Many in the community have little contact with the legal profession. They lack an understanding and appreciation of the role that society has assigned to the lawyers in helping to keep our legal system and our laws developing in harmony with the ever-increasing tempo of social and economic progress.

It is imperative, therefore, that lawyers, through individual action and through the bar associations, become more articulate in creating a public awareness of what the legal profession is doing to promote the attainment of justice and the extent to which lawyers are contributing to intellectual, political, social, and economic thought in a changing society.

At the College of Law we feel that an integral part of the function of legal education is the instilling in the law student of a sense of obligation to the legal profession and to the community. So, during the past year the faculty has been re-evaluating the content of the law school curriculum. Some basic related courses have been combined: Agency and Partnership; Sales and Security Transactions; and Real and Personal Property. The course in Estate Planning will be offered twice each year.

Several new courses have been added: Social Legislation and Employee Benefits; Accounting for Lawyers; International Law; Trade Regulation; Professional Responsibility; and Introduction to Law. The last two courses complement each other and are required courses for all students. The Introduction to Law will deal with the structure of the courts, the legal profession and its traditions, legal history, growth of law and legal process, and the basic principles of jurisprudence. The course on The Legal Profession will go more deeply into the basic principles of jurisprudence, the place of law in society, ethics, and professional responsibility. In order to tie in formal class room study with ethics-in-action, the class will be divided into small groups which will meet several times with the instructors and outstanding members of the Tennessee Bar for informal discussions concerning the application of the Canons of Ethics in actual practice.

Additional seminar courses are being added: Law and Current Problems; Current Constitutional Law Problems; and Arbitration. All students initially will be required to register for at least one seminar course. When additional seminar courses are added, this requirement will be increased. It is our conviction that more seminar courses will relieve the tedium of the case-method of instruction for third-year students and will stimulate a greater student interest and participation in analysis and problem solving.

For a number of years the College of Law has required 120 quarter hours for graduation. In order to give each student a well-rounded and balanced legal education, the hours required for graduation have been increased to 126 for all students entering in the fall of 1963. This requires an average quarterly load of 14 hours instead of 13⅛ hours.

In order to retain maximum student classroom participation, the first year classes are being sectioned, and the basic second and third year classes are being repeated more frequently since the enrollment has reached its highest mark since the Fall Quarter of 1951. There are 264 students in the Law College this quarter, an increase of 40 over the enrollment of a year ago. Approximately 85% of our students are from Tennessee.

This increase in enrollment has also created problems of space and personnel. The space requirements will be met by a reallocation and more efficient use of the space presently available. In the last two years two staff members have been added to the faculty and one and possibly two more will be added for the next academic year. The new additions to the faculty will supplement the able and experienced faculty we now have and assure the maintenance of our programs for legal education on a high level. We have a loyal and interested student body, highly receptive to the expansion of the curriculum and appreciative of the efforts of the university administration and the law faculty to present a well-balanced and comprehensive legal education at the College of Law.

The College of Law Library has a well selected collection in excess of 60,000 volumes. Acquisitions are at the rate of 2000 volumes per year, but these are not keeping pace with expanding needs.

The cost of books is increasing and state appropriations, generous as they have been, can not alone enable us to meet demands. Three years ago the Library Development Program, under the direction of Dr. John C. Hodges, Co-ordinator, was instituted to stimulate the growth of the University Libraries through gifts. These gifts may be of individual books or sets of books or in cash. The gifts may be memorials, each book bearing a special memorial book-plate. It is sincerely hoped that Alumni and friends of the College of Law will keep this program in mind.

Professional Responsibility
In Criminal Law Administration

To further the quality of the U-T Legal Aid Clinic, Donald T. Weckstein, Associate Professor of Law, coordinating with Professor Miller, the Clinic Director, and with the aid of law students, is researching various aspects of the lawyer's professional responsibilities in the administration of criminal justice.

The project, financed by the National Council on Legal Clinics, includes such topics as the professional responsibility of the attorney towards the criminally accused, the obligation of the attorney to the convicted client regarding the possibilities of parole, probation, and rehabilitation, and the proper relation of the law to the social sciences.

The study will make inquiries with regard to the best ways of providing an indigent client with a defense attorney, whether bail pending trial should be provided and by whom, and the practices and procedure in juvenile courts. Not to ignore the traditional areas of legal ethics, the study will also concern the proper way to defend a client believed to be guilty, and the conflicts between the duty of the attorney as an officer of the court and the right of privileged communication with his client.

After completion of the study, Professor Weckstein hopes to incorporate his findings into a textbook for the Legal Aid Clinic which could be used by students and members of the profession. He believes the book could be used to give proper advice to clients, to aid in the function of policy formulation in the law, to facilitate reformation of some areas of the law, and to assist the attorney in performing his obligations as a professional.

U-T Enters National Moot Court Competition

Thomas Torbett of Kingsport, Rom Meares of Maryville, and Richard Hollow of Knoxville, accompanied by Dr. Forrest Lacey of the U-T College of Law faculty, represented the University of Tennessee College of Law at the Regionals of the National Moot Court Competition held in Atlanta on November 21st and 22nd. The topic for the arguments was "Illegal Search and Seizure."

Other schools participating were Alabama, Cumberland at Howard, Georgia, Mercer, Emory, Vanderbilt, Florida, Miami, Stetson, Memphis State, and Florida A & M. The U-T team drew a bye in the first round and lost to Mercer University Law School in the second round of the competition.

Anatomy Course Offered

The Tennessee Bar Association, in conjunction with the Junior Bar Conference and the University of Tennessee College of Law, has just concluded a series of lectures entitled "Introduction to Anatomy and Trauma for Attorneys." The Knoxville lectures were presented at the U-T Law College on Tuesday evenings during October and November.

Each evening's program was divided into two one-hour sessions. Each session consisted of a lecture given by a local physician well-qualified in the particular specialty.

Uniform Commercial Code Institutes Successful

The series of two-and-a-half day institutes on the Uniform Commercial Code presented at The University of Tennessee College of Law in Knoxville, at Vanderbilt Law School in Nashville, and at Memphis State University Law School have been well-received by the members of the Tennessee Bar Association which is co-sponsoring the programs with the American Bar Association-American Law Institute Joint Committee and the law schools of the state.

Plans are now being formulated for further one-day seminars devoted to different segments of the Code. The first in the series is being scheduled for Chattanooga, and others will follow throughout the state featuring discussions by law faculty members and local practitioners who have specialized in commercial law. The dates and places of these additional seminars will be announced as soon as the plans are final.

Heart Seminars Held

The Junior Bar Conference of the Tennessee Bar Association, the Tennessee Heart Association, and the University of Tennessee College of Law are continuing their statewide presentation of seminars on "Heart Disease and the Law" in a program of legal education for doctors and lawyers featuring discussions, demonstrations, and audio-visual presentations. Seminars have already been held in Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, and Nashville in co-sponsorship with the local bar associations and medical societies.

The next heart seminar will be held at Kingsport on December 10th with the assistance of the Kingsport Bar Association. Tentative arrangements include presentations by leading medical specialists and officials of The Tennessee Heart Association and The Appalachian Heart Chapter, and a question period on the effects of stress on the cardiovascular system.

Gray Appointed Director

Colonel R. McDonald Gray, a retired U.S. Army officer, has been appointed Professor on the College of Law faculty. In addition, he is the Director of the Law Division of the University of Tennessee's new Government-Industry-Law Center.

Colonel Gray, a native of North Carolina, received both his B.S. and LL.B. degrees from the University of North Carolina. He also holds a Master of Arts in International Law from George Washington University and studied at the School of International Law at The Hague, Netherlands, after World War II.

After practicing law in Charlotte, N. C., for several years, Colonel Gray entered the U.S. Army in 1938. He took an active part in the 1947 Conference at Geneva which revised the international rules governing prisoners of war, and in the drafting of the legislation concerning Trieste after World War II. Three times he was awarded the Legion of Merit for distinguished service. Colonel Gray's last assignment for the Army was serving as Staff Judge Advocate and Civil Affairs Officer for the U.S. STRIKE Command at the McDill Air Force Base in Florida. Colonel Gray is a member of the North Carolina State Bar and Phi Beta Kappa.

Bomar at College of Law

Lt. Governor James L. Bomar, Jr., of Shelbyville, recently was a guest of the U-T College of Law faculty and student body. Lt. Governor Bomar addressed the U-T Student Bar Association in the morning and conducted a seminar for the Legal Aid Clinic students in the afternoon.

In his speech before the SBA, Lt. Governor Bomar spoke on the new opportunities available to the young lawyer in the practice of law in rural communities today, resulting from the changing economic scene in Tennessee's rural areas. The Legal Clinic seminar dealt with the lawyer and his practice before both state and federal legislatures.

Law Review Index Progress Announced

The cumulative thirty-volume index to the Tennessee Law Review covering the period 1922-1963 is still in progress with a considerable portion of the work nearing completion. As soon as the price of the Index can be determined, current subscribers including all members of the Tennessee Bar Association and the judiciary will be notified.

The Summer Issue of the Review was the largest ever published. Under the editorship of Lewis H. Hagood of Kingsport, Editor-in-Chief, J. Max Shelton of Knoxville, Comments Editor, and J. Harvey Cameron of Signal Mountain, Casenotes Editor, the Review completed a rewarding year of significant contributions to legal research in Tennessee.

In addition to the Editorial Board, candidates currently contributing to the Review are Lowry Kline of Louden, Wheeler Rosenbalm of Clinton, Robert Hill of Chattanooga, Lauriston Long of Old Hickory, and Jack Irion of Paris, Tennessee.

PDP Captures Title

Roosevelt Inn of Phi Delta Phi made it two in a row as they were again victorious over the PAD's in the Quaffing Bowl, the annual intra-fraternity gridiron classic. The PDP's, led by Bob Echols of Memphis, Jim McGowan of Alcoa, and Arnold Peebles of Columbia, combined a disciplined passing attack with a stalwart defense to achieve a 6-0 victory.

Another highlight of the Fall Quarter was a get-acquainted party for the PDP's and all unaffiliated students at the Knoxville home of John Lambart. Another social gathering for the PDP's, their wives and dates, is scheduled to be held before the end of the Fall Quarter.

Roosevelt Inn has added to its ranks two members and twelve pledges. Those initiated into membership were S. Morris Hadden of Knoxville and Danny Nolan of Nashville. The new pledges are Robert Brawner of Oak Ridge, Ed DeLozier of Maryville, Bill Ernest of Maryville, Tom Helton of Nashville, Ken McCasland, Jr., of Knoxville, Dean Moore of Knoxville, Richard Pritchett of Ward, Ala., Bill Shumate, Jr., of Johnson City, Bernard Smith of McMinnville, Larry Turner of Morristown, Richard Vance of Knoxville, and Richard Waddell of Chattanooga.

The new PDP officers are Ken E. Hall of Lebanon, President; S. Morris Hadden of Knoxville, Vice-President; Dan Nolan of Nashville, Secretary; Richard S. Creekmore of Knoxville, Social Chairman; Gilbert Wade Green, Jr., of Chattanooga, Historian; and Jack Rose of Tazewell, Keeper-of-the-Key.

PAD Continues Luncheon-Speaker Program

McReynolds Chapter of Phi Alpha Delta has continued its weekly luncheon-speaker program this fall. Lowell Blankford, noted WNOX broadcaster and candidate for mayor of Knoxville; Myles Horton; Cas Walker, local businessman and outspoken politician; and Bill Gibbs, assistant U-T basketball coach, have been the leading speakers presented during this quarter.

THE PAD's kicked off the law school social life with a party held at the WNOX Ballroom with all unaffiliated students as guests. PAD has also continued its program of get-acquainted coffees for the benefit of the new students.
