convention will however, I have no doubt, yield that point as to the time for the sake of harmony in the party.

You must not give up Tennessee as lost to the Democracy. I have great confidence that when unembarrassed by the local & state causes which weakened us in the late election, she will yet do her duty, and fully redeem herself in 1844.

I was at Nashville two days ago, saw Majr Donaldson² from whom I learned that Genl Jackson was in his usual health.

Dear Sir:  Columbia Sept. 14th 1843

As executors of S. W. Polk deceased, William & myself have a small suit depending in the Circuit Court of Haywood County, against Wiley R. Powell for the hire of blacksmith Harry for the year 1837. Notice has been given to take the deposition of Majr Powers (who lives at or near Walker's plantation in Hardeman) at your counting room on the 22d instant. It may be that Majr Powers the witness has no notice of it. Will you do me the favour to have him notified to attend & give his deposition on that day. Request Edwin Polk to attend to the taking of it, & have it forwarded to the Clerk of the Haywood Circuit Court. Genl Loving who is the lawyer will forward a commission to take the deposition.

I have gone to my profession in earnest & think I will now make some money. You must not conclude however that I have ceased to take my accustomed interest in politics. FROM GEORGE W. RICE

My dear Sir,

Battle Creek Sept 22, 1843

I have received Several letters within a few days from our democratic friends of this congressional district1 on the subject of having a meeting in this county2 to appoint delegates to attend the state democratic convention at Nashville in November next, all suggesting the propriety of appointing the delegates without committing them to the support of any particular person for the Presidency. And fearing the movement may be injurious to you, and perhaps deceived that you are to be benefited by that course, is the object I now have in writing to you, to apprise you of the movement and to know whether such course would be advantageous to your future prospects. I am well apprised my dear Sir of the delicacy of this request but when I assure you your interests and prospects with me is far above that of any other individual in the United States must be the apology, for no man in our country of the present day has laboured and effected more for the cause of democratic principles than yourself, and it is due from the great body of the party, that your late defeat in Tennessee should receive a rebuke by conferring upon you an office in which citizens of other states (beside your own) has by your talents and exertions in the cause been benefited. And who I doubt not would be anxious to aid your friends in this state to accomplish. I see in the Knoxville Argus and Athens Courier3 that a preference is expressed favorable to the election of Gen Cass for the Presidency. Whether this is intended to stimulate the friends of Mr. Van Buren in your behalf or as stated by them to aid the democratic cause by effecting the nomination of Gen. Cass, and you to be benefited thereby I know not, but one thing I freely declare to you that such a course to effect the object in your behalf if known will readily be acted on in this county by your political friends. We will have a meeting tomorrow two weeks. Genl. Stone will be a candidate for Senator in Congress. Petitions of instructions is now circulating instructing Anderson and Rawlings4 but, my impressions, will be disregarded. I am told that perhaps Sherrill5 will vote for him or as the Genl informed me he had so declared provided a respectable request should be forwarded him. The Genl. bolted from supporting me on the ground of my refusing unconditionally to vote for him. Whether he had promises from Rawlings or not I am unable to say. If so capital could be made out of him. He is altogether for himself and as far as he can be benefited by a party so long he will remain with it but no longer. Write me and believe me as ever . . . .

FROM JULIUS W. BLACKWELL

Dear Sir, Athens Ten. Octr. 5th 1843

No doubt you have read the articles in the Knoxville Argus on the subject of a candidate for the Presidency, and probably, you have also read two articles of the same kidney in the Athens Courier. I have been mortified to see the dictatorial tone of both these papers, and I believe they have been governed, and probably written by Gen. Anderson and his brother P. B. Both of these Gentlemen are for Calhoun, as I have good reasons to believe, and are making a move for Cass, in order to get an opportunity to abuse Van Buren, whom they hate. The fact is, they go for self, and if suffered to take the lead in E. Tennessee, they will ruin the Democratic cause. We, in this section, believe that we will have a heavy weight to carry if Mr. Van is the nominee of the Convention, and for that reason, would rather Cass should be nominated, but how indiscreet it is, either in Editors or aspirants to abuse Van Buren, even if they are honestly of opinion that Cass is our strongest man. If Van Buren is nominated, I am for him, if he has not another friend in this state. P. B. Anderson wishes to have things all his own way, and declared that “we”—mark the word we—will run Cass in Tennessee any how. Now as to Pearce, as he was for White when he suffered himself to be made a tool of in 1836, so he may consistently go for any other man who will suffer himself to be made a tool of in 1844, by suffering his name to be used against the nominee of a Democratic Convention. It might resuscitate us in Tennessee, but weaken us in the Union. We profess—as a party—to be opposed to an election by the H. of Rep. and shall we now throw away our strength on a candidate who is put up by a faction—for selfish interests—to divide and conquer in some shape or form? If they cannot conquer the Whigs, they will endeavour to conquer the Democrats by a division, and by starting up of new schemes and party’s, in order to be the leaders themselves. These Andersons pretend to be your exclusive friends—or rather your warmest friends. I beseech you, my Dear Sir, to watch. I say watch.

You will see that the Whigs charge that it is by your orders that these Editors have moved for Cass and to abuse Van Buren. I think I know better. I can never believe—until I have it from your own lips or pen, that you encourage the abuse of Martin Van Buren. I feel fully assured that when the battle is fought that you and myself will be found on the same field, in the same cause. Without ever having heard a word from you, I am fully persuaded that if our sentiments were fully made known, you and myself would not differ, materially, upon the subject of the Presidency. It is contrary to good policy—or good sense—to abuse Van Buren for I believe his chance for the nomination is the best among the Democratic States. If Cass could get the nomination, I think it would be better for us in Tennessee. But when the chances are so uncertain, it is the height of foolishness to abuse Mr. Van Buren with whom we have fought and, politically, died.

It is with some delicacy that I approach the subject of your personal concerns. I say personal, but I mean political. All your friends—among whom I am proud to place myself—are extremely desirous that you should be the candidate for the Vice Presidency. Altho I am a weak and humble member of the Democratic party, I must, and always will, express my opinions on suitable occasions. It is my candid opinion that should Van Buren or Cass be nominated, you will be put on the ticket for Vice President. I believe that the Democrat who goes furthest to abuse Van Buren, will do most to defeat your nomination. If I am wrong, it is an honest error of the head. I write not, however, to give—but rather to receive advice from you. I am somewhat stubborn in my opinions when I think I am right; but if I am wrong, there is no man, I assure you, could put me right sooner than yourself. I have full confidence in you, and if you and myself should differ and I could not be convinced of error, I should begin to doubt my own capacity for receiving political truth.

The idea of forcing all the States to go into the election of Delegates to the Baltimore Convention, by the Congressional districts, is perfect stuff. I am in favour of elections by the districts if practicable, but wish every State to adopt its own play, if it is a fair one.

I would like to talk to you for about four hours, and would come as far as Nashville to do so, but, am too poor. I am here perfectly at leisure—nothing to do but await the meeting of Congress—and would like very much to spend a few days in Nashville. I have been extremely anxious to do so, but could not for the lack of means.

FROM ARCHIBALD YELL

Dear Govr.

Little Rock 5th Octr. 1843

When I wrote you last from my residence in Washington Co. I promised you a letter on my return to this place. I now take pleasure in doing it, tho I am bearly able to walk about my roome from a slight attack of the fever, which caught me imediately on my return to the Seat of Governmt.

We are without news here, which could interest you. Our local concerns are rather Muddy at present, but we shall in the course of a few months right up last Winter. Our Democratic Editor⁴ found himself in the clutches of the Banks which was managed by the Whigs and being himself a little easy of concience Sold us all out to the Whigs, Lock, stock & barrel. Since that time we have been without a Press until in the last few Weeks we have Started a thorough Democratic Paper the “Arkansas Banner.” ² The Whigs are making war upon it aided by a few Disaffected Bank Democrats and a Squad who have been disappointed in their calculations & are now considered a little fishy. The Banner however will in a short time drive them from their hiding places and make them throw off the garb of Democracy or ware it with more grace and good will. All such creatures are an incubas to any party & ultimately will join the enemy. We are now endeavoring for the first time to get up a State Convention⁵ to Nominate Candidates for Govr. & Congress: an Electoral Tickett, & to Send Delegates to the N. Convention; its a new thing and will require time and care to effect any good.

Heretofore I was Candid in expressing to you that I thought Col Johnson the favorite in this State for the Presidency. I now doubt it and if we should have a full and fare Convention, I shall not be suprised if there was to be [a] majority for Mr Van Buren for President, and yourself for Vice Presidnt. I am very sure you are the strongest man in this State that could be Selected and from that fact, I am inclined to believe that your friends know to whom you should be Connected—and besides Mr Van Buren has now and always has had numerous friends.

I am sure they Can not get up a Delegation who would prefer any one over you for the Vice Presidency. And if things are carried on in the old way, until the meeting of the Convention I shall not be surprised if Van Buren should receive the Nomination on the first Ballot. Should he fail in that a Combination may be formed by the Union of all the other aspirants to defeat his Nomination. And tho I am a strong states right man and an admirer of Mr. Calhoun I frankly confess that I greatly fear he is to give our Party much trouble & if he does not fly off, its a less matter? As things now stand I give Mr Van Buren Alabama, Tennessee, Mo, Ohio, probably Missi & Ark, Virginia, N Jersey, N York Connecticut, Vermont, N Hampshire, Maine & Massachusetts, which will give him enough on the first ballot to decide his fate in Convention. Besides he has a chance for Louisina, Delaware, Maryland, and little Rhoda. And I presume Mr. Buchanan out of the way Pennsyla would go for him. But Sir, I have not of late kept up with the run of intreague and I may be miscalcu­lating. My greatest fears are after the Convention. If that Can be but Harmonious we shall give the Whigs what they give us in 1840—a Waterloo defeat.

My own business as well as policy requires me to retire for a Season. I leave my position with more Strength than when I took office so I am not driven from Pub life. Many others of our household are ambitious and restless and they will be gratified without weak[en]ing the Cause. Rotation in office is indispensable to pursue Harmoney and Strength.

Whether I shall ever enter public life again is perhaps depending upon the result of the Die in the politics of the State—in one or two more elections? We have lost our old & tried friend Wm Gilchrist. He was an honest & worthy man! Your old friend Wm. H Field from Pulaski is here. He has as yet done but little. I have just appo[in]ted him to hold some special Courts.

I have just appt. Wm. K. Sabastion Judge Supm. Court. He too is an old Tennessean. Hickman Co. They Say here (the Whigs) that I hunt up all the old broken down Ten. hacks & put them in office &c &c.
October 8 1843

I am pleased to learn that Genl Macklin is about to Settle here. I have not formed his acquaintance. He made a fine impression here & will no doubt do well. I shall endeavor to make him a friend. Present me to Mrs. Polk & believe me as ever . . . .

TO EDMUND BURKE

My Dear Sir Columbia Tennessee October 8th 1843

The Democracy of this State, though defeated at the August election, are neither conquered nor dismayed. Unembarrassed by local causes and State questions (which contributed greatly to weaken us in that election) and upon the naked issues of Federal policy as the exclusive tests, we have no doubt we were then and are now in a decided majority in the State. We will hold a Democratic State Convention in November,1 with a view to adopt the necessary measures, preparatory to the great contest of 1844, a contest into which our Democracy will enter with confidence of success.
The Democratic majority in the House of Representatives of the next Congress will be overwhelming, and it is deeply to be regretted that the result of the late election in Tennessee will prevent us from commanding a majority in the Senate also. The next Speaker of the House will of course be a Democrat. I know not who may be the aspirants to that Station, but am sure than none can present stronger claims upon his party than our friend Cave Johnson of this State. In the darkest hour of our trial in the State he was firm and unwavering. When White & Bell produced our present unfortunate divisions he was of the few who were faithful among the faithless. He has made many sacrifices in our cause. In the last canvass he was sincerely desirous to decline a re-election to Congress and had announced his determination to do so, but yielded to the wishes of his friends only because, it was believed that he was the only man in his District who could save it from the enemy. Though we are confident of success in 1844, it is not to be disguised that the contest will be a severe one, and his election to the Speakership would add greatly to our strength. I have thought it not improper to make the suggestion to you. I beg you to believe that I do so solely with the view to advance our cause & not with the slightest desire to interfere with the selection of any other who may have been thought of, if it be deemed best for the party. Mr Johnson is an exceedingly modest man and would not himself make known to his most intimate friend, any desire he might have upon the subject. I shall be pleased to hear from you when your leisure may permit.

Esteemed Sir.

Philadelphia October 12th 1843

Your favour of the 4th Inst is received. I regret to say that it is not in my power to effect a loan here on the terms you propose. I have now on my table an authority to borrow $10,000 for an acquaintance at Nashville to be secured by mortgage on first rate real estate, and personal security besides, at 7% per annum principal and interest payable here and another for $12,000 for which 8% per annum is offered & most undoubted security. The security you offer, I esteem perfectly undoubted and would recommend the loan with much pleasure. The difficulty is that neither our Banks or Capitalists will make such investments on any security or at any rate of interest. Several gentlemen from Tennessee are now in the city endeavouring to effect such loans, but without success. My attention has been repeatedly called to this subject and I have made every enquiry that my limited acquaintance would enable me. Money is very abundant here and rates of interest low from to 4% to 5 pr. annum, but it belongs chiefly to that class of persons who expect to engage in active business and are not willing to make any permanent investments. The rates on long mortgages in the city are about the same as in 1836 or 1840. It will afford me much pleasure to be able to serve you.

With the highest sentiments of respect.

Mecklenburg T. Oct. 12, 1843

My Dear Sir

Yours of the 9th inst\(^1\) from Nashville is this moment received. I hasten to reply to it & also to add a word or two on other branches of the same subject.

I concur fully with those of our political friends who advise that Tennessee should remain as she now is—uncommitted by newspapers or other ways upon the Pres. question—and in the policy also of avowing our purpose to support the nominee at Baltimore & of abstaining from any abuse of either of the Dem. Candidates (with this exception however, if a V.B. or Calhoun editor does the least injustice to the pretensions of Tennessee we must retain the priviledge of rapping him across the knuckles). I also concur in the policy of the State Convention expressing no preference direct or indirect for either of the Pres. Candidates but directly & pointedly for the V.P.; nor should it give instructions to the Tenn. Delegates whom to support for P., but leave them responsible to their constituents—untrammelled & at liberty to do what they will find next May to be necessary & best. Now here comes the point—the mode of choosing delegates. The District system is the most democratic—it brings the Con. nearer to the people & is most \[...]\(^2\) to all the candidates. [What] you have suggested comes very near [it] & if the people at the time of appointing their delegates to the State Convention understand that the members of their District will have the appointing of its delegate to Baltimore & select accordingly the District system is in fact acted upon & few I apprehend will object to it—especially if it is understood that the State Convention has no negative & \[...]\(^3\) responsible to their own district we cant have any objections to it. It is virtually the District system. Could some one lay down this as a part of its organism in the Columbia Democrat, it would have an essential bearing in your favor out of Tennessee.

I suppose you see the S.C. papers that mention you as favorably & the Pa. (Cass) Journal\(^4\) that almost comes out for you \[...\]. Your letters will reach me always here. I will not be at Nashville I presume & will be steadily at home. Please always present my best regards to your excel­

TO H. A. COLE, DAVID HOWELL, ET AL.¹

Gentlemen: Columbia Oct 16th 1843

I had the honour to receive some weeks ago your communication of the 9th ultimo,² inviting me to be present at a Democratic Convention of young men to be holden at Clarksville on the 9th of November next. I have delayed an answer until the present time, in the hope that it might be in my power to attend on the occasion, but have to regret that indispensable engagements which must occupy my attention will prevent it.

I am much gratified that the Democratic young men of Montgomry³ have resolved to assemble themselves together in convention.

They are the first to “put this ball in motion” in the State, and I hope their example will be imitated in other Counties. Democratic associations and meetings of the young men of the several Counties would be powerful auxiliaries, in disseminating truth and sound political doctrine. My observation from an intimate acquaintance with the political opinions of the people of the State warrants the remark that whilst a large and decided majority of the old men—the men with gray heads—are Democratic in their principles, it is to be regretted that an undue proportion of the young men and especially of those residing in our towns and villages, are found in the ranks of the opponents of these principles. Though not less patriotic than their seniors, the cause of this may doubtless in many insantsis⁴ be found in their associations and habits of life and the want of that careful examination of public subjects wich their importance demands. The Democratic convention of young men, which you propose to hold especially if it shall be followed by the organization of Democratic associations of the young men of each County will awaken a spirit of inquiry after political truth and will give an energy and force to the Democratic cause in the State, which it has never before possessed.
Public questions will be more carefully examined and instead of being hurried along with the current of opinion around them, as is but too often the case in our towns, we will very soon see the body of our young men enlisted with their fathers under the same banner & maintaining the same principles. Those associations should not be confined to the County towns, but should embrace the young men of each County.

Though the Democratic Party in this state were defeated at the August election, we have nothing to discourage us, but on the contrary every thing to animate us, to renew the contest with increased zeal and energy. It is well known that many local causes and state questions wholly unconnected with the issues of Federal policy contributed very largly to produce that result. Those have passed off with the occasion which gave rise to them, and cannot again be made to operate to the prejudice of the Democratic cause.

Let our young men throughout the State organize their whole strength as you propose to do. Let every Democrat keep his armor on, and our success in the next trial must be as certain as that “truth is mighty and will prevail.”

Regretting that I cannot be present to witness your proceedings on the 9th of November, I beg you to assure the Democratic young men of Montgomery, whom you represent, that they have my hearty good wishes in this noble exertion, to reclaim this Republic state from her present unnatural and false political position and to place her where she has always until recently been in the Republican ranks. So far as any humble exertions of mine may contribute to that result I will be found to be a faithful soldier at my post, doing service for the advancement of the great Democratic cause—a cause which it has been not only my duty—but my pride and my pleasure to sustain in past life.

With a tender of my acknowledgments for the honor done me by your invitation . . . .

Dear Brother

I received your letter1 several days ago, but have deferred answering it up to this time in the hope that some indication of the Whig purpose relative to senators would be discovered. They are still in great trouble, held meetings nearly every night during the past week without settling the conflicting claims of the various aspirants from the Middle, East and West. They make a last effort to night, tomorrow being the day fixed on in the Resolution to elect.2 What will be the result is very doubtful, as evident dissatisfaction prevails. I will write you again by the next mail. I have seen Armstrong, Humphreys, Laughlin, Gardner & Powell and the Corresponding Committee3 will organize tomorrow night and go vigorously to work. Maj Donelson was in the City to day and promised Armstrong and me to commence operations immediately,4 and from the feeling and interest he manifested I must believe he will do his duty. W. P. Martin5 I think stands at this time a very fair chance to defeat Dillahunty.6 My best impression is that he will beat him easily. My Dear Sir

Carlisle Ind Oct 17 1843

Your esteemed favor of the 8th inst reached me to day and I was truly glad to hear that our prospects in your state are so flattering for 1844. I had almost dispaired of seeing Tennessee brought back to her high place in the democratic ranks, after being defeated with you for a champion, but I have no doubt you are correct in saying that upon questions strictly of a national character, she will be right side up. The star of democracy seems to be in the ascendent almost every where. I have just heard from Hamilton County, Ohio & Dunkin is elected by a large majority. The late elections in our state were conducted throughout strictly upon question of national policy. The line between federalism and democracy was closely drawn, no extrinsic or local question was agitated; hence we conclude the politics of Indiana are now well settled.

We have a democratic jubalee to come of in this county on the 19th inst. I heartily wish you could have been with us.

In relation to our friend Cave Johnsons claim to the Speakership I can assure you there is no one returned to Congress that I would rather see elevated to that place than Mr. J. Dear Brother

Nashville Oct 17th 1843

The Convention has just adjourned after electing Foster & Jarnegan. By this election they have created much dissatisfaction which must ultimately work great advantage to our cause. I write merely to give the result of the election. The Democrats made no nomination, but scattered their votes on various prominent men of their party throughout the State. This I thought best, for the reason, that it would not do to place your name before the Convention, and thereby create the impression abroad, of a second defeat, nor would it do, in my opinion, to confer that distinction on any other, seeming to express a preference over you. This course I had adopted by the party, thinking it best.

I received your letter last evening & attended without delay to the contents.² I will write you again by the next mail. Belinda, tell Mother, is not so well to day.³

TO ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON

My Dear Sir: Columbia Oct. 19th 1843

The result of the elections in Maryland and Georgia, the close vote and possible defeat in Ohio, are enough to rouse the Democracy, if not to a sense of their danger, to the fact now rendered certain that we are to have a hard contest in 1844. I am now anxious to hear from Pennsylvania. I have my fears that the recent defection of Gov. Porter,¹ may have produced some effect in that state. The indications are becoming stronger every day, that the Southern wing of our party are to give us trouble. It is most unfortunate that the period of meeting of the National Convention has been postponed so late as May. Should Mr Calhoun and his friends, refuse to abide by its decision, as I fear they may, the time will be so short, that it will require great energy and extraordinary exertions to rally the great body of the party on the nominee so as to avoid defeat. In this state of things what is the proper course to be pursued? In my judgment there is but one that is safe, and that is to denounce any such factious movement in advance, and for the Democracy at the North and East, to take open and decided ground at once in expressing their preference not only for the Presidency but for the Vice Presidency also. In regard to the former there will be but little division of opinion, & if there be faith in men, the public opinion in that section of the Union is settled in regard to the latter also. Why then the studied reserve and silence of the Democratic press in that section of the Union in regard to it? The question must be settled in May at furthest, and an expression of opinion now, would be much less likely to do mischief, than if delayed until that time. It is the same indecisive and cautious course, which I have always believed greatly weakened the party in 1839-40, and contributed largely to the defeat which followed. Had the convention at that time nominated anyone who was not positively objectionable, I have never doubted but that Mr Van-Buren would have carried the vote of Pennsylvania, Maine & perhaps states enough to have elected him; at all events his vote would have been much increased. The same error is now I fear from over-caution, and the apprehension of giving offence to some about to be committed. It may now I think be regarded as settled that Mr Van-Buren will be the nominee for the Presidency. Buchanan as Mr Horn writes me may get the vote of Pennsylvania as a matter of compliment on the first ballot. After that, it will be given to Mr Van-Buren. Cass has no embodied strength any-where, though he has scattering friends everywhere. Mr Calhoun's strength is confined to less than half a dozen small states South of Virginia. Col. Johnson may get the vote of Kentucky & possibly of Arkansas in Convention. If then Mr Van-Buren is the nominee, the candidate for the Vice Presidency must come from the West, and from a slave-holding state, and especially as Mr Clay resides in a Western slave-holding state; and my own opinion is, that Col. Johnson will ultimately yield his pretensions for the Presidency, and that he will be the only formidable competitor for the Vice Presidency. I am not conscious of any selfishness, and certainly of no unkind feeling towards Col. Johnson, when I say that if the party are mad enough again to force him upon us, it is my deliberate opinion that we must be again defeated.

Since I say you² I have received another letter from Gov. Yell of Arkansas, under date of 5 Oct. '43 in which among other things he says: "Heretofore I was candid in expressing that I thought Col. Johnson the favourite in this state for the Presidency. I now doubt it, and if we should have a full and fair Convention (state convention) I shall not be surprized if there was to be a majority for Mr Van-Buren & yourself for Vice President. I am very sure you are the strongest man in this state that could be selected and from that fact I am inclined to believe that your friends know to whom you should be connected, and besides Mr Van-Buren has now and always had numerous friends. I am sure they cannot get up a delegation who would prefer any one over you for the Vice-Presidency."
October 19 1843

Have you written the letters of which we spoke when I last saw you? It is important I think that they should be written without delay. Our friends at the North and East, should understand the true state of things in this part of the Union, and take bolder ground before the public in reference to the Vice Presidency. By doing so they would concentrate public opinion, in reference to both stations before the meeting of the Convention, and thereby avoid much confusion and trouble. I do not understand Blair’s course. I wrote Genl. Armstrong a letter on yesterday\(^3\) in reference to it, which he will shew you. I do not think he is inclined to do me justice. Why I know not, unless it be that he has strong attachments for Col. Johnson, & looks to his restoration with Mr Van-Buren. But Genl. Armstrong will shew you my letter in which you will see the impressions I have and the suggestions I make. I have only one other remark to make to you, and that is that no one is now prominently presented for the Vice-Presidency, & that it is the opinion of Gov Yell, T. P. Moore, and others of my friends that the ground should be pre-occupied, before Col J. concludes to fall back upon it, as I think he will ultimately attempt to do. I will leave for my plantation in Mississippi on monday next & concluded to write you frankly & without reserve, what my views & impressions were. You will of course regard what I have said as strictly confidential. A letter addressed to me at Somerville Tennessee, any time within ten day or two weeks, will meet me on my way up.

JAMES K. POLK

P.S. I will be back before the meeting of the State Convention, and will be governed by the advice of my friends whether I will be at Nashville at that time or not. I must insist upon you to see Laughlin & Humphreys and have a proper address prepared before the convention meets. J.K.P.

1. With his eyes on the vice-presidency, David R. Porter, governor of Pennsylvania, had used his influence and patronage to promote the political fortunes of President John Tyler. Porter’s efforts in 1843 secured the nomination of his brother, James M. Porter, to be secretary of war; but the governor’s advocacy of Tyler evoked strong opposition among regular Pennsylvania Democrats. In January 1844 the U.S. Senate rejected Tyler’s nomination of James Porter.

Nashville, Oct. 20, 1843

I have only time to inform you this evening, that in a consultation of Mr. Humphreys, Gen. Armstrong, W. H. Polk and myself, just concluded, it is agreed to meet at Judge A Miller's room in private—consulting Powell, Kinney, Gardner &c.—on Monday night to agree on Delegates to National Convention for the State and several Congressional Districts, and to parcel out the work of preparing the Resolutions and Address for our State Convention. The last is likely to fall on Mr. Humphreys and myself.

Who shall be Delegates? Coe & John Blair surely for state at large. A. Donelson if possible for this Congressional District, Gen. Pillow for yours, Dortch for C. Johnsons, &c. with the members for alternates where represented by a democrat. Please before you leave, send me suggestions for others. I wish we could get Austin Miller to consent to serve for his District. He is able to bear it.

I enclose you a letter just received by me from Hon T. P. Moore. You will see his position. I think it is clear that he will go to the Convention with an earnest wish to get rid of Johnson. Please enclose it back to me before you leave, as I wish to answer it.

I have received your last letter. Moses Dawson whom you mention as a proper person for Gen. Jackson and Donelson to write to in Ohio, is the most proper of all persons to be addressed. Donelson has promised A. V. Brown to write letters to several persons. I think to Mr. Wright among others—as I presume he will inform you on his way home from Nashville. I hope Donelson has and will write.

I have written all the letters we talked of, and several others. I think on Monday night we will appoint a Committee of correspondence.

If I had time, and could spare means, I would willingly go to Tuscaloosa where the Alabama Legislature will be in session after we adjourn here, and to any point where personally or by writing I could cause our policy and position to be understood. If I had a fortune that would afford it, I would see, under proper credentials of introduction, the proper men at Tuscaloosa, Raleigh, Richmond, Albany &c. while the legislatures of Alabama, N. Carolina, Virginia and New York are in session during the approaching winter and spring, before the meeting of the National Convention. On political accounts, I never wished more for time, and power, and means than I now do in anticipation of next year's campaign which I intend and wish to be my last; but I only have the will while others blessed with time and means, lack the inclination. Although tied up in my sphere of action, I will be busy—busy to the end.

W. H. Polk desires me to say that he will write to you in a few days to Coffeeville.

Jonakin has gone home a Senator—and Ephe\(^9\) is running about, grinning and jumping like a pleased monkey—with just about the dignity of one at least.

Let me hear from you before you leave—sure.

My Dear Sir: Columbia Oct. 20th 1843

I expect to leave home for my plantation\(^1\) on monday morning next, the 23rd, & hope to hear from you by tomorrow’s mail—what has been done & is doing in reference to the matter about which we have corresponded.\(^2\) If you do not receive this letter in time to write by Saturday’s mail, write me to Bolivar where I will get your letter on my way down. Letters addressed to me at Somerville, within the next ten days or two weeks I will receive on my way up. If I have good health, I will get home before the State Convention meets, but will be fatigued and you must not rely on me to prepare the address. Hoping to hear from you on tomorrow.

Dear Brother

Nashville Oct 22d 1843

I received your letter last evening,¹ and had intended in my last letter² to request you to rent my old office, for any price, until the 1st of January. If you have not time before leaving for Mississippi to attend to renting it, please authorize some one [to] rent it immediately.

The Committee,³ which you recommended should be formed in your last letter,⁴ have had one meeting, and have commenced working with energy and spirit. Powell and Dr Kinney have written to East Tennessee and to Western Virginia urging immediate action. Letters have also been written to Roger Barton and Judge Howry of Miss.⁵ Humphreys promised to write to Barton and I presume he has done so. I will see him in the morning, and if he has not done so, I will urge him to write immediately. Cave Johnson left here this morning; whilst here, he had a full interview with your friends and has gone home to renew his labors to effect the desired purpose. Maj Donalson,⁶ Genl Armstrong informs me has written many letters to the North. I will go to see Donalson on Wednesday, & stick to him until he does write. You may rest assured that every thing that can be done, shall be done to carry out your views. Tell Mother [that] Belinda has been improving for the last two days.⁷ I will write you again to Somerville.

TO SARAH C. POLK

My Dear Wife: Bolivar Oct. 26th 1843

We reached here to night, having had more or less rain on us every day for the last three days. The roads are becoming very muddy & bad &
I am thinking of leaving the Buggy here and going down on horseback.
Sam P. Walker is not here, but left a message that he would meet me at La Grange on tomorrow. If he does so, I will get the notes & write from that place. My letter enclosing them will reach Columbia on wednesday next—which will be in time to send them to Nashville by thursday's mail.
If you receive no letter from me on wednesday, get Knox to send the notes, which I left, to Nashville on thursday.

I saw Lucius J. Polk, the day I left home. He will start to North Carolina on tuesday next. See Knox & ask him to raise for me if he can $50 and give it to Lucius to bear little Marshall's expenses out. Lucius says he will be hard run for money. Tell Knox I will raise the money some-how on my return & repay it to him. Mr James Armstrong will go with me directly to my place, & if he is pleased with it, I think it probable I will sell him half my land. Genl. Pillow goes from here to Memphis, & will be at my plantation on next Saturday or Sunday week unless he buys slaves. If I do not trade with Armstrong I think Pillow is strongly inclined to buy it.

Mr Armstrong requests that you will let Wm. Cooper know where he is &c, & request him to send word to his wife.

Armstrong seems to have special reasons for being very affectionate towards his young wife just now. You will of course say nothing about the probabilities of my selling him half my land. I think the slaves on that I will sell to him. If I do I will retain the other half & still continue the farm.
This I know will suit your views better than to sell the whole plantation.

My dear Sir,

Newport, N.H. Oct. 30th 1843

I had the honor of receiving your letter of the 8th inst. some days since, but my constant engagements in court, which was then in session in this place, have prevented me from replying more seasonably to it.

The intelligent members of our party in this section of the Union, were aware of the difficulties with which their brethren of Tennessee have had to contend, during the late canvass, and they were gratified with the result generally, although the victory was not complete. In the event of an election of the President by the House of Representatives, which from present appearances, is not impossible, Tennessee will be found acting with her democratic sisters.

With regard to the Speakership, I assure you, I have thought but little. I am yet pledged to no one, nor can I now say whose interests I shall favor when I arrive at Washington. I am, however, much obliged for the suggestions you have made in regard to our mutual friend, the Hon Cave Johnson. I know him well. I have been a member of the House with him during the 26th & 27th Congresses, and have seen him, and observed his conduct in the many difficult and trying emergencies in which the democratic portion of the House has been placed, and never has he failed to acquit himself with distinguished ability and with unwavering fidelity to his party. I know of no man more reliable than Mr Johnson in a critical emergency, and more faithful to the best interests of the country, at all times. Nor do I know any[one] whose elevation to the Speakership of the House would give me more pleasure than Mr Johnson's.

I shall go to Washington unpledged to any interest except the interest of the Democratic party of the Union; and if I shall be convinced after my arrival that the interest of our cause will be best consulted by the election of Mr Johnson to the Speakership, I shall give him my support with hearty good will. If his election would strengthen us in Tennessee, it would be a matter worthy of serious consideration, as that state must be one of the great battle grounds in the election of 1844.

Our prospects in this State are very encouraging. Gov. Hill, although hostile to the democratic cause, cannot now injure us. He has, by his factious and treasonable conduct, utterly deprived himself of influence with our party, and he has now no other recourse, but to surrender unconditionally, or go over to the Federal party. With great respect . . . . . .

3. In June 1841, Isaac Hill tried unsuccessfully to block the state convention's nomination of Henry Hubbard for governor. Hill and conservative Democrats then backed John H. White in the gubernatorial election. During the winter of 1842, the party divided over state economic policies; Levi Woodbury, Hubbard, and their radical Democratic newspapers accused Hill of having united with the Whigs in representing banking and manufacturing interests. Even Franklin Pierce retired from the U.S. Senate in 1842 to support the radical Democratic cause in the state. Hubbard won the 1843 gubernatorial election and thereby ended Hill's influence in New Hampshire's Democratic party.

FROM ARCHIBALD YELL

Dear Govr

Little Rock 31st Octr 1843

Your friendly favor of the 14th Inst. was received a few days since for which you will please accept my acknowledgements.

The recent elections in Georgia has settled the matter for Mr. Calhoun, and upon the whole I am glad of it. He has no doubt determined to set up for himself and to run at all hazards; therefore I pray God he may be defeated even at the risk of having Clay tacked upon us for four years. The Ohio & Pennsylvania elections will teach us that success alone depends upon "Union harmony & Concession" but without Mr Van Buren [we] should loose N. York. He will Certainly receive the Nomination. In that event I look upon it as almost Certain that you will receive the Nomination for Vice President. Without our party should feel disposed to run the old Tickett. In that event Johnson would Stand a good Chance for the Nomination, perhaps the best. But I have no idea he will desire the Vice Presidency. Tho you no doubt understand the views and wishes of our Party better than I can, I am Satisfied now of one fact & that is that Mr Van Buren is the strong man in Arkansas. We are now arranging for a State Convention\textsuperscript{2} to come off the 1st Monday in Decr. at this place. We design to Nominate a Candidate for Govr & Congress & to appoint Delegates to the B. Convention\textsuperscript{3} and from the Complection of the County meetings so fare I believe Van Buren will be Nominated. At all events he will or the members will be left free to do for the best.

Neither Judge Cross nor myself will be Candidates for reelection and that fact as well as a laudable ambition has given us about a dozen Candidates or that many who will be before the convention. It is our first effort at a Convention, and I am not Certain that it will exactly do?

A few days since I received a letter from our old friend Sam Laughlin. He is your devoted friend and I wrote to him fully & freely on the subject of the next election.\textsuperscript{4} What would you think if Laughlin was to become a Citizen of Arkansas. This is the very place for Sam. He would do a good business in his profession and he is a better Politition than any we have and would soon become a leading man. I want him here to take Charge of [our] Paper the "Banner."\textsuperscript{5} So what you would loose in Tennessee you would gain in Arkansas, and we are worth struggling for. Ten. is but a poor Concern at best and Cant be relyed on.

I begin to fear of late that if we suced at the next election it will be as much as a bargan. We have so many scaly Politutions in our ranks. I wish to god, it was Unconstitutional for a man to quit his party. I mean among the Politions & that they had to Suffer under the "2d Section."\textsuperscript{6} I hope things are in a better condition than I now fear they are? Let me hear from you often & write me fully & freely.

Please Say to Madame Polk that I am Still a Single young Gentleman, that I am not disposed to quarul with old friends but that I Consider she has fed me on hope & expectations so long that I am not sure that I Can now marry at all. A Widow is my choice and rather than be thought very fastidious, I will take the one that is left, but I ought to have had first Choice. Still Situated as I am in the matter I believe I prefer the one that is unmarried. She is a good Democrat & a fine splendid looking woman and about a proper age & I am as ever . . . .

FROM DAVID CRAIGHEAD

Dr Sir Nashville [November 6] ^1 43

The old leaven begins to work. A gentleman, ^2 late U.S. now a state Senator is about to remove to Nashville. Preparatory thereto a political move is deemed necessary.

To night is selected for a democratic meeting. ^3 The avowd object is the selection of delegates to the State Convention. A. Ewing is president of the meeting of to night. Senators Nicholson and Turney, Citizen Hollingsworth and others are to be the speakers. The design is to give the voice of this County directly for Governor Cass in the first instance for the presidency, subject however to the will of a majority. It is said that members from East Tennessee come readily into this measure and desire a proceeding here as a mould for their own at home. I need not waste my time nor yours in writing out at length the design of some who are engaged in this measure nor its inevitable tendency so far as it goes.

I can not be at the meeting to night. Genl. Armstrong and I have been in consultation and we will send a good many rank and file opposed to the proceedings but no leader. I start to Arkansas in a day or two with the design of being absent several months. I do not think I should help the cause of Democracy by making an effort at making a division or even at defeating their attempt and then leaving my views and opinions to the mercy of others unless there was some one on the spot able to understand and to sustain them. I have heretofore attempted to do some service in the cause of Democracy. I believe it to be the cause of our Country. I think I labored without the desire of reward and suffered without murmuring. At present I do not see any thing in my power that even promises to be useful. Indeed matters have come into a situation which I have long apprehended and have ineffectually struggled against. We have adopted the system of some of our older States of attempting to compromise. We have forgotten that their cement is money and that candidates pay for their districts and that many of the comon soldiers like other surfs fight only for pay. Here we have no money and most of our people are honest natives and are only induced by what they believe to be the Countrys good. What then is party organization in Tennessee but organized anarchy, an army commanded by Corporals and Seargeants but without a captain or Col much less a Genl. So long as the great mass of the people remain at home and are addressed in a mass none but the Strong and experienced and respected voices can reach them and they necessarily act in general concert. But when every County nay every cross road and every creek has its organization and its little local leaders and each acts upon local feeling, sensation, impression or the impulse of a casual orator the smartest or the Stupidest and most impudent of the neighbourhood, what is to be expected but the confusion of Babel and its consequent rout and dispersion.

I hardly know why I write you all this. It's dictated under a feeling of despondency to which my nature is almost a stranger but which the circumstances of the time have impressed upon me this feeling. I claim the privilege of writing for your own eye and I sincerely wish that it may be under this feeling alone that I add what is my firm conviction that if the measure to be proposed here to night should prevail through the state that in despite of the past you will find yourself occupying precisely that position in the democratic party which Mr. Bell holds amongst the Whigs, changing only Foster for Nicholson.

Dear Sir,

Clarksville 10th Nov. 1843

I read your letter a few days after it was written but delayed replying until the last moment, hoping to receive a reply from the North & to have communicated it to you; but none such have arrived. I have been to Nashville but could spend but little time among the members as I am again sued as security in the Supreme Court for another 1000, which required much examination as it was very old case. P. B. Anderson is firm agt. Van Buren—for Cass & you (secretly for Calhoun). A few others I think have feelings for Cass as an available but not the hostility to Van, that is expressed by Anderson. Laughlin thought all right except Anderson. I doubt the policy of our convention being mute. An open & manly course is the best. Every indication at present is favorable to you so far as I can see. I shall spare no pains when I get to headquarters in ascertaining & informing you every thing of interest. I fear Kendall will oppose Blair for the public printing, & if so, it will give us much trouble if nothing worse. I wrote A. K. strongly urging him to permit no such thing & it might be well, to intimate such a thing to Genl. Jackson, that he might if it can be properly done interpose and prevent if possible such collision. We are (our party) in a bad condition & I shall not be much surprised if we are as much distracted as the Whigs were in 1841.

Will you think at the State Convention of the propriety & the mode of getting the Whig districts supplied with documents? Ought not the county committees to supply funds & names to some of us? I can work hard but have no means to spare & I expect it is so with most of the democratic members. The county committees should get contributions. I was surprised to learn than Genl. Caruthers had said seriously to several of our friends that he had written letters to his friends urging them to elect me Speaker. I cant immagine what he means.

We are packed up & ready for the first boat going to Louisville. I shall expect to hear from you often during the winter.

My dear Sir,  Nashville, Nov. 17, 1843

Your brother¹ has informed me to-day, that you are at home. I am so situated as to render it impossible for me to write at length, and as I hope you will come up here forthwith, it is, perhaps, not important for me to say much. I will say, that I think it all important that you should be here by Sunday evening, even if you should find it proper to go away before Wednesday.
We have had much trouble here in our own household, and possibly may have more. Pearce Anderson in the Assembly, and Andrew Ewing and a few others out of it, seem to be pursuing a course that lends to the ruin of our party. Attempts have been made to nominate Col. Cass in the democratic Association\(^2\) here, but it has been defeated. Sam Turney, with whom Ewing seems to have become very intimate, aided in that attempt, and even Gardner was misled. Before the Convention sits, this must be put entirely down. In tomorrow's Union, will be an article on State Conventions, referring for example to the course pursued lately in Connecticut, which I wrote, hoping that it may have a tendency to proderce some \textit{sameness} and \textit{uniformity} in the thinking of our delegates.\(^3\) Hogan, however, is sick, and has been sick, and I have had to write every political editorial for the last fortnight. It is not known, nor do I wish it, for I have not time to write creditable articles.

I have just received a letter from A. A. Kincannon which I will show you, also a letter from Gov. Yell. In both Arkansas and Mississippi, \textit{all's} well. But I fear the news from New York will grow worse instead of better. The damned Subteranean democrats, Calhounites and Tylerites, have divided our party and will ruin us I am afraid. All is not lost, however, which is in danger. Come up.

Laughlin proclaimed that the resolutions passed by the Connecticut Democratic cracy of each state maintained exclusive control over the process by which it would select delegates to the National Convention; however, in most instances the selection process would mirror that by which a state's presidential electors were chosen. Allocation of delegates would be the same as for that of electors in the Electoral College; state delegations would be allowed to adopt the unit rule in convention voting.

You must not fail to have them done by monday night, when we can examine them & compare opinions. The Preamble, Resolutions & address to the people should be carefully drawn. Our friend Humphreys is a safe counsellor & an able man, but is slow to be roused to action, and if you rely on him, the papers I fear will not be ready until the last hour. Polk to bring Marshall out with him in the event his mother and yourself yielded your assent.\(^2\) I was not aware at the time, nor until I was informed of it in your letter, of his delicate state of health, or of the affliction to which you mention he is subject.\(^3\) Upon receiving the information which you give me, I concur with you in opinion, that the route which I had proposed for him to travel might prove to be too severe for him to bear. I am much gratified to learn that his mother yields her consent for him to come as soon as a suitable and proper opportunity shall offer. The fall-season is now far advanced, and winter is almost at hand, or I would send a Buggy for him immediately as you suggest. I have concluded however that it will probably be most prudent to postpone it until next spring—when if no other suitable and safe opportunity offers, I will get my brother William⁴ or some other safe and prudent man to go in, with a Buggy for him. I take great interest in him and his mother may be assured, that I will take all possible care of him, and adopt all possible means to enable him to outgrow his affliction. You advise me to procure a truss for him. I will certainly do so. I have known them used successfully with boys similarly affected in one or two instances, and it strikes me the earlier they are used the better. I anticipate great pleasure in having him with me and in superintending his education. I received one letter from him⁵ & answered it⁶ when on the eve of starting to Mississippi. FROM LUCIEN B. CHASE

Clarksville Tennessee Nov 28 1843

Dear Sir

I was deprived of the pleasure of being present at the state convention at Nashville. I had anticipated much pleasure, previous to the meeting of the convention in being present at an assemblage of warm, zealous, and talented Democrats from different portions of our state, but having made my arrangements to go to Nashville by water no boat came in time and my designs were thwarted. I was truly happy to learn that the meeting passed with perfect harmony, and that there was a degree of enthusiasm among the members which argues well for the success of our cause. It is manifestly the design of the Federal party to carry the election if possible in the same way they did in 1840. They are forming clay clubs, and are already taking steps to raise excitement. It might be advisable for our friends to pause, and reflect upon the proper course for us to pursue in the ensuing canvass. That no reasonable man, requires excitement to inducement him to discharge his duty does not admit of argument, but then that portion of our citizens who generally decide a political contest are evidently influenced by enthusiasm. And it may be a question how far it would be reprehensible to take the same course as that adopted by our opponents, to bring to our support men who cannot or will not be controlled by the dictates of reason. One thing is very certain that if our principles are established through their aid, no injury can result to them. Your experience in this matter will be of infinite advantage to us in deciding. I do not mean to be understood as asserting that we should reenact the disreputable scenes of 1840. For I believe that those scenes would bring contempt upon any party; but you are well aware that to produce energetic action there must be some feeling, that a powerful impulse may be communicated from one bosom to another. Now there ought to be an understanding among the democracy in what manner the canvass is to be conducted so that we can act in concert. I thought to day I would obtain an indication of the state of the publick mind, and as our circuit court is in session, I visited some dozen of our Democratick farmers from different part of our county1 to meet me at my office. They came. I addressed them a few minutes and proposed that a committee of four or five in each civil district should be appointed to meet here on the 23 of next month to report the propriety of establishing democratick clubs in each civil district. The proposition took admirably. I have never witnessed more enthusiasm than was manifested by so small and assemblage. If we can once get the people in motion I entertain the most confident expectations of carrying the state.

I Start next Saturday for the Humphreys2 Court and in doing so I shall pass through Dickson County, and if possible I mean to start the ball in those counties before I return.

I would be much pleased to learn your views with regard to the course which ought to be pursued in the approaching canvass.

TO MARTIN VAN BUREN

My Dear Sir: Columbia Tennessee Novr. 30th 1843

Our State convention which convened on the 23rd Instant, as you will see from the published proceedings made no nomination for the Presidency, but appointed Delegates to represent the State, in the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore in May next. Shortly after our election in August, indications were given of an intention on the part of a few discontented members of our party, chiefly in the Eastern Division of the State to favour the nomination of Genl. Cass. Some imprudent and mischievous articles with that view appeared in the Knoxville Argus. Prompt measures were taken to check this movement & there was no reason to doubt, but that they had been successful. A few days before the meeting of the Convention, & during my absence to the State of Mississippi, an apparently concerted movement was made, by the friends of Genl. Cass to press his nomination upon the ground as they alleged, not of hostility to you, but of his (Genl. C's) superior availability. They brought forward their proposition to nominate him, at a meeting of "The Democratic Association" at Nashville, and anounced their determina[tion]¹ to press his nomination before the State Convention. This was promptly and successfully opposed by leading members of the Legislature and others, who having heard of the intended movement, attended the meeting of the "Association." The discussions however which took place, led unfortunately to some excitement and some division in our ranks, and though when the Convention met, our friends had no doubt of being able to carry your nomination, if it had been moved, yet thought it prudent under the circumstances, to abstain from the attempt, especially as the friends of Genl. Cass, agreed not to present him, if you were not brought forward, and expressed their entire willingness to support the nominee of the Baltimore Convention. It being ascertained, if any attempt was made to nominate, that there would be some division and probably an excited discussion, which it was feared would have a tendency to weaken us in the State, our friends of the Convention came to the conclusion that it was the more prudent course to appoint our Delegates to Baltimore, and leave them uninstructed. I was not present at the Convention but learn that these were the motives and reasons for the course which was adopted. Of the Delegates appointed, ten certainly, and I think twelve out of the thirteen will support your nomination. The two Delegates from the State at large representing the Senatorial votes were appointed by the Convention, and will support your nomination. The separate Delegations in attendance from each of the eleven Congressional Districts appointed one Delegate. Genl. Anderson who was a member of the U.S. Senate at the close of your administration, was without proper consideration on the part of the Delegates, chosen from the Knoxville District, and is favourable to the nomination of Mr Calhoun. Of the opinions of two other of the District Delegates, I am not certainly advised but think they will act with the body of the Delegation. Anderson too I think may possibly be unwilling to separate from them. Your friend Andrew J. Donaldson should have been the Delegate instead of the Alternate from the Nashville District. The Delegate chosen however is a true man, and I understand will probably decline going on, and request Donaldson to represent the District. Supposing it might not be interesting to you, I give you these particulars as I understand them. I have visited Genl. Jackson since the Convention adjourned, and though in common with the body of our Democratic friends, he would have preferred a nomination, he yet appreciates properly the motives of the Convention, and is satisfied that the course of our Delegates at Baltimore will be the one I have stated to you.

The course of our Whig Legislature has added nothing to the strength of their party, but on the contrary, has greatly weakened them; and I repeat the opinion expressed in a former letter, that now that we are unembarrassed by local causes and questions of State policy, we can and will carry the State in 1844. Nothing can prevent it, but the want of proper discretion and harmony in the action of the Baltimore Convention.

My Dear Sir, Nashville Dec. 3, 1843

I have concluded to make the northern trip of which we conversed when you were last at Nashville; and shall probably leave home in all next week. I am well satisfied—the more I reflect upon our conversation—that it is important, nay, indispensable. I shall write you often.

I am pretty well acquainted with those with whom I wish to have a judicious conference, but I have thought that some two or three open letters from you, say to Benton, Wright and Allen of the Senate might be of use as strengthening my position when assuming to speak for the Southwestern democracy. It will be only necessary to state the position that I occupy, and the degree of confidence generally expressed in my paper by the democracy of the Miss. Valley. If you write these letters please enclose them to me by the earliest mail, if convenient.

Our committee¹ are at work to-day in preparing the manuscript circular letters spoken of, and I think they will have good effect.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir: Shelbyville Decr. 4th 1843

I have great anxiety about the forth-coming address to the people of the State.¹ At this juncture of time it will attract attention throughout the Union, and if it is ably drawn and is such a paper as the talents of our friends can make it, it will go far to settle the Vice Presidential nomination. It will go forth under the sanction of imposing names, with Gov. Carroll at their head. It will be understood abroad to embody the sentiment of the Democracy of this State, deliberately sent forth by their chosen organ, a committee appointed by their Convention. This being the case it should command the assistance in its preparation of the whole party. I wrote to Humphreys on the subject before I left home. Nicholson who came out in the stage to Columbia on saturday, informed me, that a meeting of a part of the committee had been held at Gen. Carroll’s a night or two before he left, & that he had been requested to prepare it. I desire very much that you should be consulted and give your aid in its preparation. In regard to the general character of the paper, I believe I explained to you my views. It will be unnecessary to re-iterate, at any length at least, the general tenets of our political faith, for these have been so often & in so many forms presented to our people that they have become familiar with them. A concise history of the origin & progress of the existing parties in the State, with the causes of our divisions, accompanied with a bold and strong expression of confidence in our strength, will do much to inspire confidence in our success. The main objects of the address should be to impress our friends abroad that we have fair prospects of success, and that we will succeed, if the action of the Democratic Convention at Baltimore shall be judicious & harmonious. The address of course will carry out the views of the Convention & express no preference for the Presidency, but make an appeal to our friends to avoid all angry or excited discussion as to men, and to give their hearty and zealous support to the nominee of the Convention. It would be indelicate in me to say, what the paper should be touching the Vice Presidency. That I can safely leave to my friends. To you however I will say, that by turning to the Weekly Union of February 1840, you will find an article written immediately after our Convention of that year, entitled as well as I remember, “A Voice from the South West,” which may aid you in the preparation of this part of the Address. I will return home on tomorrow or the next day, and if you advise me at Columbia that you will have the paper in a state of forwardness, I could be at Nashville on saturday or monday next. If I come I will revise the paper except so far as it may relate to myself.

There is another matter that I have thought much about since I saw you. There must be an able, a true and efficient editor of the Union, during the next year. I fear that occasional contributors would not make a uniformly good paper. It would be much better if we had some one to give his whole attention to it. I learned when at Nashville that $1500 could be

I merely mention this now, that you may think of it, by the time I come to Nashville, when something definite must be settled in regard to it.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Nashville, Dec. 7, 1843

I would have answered your last yesterday, but I expected to have an opportunity of writing by Mr. Jonas Thomas to-day, but find now that he will not leave before tomorrow morning. Besides this, I wished for some time to reflect upon the new suggestion contained in your letter concerning the condition and prospects of the Union newspaper. You know that a friend of ours, more or less, proposed to have a supervising eye over its editorship and conduct during the approaching campaign, provided he should be excused from the performance of another service. I had never thought of any arrangement, upon any contingency, which would devolve the responsibility on me of which you speak. I am not vain enough to believe for a moment, that there are not others who can do the service in question better than myself. You are aware, that it might be improper for me, having a regard to the future, to undertake any duty that would deprive me of my local rights of inhabitancy in my district in 1845. If we fail in all our other undertakings, and for which I am willing to labor day and night in any position, high or low, for the next twelve months, I can still fall back upon my claims to an election to Congress, from which Mr. Cullom nor no one else can drive me, unless I am willing. If my field of labor should be assigned me here, until after the election next fall, might it not affect my claims at home? My constituents, and the whole Mountain District, are jealous of, and hate Nashville. Could I undertake such a duty—although in behalf of the democratic [party] of the whole state—to be performed here—requiring a temporary sojourn and residence here—without becoming in a sense, detrimental to my interest at home, a citizen of Nashville, and identified with Nashville interests? These are things, personal to myself, which deserve my serious consideration, and the advice of friends. If I ever think of undertaking the temporary employment, it must not only be with the assent, but upon the solicitation of our leading democratic friends in my own district, and with the district understanding that my absence from home is temporary, transient, a quasi official absence, on public duty, and in no sense a change of permanent domicil. Think of these things, and I will think. I would not give the subject the consideration of a moment if it were not for the anxious solicitude I feel in the coming contest. To succeed in that I would willingly encounter any responsibility or drudgery, and forego my profession for the time, by which, even in my own circuit, I can make at least $2500 between this time and next December—and with moderate toil, and but little responsibility.

If I find it possible, and my friends think proper to confide in me so far as to intrust a post of such responsibility to me, two things I would suggest. One is a sine qua non. I must and will have nothing to do, in any form or manner, with the business concerns of the establishment; and the next would be, that before my absence in the Spring for a few weeks at Baltimore, if I go there, and soon as our Assembly adjourns, that I should make a flying excursion to Jefferson City, Springfield, Indianapolis and Columbus, while the legislatures of Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio are in session—or at least to Missouri and Illinois—with letters to friends, from proper persons, to see what arrangements and understandings it may be practicable to form before the Baltimore Convention sits. To be willing to encounter such a trip, in snow and ice, I hope will evince my zeal if not my discretion. My will and wish is, to leave no proper expedient for strengthening the prospect of success untried. In the legislatures of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, I have some few respectable acquaintances, who are all democrats as far as I know. To Mississippi and Louisiana I would willingly make the same trip if deemed of any use. In regard to all these matters, I wish to see you, and shall hope to see you by Saturday, as that is the day you speak of being here.

I could never get a word written and put in the Union even in favor of Cave Johnson in time to let others see how he is esteemed at home, before the organization of Congress, until I wrote myself, and pressed in a short article the other day—too late, however, for any purpose, but to show our friends at home and abroad what we think and wish about him.
I have written to Judge Catron, as per promise, to Frankfort, how our matters are. I have written again and again to Brown, Johnson and Cullom—confidentially to Johnson & Brown alone—how all our matters stand. I wrote to Yell, C. C. Clay, A. A. Kincannon &c. before you left here, and under an injunction of confidence; I have written, as solely from myself, to Moses Dawson.

I do not know how Mr. Nicholson relishes the editorial, as it appeared in the Union, speaking C. Johnsons claims to be Governor, or to have a seat in the Senate. I have written what I wish to form a portion of the Democratic Address.

S. H. Laughlin

P.S. I have made a speech on our tax bills, and proposition to withdraw $62000 of the annual School appropriation to pay interest &c. and have opposed the withdrawal.

FROM AARON V. BROWN

Dear Sir

Washington Decr. 9th, 1843

You will have seen the Presidents message—all that he says about Texas.

But this is not all. I have reason to suppose it will soon be followed up with some definite and precise proposition. Some think a Treaty. The impression here among the whigs is, that this is all that he has to say on the subject & that he has brought it up only as a fire brand between the north & the South, hoping he may make profit to himself in the midst of the conflagration. In this view the subject may die away for a while both parties turning from it under the opinion that there are questions enough already to distract and divide them. This may be well enough for a time, but in the mean while the press (Whig & Democrat) in the S. & West must be kept in right position, neither committing themselves in the slightest degree against annexation. A special messenger is constantly expected with authority instantly to close a treaty. The convocation of the Texan Congress\(^2\) may delay him a little.

Our organization was speedily & harmoniously made. How should our caucus nominations be made? We answered by a majority of all the Democrats elect (not present). The Calhoun men add "by 2/3 of the Democrats present." Now the difference was so small we yielded; thereupon the nominations were all cheerfully acquiesced in & confirmed by the house. The relative strength is estimated as follows: Calhoun 24 or 25, Buchanan 11 or 12, Johnson 3 or 4, Cass none—not one I believe unless the Michigan men be counted for him. All the rest for Van Buren. As to the Vice the impression is gaining ground, that Colo. J.\(^3\) has hung on so obstinately for the first office that he is not now entitled to the second if he should become willing to fall back on it. I have heard it confidently asserted that Benton & the Ohio men were all against him and would be for you against him or any body. I think it very probably so, & shall do everything of course to encourage such a state of feeling.

Our good & sincere friend Langtry\(^4\) is here for the post office. I could refuse him personally as a man but I fear the popular demonstrations are too strong in favor of Mr. Vorhies.\(^5\) On this account I am endeavoring to get for him one of the $1500 clerkships of the house. It would suit him well if his business at home would allow him to accept of it, which is a little doubtful. If I can get it for him (being here) perhaps Vorhies might prefer exchanging positions presently, so as to enable L to attend better to his shattered affairs at home. This of course is only a suggestion for the convenience of both, as I would like to serve both. If this arrangement can be made it will be known Monday or Tuesday next.

The committees have not been announced yet & no one knows "the cast of characters in the play." I am indifferent about it, as I have but few political aspirations. Who on the Ways & means? I do not know. Wilkins wont do on act of the Tariff. I should as soon expect Rhett with Dromgoole his alternate as anybody else. Beardsley\(^6\) as he is from N. York ought not to expect it.

You see I have missed my paging but you can make it out.\(^7\) My messenger is waiting.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Washington Dec 9th 1843

I should have replied to your letter\(^1\) earlier but thought I had best delay until the organization of the House was completed. You will see by the papers what we have done—made a clean sweep except the P.M.\(^2\) & he is suspended only a little while upon the prayers & tears of Holms.\(^3\) We thought none should be permitted to remain in the Capitol who submitted to the plundering of the public by the whig Executive Committee in 1840. You see we acted with great unanimity in all our movements so far as the public can see but we in truth had a good deal of excitement & much feeling. When I reached the city ten days before the meeting, I found Bryant (of the Post, the poet) under the patronage of Leonard,\(^4\) backed by the Admn., a candidate for printer, & Wilkins arrived with me a candidate for Speaker. Very soon Shadrack Penn made his appearance, then Isaac Hill & Joel B. Sutherland & Gov. Porters Secretary.\(^5\) Kendall also a candidate for printer. We soon had rumors of combinations between the Calhoun men, Buckhnan, Johnson & Cass men, first to elect Wilkins Speaker, then turn out the Globe & elect Kendall & then elect Sturges\(^6\) of Georgia Clerk &c. We thought for a while the Globe in danger, which was of most importance. Those of us here went to work. Near two hundred members were in the City on Saturday night about 120 or 30 Democrats. The Calhoun men determined on Saturday morning not to go into caucus that evening. Genl Saunders arrived & changed their determination by promising to have a rule adopted that ½ should be necessary to a nomination. They came in, urged the rule, we adopted it & nominated Jones on the 1st ballot. Still the struggle for printer was to come on under the same rule. Kendall could get some democrats & the supposed combination would bring in others and defeat all nominations & of course the whigs would defeat Blair. Kendall placed his paper in the hands of every member in which he said after many professions of democracy, his fidelity &c "we shall find it necessary to form business & political connexions with another or others and having no committal to embarrass us, we shall be disposed as far as consistent with our duty to the public and ourself to conform to the wishes of those who support us." 7 I regarded it as an effort to bring in Penn, who dappled to control the Johnson & Cass men, & Bryant & his friends & Hill & his if he had any, by a division of the profits but then the use of the words "political connexions" looked like a bait for the whigs. I was apprehensive & I have but little doubt others so calculated that the ½ rule would defeat any nomination & of course it would be settled in the House by the whigs. We met in caucus, such apprehensions on my mind & not a little excited, I made a speech, shewing the consequences which I thought would result to our party from a defeat of the Globe & then expressed "my regret" at the appearance of such an article in the Expositor & was about commenting on severely when its reading was called for. It was read, & from the impression it seemed to make on every mind I made no comment further than a strong expression of my regret. Well we voted & ½ declared for the Globe. Since I have recd a long letter from Kendall, very kind & conciliatory hoping that I may say something to remove the suspicion cast on his "political integrity" as he calls it, which my course was calculated to make. I shall of course do no such thing because I am not yet satisfied that my impressions were erroneous. All soon became quiet & every thing since moves on harmoniously because we have a dead majority of the whole House—all odds & ends & whigs to boot. The Calhoun men wanted a chance to come in decently. Some of them declared that Calhoun had no chance & they would support the nominees & it is generally believed that Calhoun will be with drawn before May. We have now nothing to fear but the whigs. We have been occupied all day in the House & late at night in caucus, so that I have not even seen Silas Wright, and have had no conversation as yet with him or any others of our leaders as to the Vice presidency. Some of the Missouri members say Missouri will be certainly for you. McNAir of the Central Committee of Ky says the vote of Ky will be given you (he is a candidate for PM & may expect favors). Allen of Ohio & Weller intimated that they thought Ohio would go for you. In the course of a week or so, I shall fall in as if by accident with the leaders & bring up the subject & try what I can learn. I have reed no letter from Silas Wright. I have reed letters from Cheatham & Laughlin explaining the cause of no presidential nomination in such a way, that I think will be satisfactory to our Northern [friends]. It has a bad aspect on paper. It seems to say, that we hold ourselves in readiness to take part with the man who will take our Vice-president, and Ten. in such a minority cannot excite fear, and a nomination of both, if it could have been unanimous would have answered our purposes better (as I think). I will shew the letters to Wright & others. I think I informed you that the articles in the Enquirer for Genl Cass was the production of Rives. Now it is said Rush is the author.

We shall leave no clerk in the House except French, Gould & old man Frost. I suppose the Senate will make Clarke their Secretary in the place of Dickins, if Capt Tyler does not make him Auditor of the post office in the place of Whitlesey. Col Gardner wants a clerkship in the House. We have set our heads together, to claim a Clerkship for Tennessee & intend to give it to Langtry who visited me this evening. I think we shall succeed. I have not visited the Capt. yet. My wife has not been out of her room until to day & perhaps tomorrow, if she is well enough we shall go. Almost every body is now democrats. Would you believe it? Even Harriman! Wanted me to recommend him for clerkship to the House, promising to write letters to the Union, doing justice to we democrats &c &c. I of course refused to have any thing to do with him. Genl Anderson & Clements are here & Berry Gillespie. The latter I understand is very much out with me because I interposed last session & prevented a resolution of the House directing the awards of Eaton & Hubly to be paid out of the Treasury, without being reviewed by the department or submitted to Congress. Jones acquires himself well. If we carry out the suggestions of our State Convention we cannot fail of success. The Union should commence its weekly paper in some cheap form, so as to be ready in May. We shall do our business here & I hope adjourn in May.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,

Washington Dec 11th 1843

I gave you a slight sketch of our difficulties here in the organization.\(^1\) The turn, I supposed, which things would take, is likely to be realised. All the fragments of our party seem likely to unite upon Van Buren, make his nomination unanimous & each party seek the succession by distinguished services in his behalf. The game for the succession is I think commenced. The friends of Calhoun are feeling to see how Mr. C. would go down for the Vice-presidency!! I heard S. W. Jr.\(^2\) say to day, that would be worse than the old candidate.\(^3\) Mr. C. & friends think he should be made the Vice or that he should return to the Senate in the spring. His wishes I presume are unknown & will depend upon what he thinks will most advance his interests for the succession. Either position will be unfavorable for us in the next election. In the former, I fear many of the old & true democrats will halt or loose their zeal upon his acct. & we shall have all his sins as well as those of Van\(^4\) to answer for. In the latter we shall have a triangular war between him and B—ton & B—nan\(^5\) & what influence that may have we cannot so readily guess. I was surprised to learn since that the pertinacity of the different branches of our party for Clerk, grew out of the supposed preference that the Van Buren men had, for the Bu—an or Ca—oun\(^6\) interest or the B—ton interest. McNulty of Ohio was regarded for the latter. Sturges for C—oun and Burghler\(^7\) for B—an. Most of us I am sure thought of no such thing, yet so deep an interest did one of the leaders feel, that he was accidently seen during the session of the caucus slipping about amidst the columns in the basement story, a very cold night wrapped in his cloak, waiting for the news no doubt of each voting. Mr Bu—an, his forces numbered 11. Sturges run well, on acct. of a proposition I made to divide out the petty offices among the friends of the other candidates. McNulty however finally prevailed, which I learn afforded some comfort to Mr. Bu—an that no preference had been shewn to the friend of C—oun over his. We get on most harmoniously & I think likely to continue so. We have sat every day almost until sun down. We will have a working House & we are trying to agree upon the 2nd monday in May for the Convention and adjournment. White is making a Jack of himself in making questions of order upon Jones. We

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir, Washington Dec 15th 1843

Not knowing whether you take the Richmond Enquirer, I enclose you a letter from Washington—this last editorial cut from the two last papers. Several of his friends stated explicitly in caucus that he had no chance for the nomination or election (Payne & Belser of Alabama) from whence inferences were drawn that he would balk, & some of his friends I know not which, have been certainly urging his selection for the vice in the highest quarters here. What his wishes are cannot be yet told. I think the Senate. He will have too much pride for the other especially knowing that it will be resisted by the friends of B—ton & Buc—an & perhaps by yours & RMJ’s also. So Soon as the first office is settled as I think it now is, the second office will be the subject of discussion. Old Dick, certainly sd. in the north that he went alone for the first & it is equally as certain when he left, after witnessing the organization of the House, that he went home determined to try for the second.
I think both the B's are afraid to yield to your nomination lest you should be in the way in 1848 & I fear may be inclined to throw their weight for Col. K. of whom there is no danger. I thought I had satisfied Col B—that such would not be the case. I have spoken strongly on that subject today in a quarter from which he will hear it. And I am not satisfied but that his eyes are turned to V—a. where his brother-in-law is Gov. & Ritchie & Stephenson as thick as pick-pockets, out of which something may be made. This is a conjecture of my own without much data. I trust I shall know more before long.

I explained in proper quarters to day the cause of no nomination in Tenn. which not only gave satisfaction but was heartily approved of.

I think the feeling of the north is right & unless controlled by some political considerations not now known, the nomination will be given to you. I think the main point is to satisfy B—that you will not be in the way in 1848. For the reasons I mentioned I think the only dangerous competitor. I suspect, a bare suspicion, that Senator A. of Ohio has been playing a little double with a view to our votes for the Clerkship. I will find out.

I regretted to find our old friend Genl Thompson here from Ohio, seeking employment—door keeper, deputy clerk or any thing. He has been broke up by securityships, old poor & needy. I regret we could give him nothing. I fear we have been doing too much in the way of removals for our popularity or the good of the service. I remonstrated as to the inferior offices but did no good. I think the Globe is heartily for you.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Nashville, Dec. 18, 1843

I have just received a few lines, written in haste, on the 5th inst. by Gov. Yell, in which he advises me, that on that day, the State Convention of Arkansas, being fully attended, had nominated Gen. Conway for Governor, Dr. Chapman for Congress,¹ and in performing their federal duties, had declared fully their preference for Mr. Van Buren and yourself for the Presidency and Vice Presidency.² Good.

I have just received letters of some length fromMessrs. C. Johnson and A. V. Brown, in which they say all our matters at Washington wear a most favorable aspect. Old Shad Penn was present at Washington, interfering with matters—working for old Tecumseh³—causing matters to take such course as to produce an irreparable breach between Johnson and the Benton men of the North West. Brown says he is in correspondence with Gen. Howard⁴ of Indiana; and that in all things they are on a strict look-out for any intrigue of Johnson or his friends with those who must be our friends to insure success.

Brown says expressly, that now, he knows of no man who looks to Gen. Cass as a first choice in the House⁵—and they both agree, that the warm friends of Mr. Van Buren double in number all the friends and factions and segments of opposition put together. Cave⁶ says it is now certain that the war will be alone with the whigs, and that there will be no civil war among the different divisions of the democracy. This is all well.

I have seen Maj. Donelson to-day. I am sure that the old chief⁷ is bestirring himself more in his correspondence with the proper parties than you are aware of.

To night the Address⁸ is to be finally agreed on. After I returned all the papers to Nicholson after you left, and after he read the additions, he insisted I had made it too long—too much in detail—and when we met at Gen. Carroll's on Saturday night, he said nothing, but had, I am sure, filled the mouth of Ross and others with the like objections. B. Gordon came with him to the meeting; and he, though not of the Committee, made like objections, as did Stevenson,⁹ who seems to have great faith in Nicholson. After Nicholson's part of the paper was read, he went away—but Gordon, Ross and especially Stevenson (who has zeal but no knowledge) made the objections, praising the whole paper—all of them desiring the whole to be made up (that is the parts they proposed to omit) and published in another form. They professed to like it all, but said all your history and course in every thing was too extensively known to need re-iteration—but still they wanted it published, but that it would make the address so long it could not and would not be read by the people. Situated as I was, and not being of the committee, I said all I could and more I fear than delicacy rendered proper as I had written the paper, in favor of retaining the most of it. The whole was committed by order of the meeting to Nicholson, Carroll and Humphreys to revise, and fix up—with request that I should attend and assist. I made memorandum in a note to Carroll, of the special points of the paper which I wished to see retained in substance—and have left it to them. The main point, showing the preference of our Convention for Mr. V. Buren will be retained. I am most delicately situated, as in writing, I was a volunteer, and offered what I wrote at request and suggestion of Nicholson.

I have no idea what and whether anything is [done] about the Union. Hogan, I think it possible, [could] be persuaded by Nicholson, that he will need no [assistance], or, that he will aid him. Hogan, I suppose, like others of his craft, thinks, if health permits, that he is equal to anybody, and I fully believe Nicholson capable of misleading leading friends here, who do not know him, as to the assistance he will give, and by that means, he will slide imperceptibly into the control of the paper. I suppose the Cass paper, which he and others lately contemplated, with Lewis¹² as the nominal editor, is now, of course, abandoned. As to the Union, I think it possible nothing will be done, and that it will go as above intimated—though, if it does, it will be against the wishes of Gen. Armstrong and your best friends here, who see below the surface of things. Possibly I may be mistaken, as to what may be the result, but I am not in a position to enquire—and shall let things take their course. I covet no position myself, and only hope and wish that whatever may be done, may be for the best.

P.S. The Address will be out Thursday. Tomorrow's Union will contain result in Arkansas, and, as you perhaps know, will declare the majority of democracy in Tenn. are for Van buren &c.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir,

Nashville, Dec. 19, 1843

I am this moment from a Democratic meeting of Members, where the Address,¹ as prepared and agreed by the Com. last night,² has been read and finally ratified, and will be out in next Union.³ It omits the important point of stating that majority of State Convention were for Mr. V. B. Carroll and others were cause of omission, after Nicholson had seemed to agree to it. Glenn⁴ & others tried to save it, but Carroll's voice carried it. He and Nicholson, and one or two others, had been in private conference. Much of the matter I wrote is abridged, but still it would do very well if that had been in. My introduction &c. were retained. I wrote you yesterday evening, and have no news since. I think, I see, that things are tending as I stated to you.

Should our wishes succeed in the election, as we wish, those who, in their hearts, wish to see us defeated, will be foremost in their positions to claim credit and reward. N.\(^5\) is evidently laying ground to obtain that kind of control which will place in\(^6\) in position to creep and crawl into the candidacy for Governor. Let him get the extent of control he wishes to acquire here over the press and men, and over the soft part of the present and next Gen. Assembly, and he will have the fulcrum he wants to raise himself up to demand and expect what he pleases. Profound hypocracy is a most dangerous qualification. I am sick of witnessing its effects on many well meaning men; but cannot take any proper step to undeceive them. As to myself, I have neither good to hope or evil to fear. I am mad at the damned long-eared foolery of being cheated out of the most important point in the address.

Hogan told me on Saturday or Sunday that he would in to-day's paper—which he has not done—come out boldly with declaration, that the majority, a large majority of our democracy, are and were for Van Buren. I fear that the finger of the same influence is in this. I am, and have since Sunday, been so put out—in fact since the meeting at Carroll's on Saturday night, that I do not know what to say, think, or do. I am, come what may, as ever ....

TO ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON

My Dear Sir: Columbia Decr. 20th 1843

My letters received from Brown and Johnson since I saw you, wear a more favourable aspect, than the one I read to you from Brown at Nashville.\textsuperscript{2} Brown writes under date of the 9th Inst. "The relative strength is estimated as follows, Calhoun 24 or 25; Buchanan 11 or 12; Johnson\textsuperscript{3} 3 or 4: Cass none, not one I believe, unless the Michigan men be counted for him; All the rest for Van-Buren; As to the Vice, the impression is gaining ground, that Col. J. has hung on so obstinately for the first office, that he is not now entitled to the second, if he should become willing to fall back to it. I have heard it confidently asserted that Benton and the Ohio-men, were all against him, and \textit{would be for you against him or any-body}. I think it very probably so." Johnson in a letter of the 11th confirms Brown's views and adds, "All the fragments of our party seem likely to unite upon Van-Buren, make his nomination unanimous, and each party seek the succession by distinguished services in his behalf: The game for the succession is I think commenced. The friends of Calhoun are feeling to see how Mr C. would go down for the Vice Presidency. I heard S. W. jr.\textsuperscript{4} say to day, \textit{that} would be worse than the old candidate. Mr C's friends think he should be made the Vice, or that he should return to the Senate in the Spring. His wishes I presume are unknown, and will depend upon what he thinks will most advance his interests for the succession." Johnson says further, "Every indication is decidedly favourable" to my nomination.

\textit{Col. R. M. J.} I have every reason to believe is now struggling to secure the Vice Presidential nomination. The last account of him, he was at Columbus Ohio, on his way home.\textsuperscript{5} The Democratic State Conventions in Ohio and Mississippi, will meet on the 8th of January next, and their action upon the subject, especially that of Ohio, whatever it may be, will go far to settle the question.\textsuperscript{6} Ohio is in my judgment, at this moment, the point of most interest, though Mississippi is also important. The views of Col. Benton, Allen & Tappan will have a controlling influence in Ohio. Letters written to them by my friends here, presenting the views of the party in this State, would reach them in time for them to write to their friends in Ohio, before the 8th of January. \textit{Mr Madison}\textsuperscript{7} the Editor of the Ohio Statesman at Columbus, our old friend Moses Dawson of Cincinnati, and \textit{Mr Medill} of the last Congress, are leading men and next to Allen & Tappan, give tone and direction to party movements in that State. It is very important that they should be written to, especially Madison. If no one here knows him personally, his public position, will authorize any member of the party to address a proper letter to him.\textsuperscript{8} You know I cannot write, and it may seem immodest to make these suggestions even to you. I do so because I am satisfied of their great importance. If your judgement is, that it is proper to write, do so [without]\textsuperscript{9} delay.

From what I learn from Laughlin to day,\textsuperscript{10} I fear [the] Committee has mutilated the forth-coming \textit{address}, so as to make it of little value. I hope I may be mistaken.
Tell the General,¹¹ that I had an interview with both the Editors of the Union,¹² when I was at Nashville and both agreed to take decided and bold ground for Van-Buren in their paper. If they do not do so, in their next paper I will write to them and urge it upon them. The paper here¹³ has done so. If you know any leading political friends at Jackson Mississippi, where the Legislature will be in Session on the 1st Monday in January, write to him also. If you have any information of movements abroad other than what I have given to you, write to me.

FROM JOHN P. HEISS

Union Office Wednesday night Nashville Dec. [20]¹⁴ 1843

Dear Sir

The more I have considered on the subject we were conversing about a few days back the more I see the necessity of a change in the arrangement of the Union and on my part I will use every endeavor to accomplish the object or desires of our Democratic friends. Hogan is a first rate fellow and I like him, but I think he has too much confidence in his own abilities to give way to any other person. This is his only fault, and I cannot agree with him, that he is able to go into the coming contest and fight out the great battle of 1844 with the same health and strength that he now possesses. In fact his health is declining daily, and I hardly believe he will live to see the commencement of it. I am as desirous of a change in the management of the Union as any other person, and in case I could purchase Hogan's interest in the Union, do you suppose the Democratic party would assist me personally, as they offered to a few days back to assist the firm jointly? All of my means is in the office and if I can purchase Hogans interest at a fair price I will give our Democratic friends the selection of the Editor; if they will contribute the amount you named a few days since, and will pay him a fair salary, say $1500 per year. If Hogan still continues to share a part of the proceeds of the establishment, it will not, with its present limited number of subscribers sustain the expense of employing an Editor. Hogan told me a few days ago that he would sell out his interest in the office. If he will and I can make arrangements to purchase the office myself I will do it. I will wait anxiously to have your advice on this subject.

I am using every exertion to stir up our young Democrats of Nashville to a party organization on the eastern plan, and I think the prospects so far, are exceedingly encouraging. I can assure you that we will be better organized in Nashville in 1844 than we have ever been before. Our Democratic Association, which I claim the honor of setting on foot, is going to have a good effect, and if the same kind of an organization is formed in the different counties throughout the state, our success is certain. You recollect very well, in Massachusetts a few years back the Democratic vote was only little over 6000, and from the commencement of the organization of Young Mens Democratic Associations the vote of the Democratic Party began to increase, until they Succeeded in carrying the state. It is the Same kind of management that causes the Democracy of the Easteren states to hold their own: look at the ward associations of the cities of New York, Philadelphia and Boston how well they regulate all their proceedings, and how successful they are in most cases in carrying out the wishes of a majority of their party. And another good effect it has towards strengthening the party, is that Young Men who are even below the age of twenty one are permitted to join the Young Mens Associations and share the benefits to be derived by visiting their Reading Rooms &c &c. And when you once have a young man's name to the constitution of an organization of that kind, he stands committed to a set of principles which he will most generally support in life. We have no news stiring worthy of notice. The Address\(^3\) is out, ready for publication, and will be published in pamphlet form in a few days.

Sir, Nashville 21 Decemr. 43

I am at a loss to understand what these people are at and fear that Hogan is more to be feared than Heiss. I have had Cheatham\(^1\) at work all day, but Humphreys this evening seems to think that Nicholson should have the paper;\(^2\) and that he would take it for $7,000. We have always suffered by keeping men in our ranks to make them strong, then turn and injure us. Lewis, Cheatham informs me, says that you cannot get the nomination at Baltimore and Van Buren will be badly beaten, &c &c. To put such a man into the Union “looks like Treason.”

See the enclosed.\(^3\) I have looked over it. You had better come in. Put these things to rest and have them settled. Now is the time to do most. And if we act now I do not think we have much to fear. In haste . . . .

TO JOHN P. HEISS

My Dear Sir: Columbia Decr. 21st 1843

I have received your letter of yesterday.\(^1\) I am very anxious for the reasons assigned to Mr Hogan and yourself, that the Union should be made a more vigorous and efficient paper, than I fear Mr Hogan's present State of health will enable him to make it. If Mr H. desires to sell his interest and you should become the purchaser, you ask my opinion whether the Democratic party would assist you personally as they proposed a few days ago to assist the firm jointly. I have good reason to believe that they would. I have no reason to believe that they would not. As a member of the party, I can say, that the change if made, by the mutual assent of Mr Hogan and yourself will be entirely satisfactory to me, and especially as you propose—to leave to your Democratic friends, the selection of the Editor, if they will contribute the amount named a few days ago, and that you will pay him a fair salary. I would much prefer this arrangement, to see Mr H. sell his interest to a third person whose future course in conducting the establishment, might be uncertain, and indeed such as to injure the cause. The Editor who is to be preferred above all others, for the coming contest, is our friend Laughlin. He has talents and experience, is perfectly familiar with the politics of the State and the Union, and is extensively known as a sound democrat. In his hands, I doubt not the patronage of the paper would be greatly increased and the cause advanced. What we want is a sound, and able Democratic paper, as a reliable organ of the party in the State. He would make it so, whilst some others into whose hands it might pass, might not. It is a matter of importance, that whatever arrangement is made should be speedily made. The public need know nothing of what is contemplated, until it is consummated, and announced by the parties. In whatever is done I must urge, that Laughlin's services be secured during the canvass of the next year.

After closing this letter, I will envelope it to Genl. Armstrong, that it may go directly into your hands, and not run the risk of falling into the general package for your office and run the risk of being opened by your clerk. I will mention to Armstrong its general purport, of course confidentially, and desire that you will have an early interview with him. Any arrangement agreed upon between you and Him, with Hogan's assent will be agreeable to me as a member of the party.

You see our paper here has taken ground for V. Buren. I mentioned to Hogan and yourself the propriety of the Union's doing the same thing, to which I understood you both to assent. Since my return home, I am the more confirmed in the views then expressed. A. V. Brown writes under date of the 9th Inst. "The relative strength is estimated as follows—Calhoun 24 or 25, Buchanan 11 or 12: Johnson 3 or 4: Cass none, not one I believe unless the Michigan men be counted for him: All the rest for Van-Buren." Cave Johnson, writes under date of the 11th, "All the fragments of our party seem likely to unite upon Van-Buren, make his nomination Unanimous, and each party seek the succession—by distinguished services in his behalf." You can if you choose shew this letter to Mr Hogan, who is my friend, and I would do, or advise nothing that would be prejudiced to his interests. I sincerely regret his feeble state of health. Shew it to no one else unless it be to Hogan or Armstrong, and that in the same confidence, that it is written to you.

P.S. I have said to Armstrong that you would shew him this letter.

FROM SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My dear Sir, Nashville, Dec. 21, 1843

I have just received yours of the 19th inst.1 I wrote you twice2 since you left. When I wrote last, I felt sure that the Address would be in the Union3 of this morning. Mr. Nicholson, Dr. Kenney and Mr. Glenn were the publication Committee. I went to the office again and again to see if it was in progress—but on applying to Mr. Nicholson who had the manuscript this morning, he said that he could not get it in time for to-day. I have been again at the office, and understand it is now in hand for Saturday's paper. I hope it will be out. One great object of the paper will be lost if it is not published, as suggested by you. It has all along been my wish that it should reach Columbus4 and other places, where State Conventions are to sit on or before the 8th of January, prox. If it comes out on Saturday, it will be in time.

I have just seen Mr. Cheatham who informs me that there are several counter and thwarting projects on hand in regard to the Union.5 He says he had it from Lewis (Nicholson's creature from Columbia) that he has come here expecting to be Editor. If so, the scheme is, that he is to be sub and Nicholson is to be master. I think they have been in negotiation with Hogan about it. Hogan, I suppose, is ready for any arrangement for his own relief and profit: and Heiss has no feelings but those of interest. I have no doubt they will conclude something soon. Gen. Armstrong you know is confined to his office—besides he is in the delicate position of holding office. I, of course, can say not a word to any one—nor can I disabuse our real friends as to the faithless course of those who have the division and destruction of the party at heart. In such case, what can be done? I have no doubt of Johnson, Brown, and Cullom agreeing with you, in pressing the service upon me, and that they prefer me to any other. But the question now arises, requiring some distinct prospective arrangement to be made instanter. If something express—something binding—is not forthwith arranged, Nicholson and his friends, nearly all of them friends because they do not know him, will have the whole control of our party affairs, and the leading press, in their own hands, or under their unconditional control. When this is accomplished, you, Johnson, Brown and others, to say nothing of such small fry as myself and others, will have to look for friends, as far as the press is concerned, where we can find them. Even the old chief, for justice, and future defence; and Gen. Armstrong, and the entire old set and family of the old fashioned democracy, will have to be more or less dependant on the press thus placed under newlight control. The time has been when the democracy could not have been exposed to such dangers. It is possible, however, that these latter day Saints in our church, will carry everything their own way.

You mentioned to me something about the precise terms upon which I thought I could undertake the work, if I could do it at all. You and Gen. Armstrong had both mentioned to me the sum of $1500, as the sum which could be raised for service until after the Presidential election next December. I stated to you that if I could do it at all, I was willing to do it for what our friends could give; I stated that in next year, and during the same term of time, I could make $2000 or $2500 with less labor by my profession, and that if it were not for my poverty, and the helpless persons dependent on me, and owing some money, I would be proud to do the service gratuitously and for the good of the cause. This, you said, could not be expected.

I will now say, that if you were here, I am sure an arrangement can and shall be made. I will have no possible connexion with the business of the paper. Let the proprietors pay in some way, or at some time, what they may prove themselves willing to pay. Leave it to their own discretion. In addition, let true friends here, pay reasonably, in moderate contributions, what they will agree to pay without being hard on them, according to their means, but promptly. If this falls short of what my confidential friends may think I ought to have and shall deserve and earn, I will depend for the deficit on the means we hope to raise abroad. If we are successful in raising money, I can be paid all I would accept, and if not, I will loose the balance of my labor and time as I have often done. If final success crowns our efforts, I shall consider that compensation enough for all [ . . . ]² in pay. If you were here, I say again, all can be fixed.
I once thought I never would touch such a thing, and I now consent, because I see that the self preservation of myself and friends who never deceived me, demands it. Weak as I know myself to be, I see that the cause demands' of me to act, because another better qualified cannot be had, and because, if I do not, the power and influence of the press, at this central point, will pass into the hands of the enemy.

If you were here, I could show you the state of my wants, and the line of action I propose for myself, with the approval of friends, right off.
Nothing however to be announced or known till the proper time. Can you come? I have asked Gen. Armstrong, to whom I have shown this letter, to write to you. I will look to the printing of the address so as to see it is correctly done.

Nashville 22 Decr. [1843]¹

I have settled Humphreys in a Chat, of two hours in my room up stairs. He now understands what N.² & Carroll are at. He wrote you by to nights mail. Cheatham also, who I found it necessary to call in to my aid.

I feel satisfied that Hesse³ will do nothing but what the friends and our party wish him to do in relation to the paper.⁴ I can manage him.

Donelson will be down in the morning. We will have the letters written to Ohio & Miss. Send in any names you recollect.

My Impression is that you should go to the north. Visit Pennsyl. New York Virginia &c. &c. They are all working for themselves and you should do so too. Genl. Jackson perhaps never would have been Presidt. if he had not been sent to the Senate by his friends against his will. Mail

Dr. Sir:

Nashville, December 22nd 1843

I have read your letter to Armstrong, & before its reception we had ascertained the substance of all your allusions & were at work. Hogan is still slow in deciding whether he will sell out, or still retain his interest & permit us to select our own Editor; either course will do, & we are pressing a decision as strong as prudence dictates. We have burnt your letter as a prudent course in our opinion, & of course as that fact is here communicated, you can burn this if you choose. We have conversed with but few friends, but all say for fear of some accident you had best come in without delay & that with a view of delaying longer than you did before. Such seems to be the fate of War.

L. P. Cheatham

P.S. Heiss pledges himself that no man shall come in as joint partner with him unless with our assent, & further that he is willing we shall elect the Editor & that he will attend to all the business & let Hogan still remain joint partner, or that if Hogan prefers selling, he will buy, by getting some aid & in the latter event we would forthwith have the controul. The matter has been pressed on Hogan this evening, now nearly sun down. We are compelled to have patience & wait for the moving of the waters.

FROM JOHN P. HEISS

Friday evening

Dear Sir

[Nashville] Union Office Dec. [22] 1843

I have taken the liberty to again freely address you on the subject of my last communication. There has been a report in circulation to day at this place, which has given our friends some alarm, and the subject of it, was that Mr Lewis was about purchasing an interest in the Union. In the first place neither myself or Hogan has any acquaintance with Lewis, and in the second place our friends need not be under any apprehensions of a change unless their will is consulted on the subject. But to the point. I have conversed with Hogan since I last wrote you on the subject of your proposal when in Nashville, and I think he will accede before long to the proposition without any other change you contemplated. Hogan thinks with myself that it will be more than we possibly can do, to add an expense of $750 per year to our now heavy outlay; but my dear sir I am for one willing to make the venture and depend upon our Democratic brethen to sustain us by an increase of patronage. We are you [see] progressing with our buisness at present on a true foundation and to add to our expenses without any return, it would perhaps be the means of bringing us into difficulties we could not encounter. We are both poor and on our own exertions, are we dependant for the support of our families.

With your exertions in our favour I know we shall be repaid and I would request you to write to Hogan on this matter, but not at once urge it too strongly, as he is a good hearted fellow, but a person whose constitution is feeble requires some forbearance. You may rest assured my dear sir that all in my power necessary to carry out your desires, shall be freely tendered towards the advancement of Democratic Principles, and the elevation of my respected friend James K. Polk.

TO ANDREW JACKSON

My Dear Genl: Nashville Decr 25th 1843

I would call to see you, but am compelled to return home on tommorrow. The information I have from Washington is, that all the fragments of our party are likely to unite on Mr Van-Buren, nominate him unanimously, and each of the leading aspirants for the succession, seek favour with the party by distinguished services in his behalf. The Vice Presidency is not so well settled. My friends write to me that all the indications from the North are decidedly favourable. They give me at the same time an account of the movements, upon that subject, which are being made. Cave Johnson writes that some of the leading friends of Calhoun, are pressing him in high quarters for the Vice Presidency, on Mr Van-Buren's ticket.¹ He thinks, it meets with no favour from the leading members of the party. He states further that Col. J.² left Washington. He has no doubt determined if he could not get the first, to seek the nomination for the second office. The last account I have seen of the Colonel, he was at Columbus Ohio, on his way home. The State conventions of Ohio, and Mississippi will meet on the 8th of January next, and their action on the Vice Presidential nomination will have great influence in settling that question. Ohio is the great State in the West, and when she speaks her voice will be listened to, throughout the Union, and will have great influence. Both Johnson & Brown incline to the opinion that Col. B.³ and the Ohio gentlemen are favourable to my nomination, but they can learn nothing definite and distinct on that point. Next to Mr Senator Allen & Tappan, the man who commands most influence and power in the Democratic party in Ohio, is Col. Samuel Medary of Columbus, who is a gentleman of high intelligence and character, and the Editor of the “Ohio Statesman.” What his views or opinions are I am not informed. Ohio I regard to be the pivot, upon which the question of the Vice Presidential nomination will turn.

Genl. Armstrong, will inform you, of the arrangements which have been made to make the Union a more efficient organ in the State. I saw both the Editors⁴ to day, and they have agreed to take bold and unequivocal ground for Van-Buren. The Columbia paper⁵ you see⁶

Sir, [Nashville] Evening Dec. 25, 1843

I am writing letters, but will see you again this evening at Gen. Armstrong’s after supper. In meantime, think of the following things:
1. Mr. Hogan, I know feels sensitive about any name supplanting his, or seeming to do it. My wish will be, as my connexion is to be temporary, that my name shall not go in the paper\(^1\) as Editor; though the first publication will show my connexion under my own hand. I shall prefer this. It is so of most our leading papers, the Pennsylvanian\(^2\) &c.

2. As Kezer is my connexion, and will otherwise, as he always has done, contribute through the Davidson Dem. Association,\(^3\) and as a member of the Big State Committee of five at Nashville,\(^4\) his full quota of all moneys for paying for the cause, I would rather he were not asked to sign the paper—and would rather he should pay his tax in any other way. I ask this not to relieve or release him, but because I do not wish it to appear that he had any agency in inducing me to come here and embark in the engagement. It is the effect it would, and possibly might have on me at home I wish to avoid, and which I understand better than I have time here to explain.

3. I am clear, upon reflection, that the arrangements ought to be secret now—but I will to-night, have an agreement for H & Heiss\(^5\) and myself to sign.

4. I am also satisfied, that the Central Committee here (Kezer's name being left out) ought to address me a request to assist in conducting the paper to be called the Star Spangled Banner\(^6\)—and that their request should say I can do it, as a service to the party, temporarily, and without changing my residence. If they were to do so now, I could take it under advisement, and answer after I get letters from Washington. I will talk with you about this. I think Nicholson has poisoned Stevenson—but he is not one of the Central Committee. That committee is:

Felix Robertson
A. J. Donelson
Willo: Williams
J. J. B. Southall\(^7\) &
T. Kezer.

These would sign such note as you would dictate and leave to be copied with Gen. Armstrong.

On a line from you, Huntsman would forthwith send such a request to me from the Jackson Committee—which is,

A. Huntsman
J. Caruthers\(^8\)
A. O. W. Totten\(^9\)
Thomas Ewell
Geo. Snider.\(^10\)

Think of these things until I see you. In haste . . . .

S. H. L.
P.S. I must show my folks at home that I have had a call that I cannot, as a true democrat, resist.

FROM MARTIN VAN BUREN

My dear Sir

Lindenwald Decr. 27th 1843

I thank you kindly for your friendly letter.¹ No explanations were necessary to satisfy me of the goodness of the motives of my friends in Tenn. & being on the spot they were the best judges & I am you know, not one of the complaining sort, but am on the contrary always willing to let such matters take their own course. This I have done in respect to the Presidential question to an extent which many of my warmest friends would hardly credit. You know what my course was at Columbia. Such it was also every where else & by the thousands & tens of thousands I saw in the course of that five months journey there is not a man who can with truth say that I made a single effort to give a direction to the nomination. In all this part of the Union we have the best feeling, & there is not the slightest doubt of a cordial support of the nominee of the Convention whoever he may be.

It is as mortifying, as it is incomprehensible, that Tennessee, which in time past knew not Federalism, should have been proof agt. the feelings & convictions which have within the last two or three years brought all the rest of the old Democratic States into their former, & true positions. You must, & I doubt not will, in good time, seek out the cause and apply the remedy. It is not to be endured that the Old Chief should go out of the world with his favourite Tenn. in Whig Hands.

Remember me very kindly to Mrs. Polk, & to my sweetest friend Mrs. Lucius Polk, & believe me to be . . .

Friday Evening

My dear Sir, Nashville, Tenn. Dec. 29, 1843

Our friend Mr. H. L. Turney has just arrived here, earlier than the time indicated in his letter to you, and requests me to write you forthwith to come up here as soon as you receive this.

I have no news. I have been writing letters, and watching things generally. Howard's speech, and things out of my control, kept the article which I wrote out of the Union on yesterday. It will be in the morning. It is short, but plainly to the point.

All, I hope, now wanting, is to get our plenipotentiaries off to Columbus. I do not know the result of Gen. Armstrong's trip to the Hermitage. In haste . . .

S. H. LaugHLIN

N.B. We do not know yet whether Maj. Donelson can go—and then, the propriety of his going, is still an undecided question. I think he ought to go. But, as Mr. Turney is here ready, we all agree, that if Maj. D. cant go, or ought not to go, that Gen. Pillow must if possible. We intreat him to lay down the law, and all other personal considerations in the present great emergency. I have seen yours to Gen. Armstrong, and write this to be communicated to Pillow in the event he has not left Columbia. Come yourself, & bring him by our order.

P.S. Maj. Donelson will be here tomorrow, and letters will be here from the Old Cock.

1. On December 26, 1843, Turney wrote Polk that he would meet him in Nashville on the first of January, "that being the earlyest possible day for me." In a postscript the following day, Turney doubted that he could meet Polk in Nashville at all. ALS. DLC–JKP.

2. The Nashville Union of December 28, 1843, carried an extract of a speech delivered by Tilghman A. Howard at an assembly honoring him at Sullivan County, Indiana, in October 1843. Howard stressed that free trade, free industry, and freedom of thought and action were basic principles of true Democracy.

3. Laughlin's editorial in the Nashville Union of December 30, 1843, entitled "Posture of Affairs—Position of Tennessee," claimed that harmony and union continued within Democratic ranks at the national and state levels, even in the face of numerous presidential aspirants. In Tennessee, harmony prevailed with the resolve of the State Convention to support the nominees of the national convention, even though Van Buren "was and is" the choice of "an overwhelming majority of the Democracy of the States," and "notwithstanding the ardent and earnest wishes of the friends" of Polk for the Vice Presidency.

4. Reference is to Columbus, Ohio, where the State Democratic Convention was to convene on January 8, 1844. See Robert Armstrong to Polk, December 22, 1843.

5. On December 31, 1843, Robert Armstrong wrote Polk that Andrew J. Donelson could not go to Columbus. Turney and Laughlin were at the Hermitage getting letters of introduction from Andrew Jackson and Donelson. Leonard P. Cheatham could not make the trip, but Turney would leave "on Tuesday morning." ALS. DLC–JKP.

6. Gideon J. Pillow wrote Polk on December 30, 1843, that the illness of two of his children would prevent his traveling to Nashville with Polk or going on to Ohio. ALS. DLC–JKP.

8. Laughlin's postscript is written in the left margin of the first page of the letter.

TO SAMUEL H. LAUGHLIN

My Dear Sir: Columbia Decr. 29th 1843

Genl. Pillow informs me that it will be impossible for him to go to Columbus, as I had hoped he would. He concurs with us, that it is vastly important, that some one or two discreet friends should go. He attaches even more importance to it, than we did. He thinks the result of the contest of 1844, as well as my own political destiny in future life, may depend upon it. If Turney come to Nashville on tomorrow I am sure he will go, if it is possibly in his power. If he and Donaldson would go, all would be safe. If Donaldson cannot do so, prevail on Cheatham to accompany him. I hope Armstrong, Humphreys, Donaldson, Cheatham, Turney, my brother and yourself will hold your consultation on tomorrow, and see that some two friends go without fail. I have written the letter which you suggested to Huntsman, and make no doubt you will hear from his committee soon. I will prepare the letter for the Nashville committee and enclose to Armstrong by tomorrow's mail, to be copied & signed by them. The article of agreement between Hogan & Heiss and yourself I hope has been signed. I see the Van-Buren article is not in the Union of yesterday, as was agreed upon. It ought to appear soon. I hope you will put into the form of Editorial or communications, the substance of your manuscript for the address, which was not incorporated in the published paper. That part of it which relates to the causes of our defeat in August & to organization would have a decidedly good effect, if put into the form of a letter & signed by the State Committee of five at Nashville—and I advise that it be made to assume that form. Let them sign it, & publish it in the Union, as an appeal to the party in the State to organize. Let me hear from you on tomorrow and on monday.

Dear Sir Somerville Decr. 30 1843

Your favor was to hand two days ago. I have written to my friend Col. Jos. S. Watkins, an old acquaintance of Medary & who is in constant correspondence with him. He read a letter a few days ago from him speaking most despondingly of the prospects of the Dem. party in that State. I have also written the letters you suggest. I start to H. Springs to the Chy Court to-morrow, and if I possibly can will leave there about the middle of the week in the stage. I will see our friends at that Court from all north Missi. & rouse them up to an active effort. I entertain no fear of Dick getting the nomination there. The vanity of the little stuffed frog is so inordinate that he would be willing to risque the fate of the party in the Nation to get for himself even a State nomination.

FROM CAVE JOHNSON

Dear Sir,
Washington Dec. 30th 1843

I read two letters today from you. I should have written you before if I could have learned any agreeable intelligence to have written you. It is difficult to learn the various considerations operating upon our distinguished men. I am now regarded here (particularly since the election of Blair & Rives) as a thorough reliable democrat, so much so, that some of the Southerners call me a northern democrat & our leaders talk of course more freely to me than ever. I think there is nothing yet settled as to the Vice-presidency, but suspect there is a good deal of billing & cooing. Buckhanan has withdrawn. Of course King has no prospect on his ticket & is looking with much anxiety to the movement of T. H. B.'s friends in the West & from the considerations I mentioned in my last, I fear with good grounds to hope for success. There has been recently much said as to the position of Ten. & greatly I fear to your injury. They talk of Tennessee, Jackson's State, having hauled down her flag—standing in a position to go on either side—that a new spirit has sprung up among our people since Jackson's day &c &c, and the current now sets strongly toward King. Many indeed speak of your having lost the nomination by it.
I had a long talk with Senator A. on yesterday. He regretted the position of Tenn. & thought it would injure you with Ohio. I explained all that I could & he promised me to send the letter of Cheatham to their convention on the 8th, but I could nothing on either side from him & therefore I suspected him to be agt. us. I saw Senator B—ton, a day or two since & had a good deal of conversation on that & other subjects. He regretted the position of Ten. It injured the State. The Spirit of Jackson was gone & feared it would loose you the nomination & seemed full of wrath that Jacksons State should have taken such a course. I have had several such conversations with him at one of which Senator K. was present & he took much apparent pride in shewing the position of Alabama & contrasting it with that of Ten. I took great pains in shewing, how nearly balanced our State was & the great necessity of caution in our movement, so as to secure harmony, that by going for the nominee we kept down any disensions & mentioned that Senator Anderson from our state had started the movement for Cass & it was supposed that Mr. N—son secretly favored the movement (Foster has stated the fact to be so several times). Senator B—ton said with a good deal of emphasis—Is he not Polk's right hand man? I stated the true condition existing between you & him, which seemed to surprise him. I can learn nothing further from him than the expression of his fears. I have had conversations with S.W.Jr. & several others of NY, who approve the course of Tennessee. They act with great reserve lest Van might be affected. My impression is that they would favor you in preference to any other but think they would like to follow the great body of the Democrats instead of taking the lead. It is probable your fate will be sealed at Columbus on the 8th of Jan'y. I shall write Medary & Medill. I should fear to write Genl. Thompson, who is broke & poor and has been here, wanting, sargeant at arms, door keeper, deputy clerk or anything & we could give him nothing & I fear he thinks hard of me. I saw Brown since I read yours & he will write Medill immediately. I dont exactly know how Brown stands. He speaks very favorably of Cass & seemed inclined to favor him for a while. He seems decided for Van, yet hates Benton and Benton regards him as a Calhoun man.

There is but little doubt I think, that the friends of Calhoun will try & so arrange it, that he be the Vice, with a view to the succession. That cannot be, whatever they may attempt. Lynn Boyd & Steenrod both your friends think the current running strongly agt. you at this time & in favor of King for the reasons I mentioned. I do not yet despair however. Senator K. voted for the old U.S. Bank—that we'll have it brought particularly before the convention. My opinion yet is that the contest will be between you & K. I do not know but that I am acting wrong in stating the conversations with other members, which perhaps they might not expect to be communicated particularly to you & yet I could not without it, give you proper data upon which to form an opinion for yourself. You will see the grounds from which I form my conclusion.

Mark it certain that the Pres. & his influence will go for Clay because we elected Blair & Reeves,\(^\text{15}\) which they effect to consider an endorsement of the Globe slanders of Tyler. There is understood to be secret negotiations on hand for the confirmation of Wise's appointment to France\(^\text{16}\) & the appointment of John Sargeant in the place of Judge Thompson & thus opening the way for Jno Davis—honest John!\(^\text{17}\) It is thought that Spencer or Sargeant will get the place.

I think that we shall have the 21st Rule\(^\text{18}\) repealed & then be flooded with abolition petitions & the annexation of Texas & these with the Tariff will be used now to injure Van if possible. Wise returns from the battle with that view. Dick Davis,\(^\text{19}\) declared in his place today, that he was agt. emancipation in the South by the action of the free States or even the Southern States themselves & if the South voluntarily emancipated he should go for a dissolution of the Union, because the northern states would be flooded with free blacks, paupers, rogues, vagabonds, the laboring people of the north be broke down, ruined by the introduction of pauper labor etc. The proceedings of the Ten. & Arkansas Convention appeared in the Globe\(^\text{20}\) & as far as I can learn Blair seems disposed to do you full justice but I expect he is watching the movements of others here. I expect Col Benton thinks harshly of Woodbury. Why I know not.

I will not fail to give you any information of anything interesting. Nicholson wrote Allen a letter urging your nomination for the Vice presidency as I learned by accident which gave occasion to Allen to make some harsh remarks about our Convention.

C Johnson

[P.S.] I have had more of my old disease\(^\text{21}\) today than I have had for several months. I shall not be surprised, if I am soon laid up.

A Massachusetts lawyer, Davis served as a National Republican in the U.S. House, 1824–32; as governor of Massachusetts, 1833–34 and 1840–41; and as a Whig in the U.S. Senate, 1835–40 and 1845–53. Nicknamed “Honest John,” Davis sought the Whig vice-presidential nomination in 1844, as did John Sergeant. Thompson’s death occasioned a prolonged contest between Tyler and the U.S. Senate. Tyler offered the seat on the Supreme Court to Martin Van Buren, who declined. Tyler then nominated John C. Spencer on January 8, 1844. Ardently opposed by the Clay Whigs, the Senate rejected Spencer’s appointment on January 31, 1844. Subsequently, Tyler offered the appointment to John Sergeant, Horace Binney of Philadelphia, and Silas Wright, Jr., each of whom rejected the offer.
18. Following the precedent of previous Congresses, the House had passed a “gag resolution” on December 4, 1843.

My Dear Sir

Columbia, Saturday night Decr. 30th 1843

I received your letter of yesterday, at noon today. Genl. Pillow is himself unwell, has three sick children, and cannot possibly leave home. This I regret exceedingly. But for the indisposition of himself and his family, he had I think made up his mind to lay down every thing, and go not only to Nashville, but if necessary to Columbus. I would myself go forthwith to Nashville, but have strong impressions that there would be an impropriety in it. Should the step contemplated get into the Whig newspapers, as it is possible it may, it would be attributed to my personal agency, especially if I were at Nashville at this time. I am satisfied too, that I could not promote, the object in view, by going, further than I have done. Yourself and my other confidential friends, are already fully in possession of all my views, and of the importance I attach to the movement. My friends I know are already as zealous in the matter, and as anxious to have it effected as I can be. All that I could do, if I were present, would be to urge it, and this perhaps I have already done, as far as a proper regard for my friends and their convenience would make it proper for me to do. I will write to Turney to night, and inclose my letter under cover to Genl. Armstrong, hoping to meet with a private opportunity to forward, both letters on tomorrow. No mail leaves here for Nashville until Monday. Turney can effect more than any man in the State, unless it be Donaldson.\(^1\) The two I am satisfied could accomplish the object. Cheatham having been twice President of our State Convention is known abroad, and would have great weight. They will both I know, do anything in their power, & will go, if they possibly can.\(^2\) I think it best under all the circumstances, to leave whatever is done to my friends, and shall be perfectly satisfied with whatever they do. Write me at the earliest moment what is done.
December 31 1843

JAMES K. POLK

ALS. DLC–JKP. Addressed to Nashville and marked "confidential."
Laughlin’s AE on the cover states that he answered this letter on January 1, 1844, informing Polk that Hopkins L. Turney and he had visited the Hermitage the previous day to obtain letters from Jackson to Medary, Dawson, and Burke and that he would try to find someone to accompany Turney to Columbus. Published in ETHSP, XVIII, pp. 164–66. A strong Jacksonian, William Burke served as postmaster of Cincinnati from 1832 until 1841.

1. Andrew J. Donelson.

2. Robert Armstrong wrote on January 7, 1844, that Turney did not visit Columbus. On January 9, 1844, Polk wrote Laughlin and supposed that Turney’s decision had been “unavoidable.” Two days later, on January 11, 1844. Laughlin replied that Turney had “declined under the advice of others, his own impressions, and against my urgent advice.” ALsS. DLC–JKP.

FROM WILLIAM H. POLK

Dear Brother

Nashville Dec. 31st 1843

The address of the Democratic Convention has been sent to every portion of the Union according to your direction. Col. Turney has been in the City several days. He is, I believe, entirely willing to go to Ohio. Donelson\textsuperscript{1} says he cannot go. Cheatham\textsuperscript{2} would go, probably, if he had the means. We will get some suitable person to accompany Turney if possible.\textsuperscript{3} Laughlin & Turney went this morning to the Hermitage, to have the proper letters written to the right quarter. Laughlin said they would not leave the old General,\textsuperscript{4} until they obtained their object—got possession of the letters, and mailed them.

Every exertion will be made to carry out your views. I will write you by the next mail, and inform you of the result of his visit.

Tell Mother\textsuperscript{5} my wife\textsuperscript{6} is improving and much better.

\textit{William H. Polk}
