FORMER AMBASSADOR
HOWARD H. BAKER, JR.

The University of Tennessee College of Law is proud to claim as one of its most distinguished alumni Howard H. Baker Jr., former U.S. Senator from Tennessee, White House Chief of Staff during the Reagan administration, and former U.S. Ambassador to Japan.

Senator Baker was born in Huntsville, Tennessee. He served for three years in the U.S. Navy during World War II. Following undergraduate studies at the University of the South and Tulane University, he earned his law degree from the UT College of Law.

After law school, he joined his father, the late U.S. Representative Howard H. Baker, in the law practice founded by his grandfather in 1888. Both Senator Baker’s father and mother served in the U.S. House of Representatives. In 1965, Senator Baker became the first Republican ever elected by popular vote to the U.S. Senate from Tennessee. He subsequently won reelection by wide margins in 1972 and 1978, and concluded his Senate career by serving two terms as Minority Leader and two terms as Majority Leader.

He first won national recognition in 1973 as the vice-chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee. He was the keynote speaker at the Republican National Convention in 1976 and was also a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980. In February 1987, he returned to Washington and served for a year and a half as President Reagan’s Chief of Staff. He resumed his law practice after leaving the White House in 1988. In 1995, his firm merged with Heiskell, Donelson, Bearman & Caldwell, to form Baker, Donelson, Bearman & Caldwell, now the largest law firm in Tennessee and one of the Top 250 law firms in the U.S.

In 2001, President George W. Bush appointed him U.S. Ambassador to Japan. In 2005, he received an honorary doctorate from the University of Tennessee, and the U.S. Senate passed a resolution commending him for a lifetime of distinguished service and an outstanding record of achievement.

Senator Baker is the author of three highly acclaimed books—No Margin for Error, published in 1980; Howard Baker’s Washington, published in 1982; and Big South Fork Country, published in 1993. He is also a widely respected photographer. In 1993 he received the American Society of Photographers’ International Award and was elected to the Photo Marketing Association’s Hall of Fame in 1994.

In honor of Sen. Baker’s accomplishments and longtime support of his alma mater, the main rotunda of the UT College of Law was named the Howard H. Baker Jr. Rotunda. Knoxville and UT are also home to the new Howard H. Baker Jr. Center for Public Policy. The mission of the center is to develop educational programs and promote research to further the public’s knowledge of our system of governance and to highlight the critical importance of public service. The Baker Center hosts a variety of programs on issues of significance to our region and nation and is an exciting new resource for law students at Tennessee who are interested in public policy.

IN MEMORIAM
ART STOLNITZ 1928-2007

The College of Law held a special place in the life of Art Stolnitz, and the feeling is mutual. His career accomplishments were recognized in Variety magazine in March 2007, marking his death at age 79.

Variety is an unusual place to read about the life and death of a Tennessee law graduate, but a lengthy article was required to do justice to his 45-year career in the entertainment industry. Art worked with the legal department of the William Morris Agency, as a literary agent for MCA, and in production and business affairs for several companies, among them Metromedia Producers Corporation and Edgar J. Scherick Productions. His career with Warner Brothers spanned 30 years. At the time of his retirement in 1995, he had reached the position of executive vice president for business affairs with Warner Bros. TV.

The Rochester, New York native earned his law degree from the University of Tennessee in 1952. For more than 50 years, he was devoted to the College of Law and by extension to the University. He was a member of the UT Development Council, the Theater National Advisory Board, and the Chancellor’s Advisory Committee. A professorship and the library in the UT Legal Clinic bear his name.

Those who were fortunate to spend time with Art were fascinated by his career and his life. He regaled staff and faculty with stories about the television series with which he was associated, such as “ER,” “The Dukes of Hazzard,” ” Murphy Brown,” “China Beach,” “The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams,” “Night Court,” and many others. He loved to return to Tennessee to visit the university, attend football games, participate in alumni meetings, and enjoy breakfast at Cracker Barrel.

Art was a true Volunteer. In the last four years of his life, he accompanied admissions representatives to staff student recruitment events in California and in Chicago. He loved to discuss his career and share the advantages of his adopted state of Tennessee with West Coast natives. Tours of Los Angeles and the coast up to Santa Barbara in Art’s convertible were highlights of California visits. Even admissions representatives from other law schools came to enjoy and know Art. His enthusiasm for UT was unflagging; at one event we discreetly asked him to stop encouraging student representatives from the University of Maryland to transfer to Tennessee.

Art and his wife, Suzanne, died within three months of each other. These were truly deaths in the family to those who knew them at Tennessee. At press time, five California residents plan to enroll in the 2007 entering class. Art would be so proud.

This issue of the College of Law Applicant Guide is dedicated to Art Stolnitz in appreciation of his body of work in support of the University of Tennessee and the College of Law.
FROM the DEAN

The University of Tennessee College of Law is a great law school. Choosing the right law school is no simple matter, and I'm pleased that you are considering us. Our students benefit from a dedicated and concerned faculty that excels not only in the classroom but also in the scholarly world of publication and professional service.

Many of our faculty bring to the classroom years of experience working for large and small law firms, the courts, government agencies, and public interest groups. They have much to share with our students—and they do so eagerly, both in and out of class. We have civil and criminal clinical programs in which students actually interview clients, research cases, and argue before the courts. Two innovative centers, one for advocacy and the other for entrepreneurial law, have been created to prepare our graduates for the specific legal challenges they will face in the future, all housed in a beautiful state-of-the-art facility.

The University of Tennessee College of Law has been educating lawyers for more than 100 years. We do it well, but we are constantly seeking better ways to help students graduate as competent, ethical attorneys. Our mission is to train lawyers who possess the skills and knowledge to become leaders in the profession and in their communities—and we take our responsibility very seriously. We have created within the law school community an environment where students, faculty, and staff can engage with mutual respect in lively intellectual interchange. We have deliberately fostered a diverse community committed to fair and humane treatment for all. This is a special place—and a special time in the history of the UT College of Law. If you have questions after reading this Applicant Guide, call the Office of Admissions. Better yet, come and visit the campus. Talk with our students, faculty, and administrators. We have an on-campus Student Host program so you can experience firsthand what the UT College of Law is like day-to-day. Look at us closely. I think you'll like what you see.

John L. Sobieski, Jr.

Professor Sobieski was named interim dean of the UT College of Law in 2006. After clerking for Justice Walter V. Schaefer of the Supreme Court of Illinois and serving as a lieutenant (JAGC) in the United States Navy, Professor Sobieski came to the UT College of Law in 1972. He was named Lindsay Young Distinguished Professor of Law at UT in 1986 and became associate dean for academic affairs in 1995. The winner of many teaching and service awards, Professor Sobieski is co-author of the seven-volume Civil Rights Actions and helped to draft the Tennessee Rules of Appellate Procedure.
The mission of the UT College of Law is to be a preeminent state-supported law school where faculty, staff, and students devoted to teaching, scholarship, and service thrive.

THE TENNESSEE ADVANTAGE

Most sound decisions in life are made after comparing the pros and cons of the available choices. Here are some factors current Tennessee law students cite that you may want to consider about the University of Tennessee College of Law as you weigh your options:

• At the UT College of Law, nationally recognized professors are focused on teaching. In addition to contributing to academia through scholarly works, they are primarily committed to ensuring their students’ readiness— with skills, substance, and ethics—to begin successfully practicing law after graduation.

• With course enrollments averaging 13–15 students, and first-year classes of approximately 50 students, UT offers one of the lowest student-to-faculty ratios of any top-ranked law school. Students enjoy an intimate learning environment with high levels of individual attention, resulting in one of the best legal educations available anywhere.

• The most unexpected surprise of attending law school at UT was to be in an environment that is so exceedingly friendly, open, warm, and helpful. It’s a very supportive environment.

• Diversity is a strength at the UT College of Law. UT students have a reputation of quality, which is enhanced by learning through interactions with fellow students from diverse backgrounds.

• The College of Law features an intellectually stimulating environment with—in addition to regularly scheduled classes, an abundance of exciting speakers, colloquia, symposia, and other events at the law school—many programs and opportunities for hands-on community service.

• The College of Law is housed in a state-of-the-art building that rivals the facilities of even the most heavily endowed private law schools.

• Thanks to the reasonable tuition at UT and the low cost of living in Knoxville, students get a top-rate education without the oppressive financial burdens that have become all too commonplace at other top schools.

• UT has the nation’s oldest continuously operating law school clinical program, providing students with the unique opportunity to “learn by doing.” Other highly acclaimed programs at UT are the concentration in advocacy and dispute resolution and the concentration in business transactions. Both concentrations provide students with practical, applied lawyering skills in addition to exposure to a core of substantive and theoretical legal doctrine.
...a productive, collegial, and engaged faculty and student body...

The Law School Community
The phrase “law school community” refers to a way of thinking, planning, and communicating that emphasizes partnerships among students, faculty, and staff. It is as simple as doing things together. Professor Carol Parker gives upper-division law students experience as teaching assistants in her legal writing classes. Students work with professors as research assistants. Faculty members work with students individually to assist them in projects and activities that spotlight individual interests. The Moot Court Program draws in virtually every faculty member in some way. Faculty members spend countless hours helping students hone their skills so teams may represent the College of Law in interschool competition. Students, faculty, and staff serve together on major committees at the College of Law.

And it’s not all serious. Members of the law school community enjoy having fun together with such activities as town meetings, open forums, ice cream socials, committee meetings over pizza, banquets to honor student achievements, and parties to celebrate the beginning and the end of the year. The College ends each academic year with a celebration featuring an auction to raise money for the Student Bar Association’s student emergency loan fund (See picture below). Each year’s graduating class appoints a development council that plans a class project to leave a lasting gift to the College.

As in any type of community, involvement is the key to success, and plenty of room for involvement exists in the UT College of Law community. Students at the College of Law can choose from a variety of student programs, activities, publications, and organizations to enhance their classroom experience.

Students
The UT College of Law will provide you with a unique environment in which to live and learn. Tennessee has a relatively small law school; entering classes are kept to 150 to 155 students, allowing for a favorable student-to-faculty ratio. The entire student body of the College at any given time is fewer than 500 students.

As a state-supported institution, the College of Law has a primary responsibility to offer adequate opportunities for the study of law to Tennessee residents. Many will have attended undergraduate institutions in other states.

Diversity does not stop with hometowns and undergraduate schools, however. Although many members of the entering class are pursuing a law degree directly from undergraduate school, a good number of law students each year have other advanced degrees and have had careers in fields as diverse as engineering, teaching, journalism, and business.

The 2006–2007 student body reflected the typical gender mix of recent years: 50% male and 50% female. Sixteen percent were students of color.

The College of Law could be considered a well-kept secret. Entering classes are purposefully small, allowing small classes and the interaction with faculty that is possible with a student-to-teacher ratio of 12 students to 1 faculty member.

While first-year sections of 50 students are considered small compared with many law schools, students at Tennessee are even better positioned for personal attention in their second and third classes. Upper-division classes in the fall of 2006 averaged 22 students per class, and several special interest seminars were conducted with one faculty member and five students.

The College of Law could be considered a well-kept secret. Upper-division classes in the spring of 2007 averaged 22 students per class, and several special interest seminars were conducted with one faculty member and five students.
The Academic Program

Doctor of Jurisprudence Degree

The curriculum leading to the Doctor of Jurisprudence (J.D.) degree prepares students for the practice of law. The College of Law curriculum combines training in substantive law, procedure, ethics, and professionalism, with particular emphasis on analysis and reasoning, research, problem solving, writing, planning and drafting, business transactions, advocacy, and dispute resolution.

Basic Facts

The J.D. program is a full-time three-year academic program, although students have as many as five years to complete degree requirements. A new class of 150 to 155 students is admitted in the fall semester only. The College of Law does not offer part-time or evening programs. Eighty-nine semester hours of credit are required for the J.D. degree. A student may not be employed more than 20 hours per week while enrolled as a full-time student. Students are required to abide by all academic policies available on the Internet at www.law.utah.edu.

A typical class load is approximately 30 hours per academic year, accomplished in two semesters. Students may choose to attend summer semester classes.

Getting Started Right

During the first week of fall semester, beginning law students are given the opportunity to meet their classmates, second- and third-year law students, student advisors, and the faculty in several social settings and events sponsored by the law school. In addition, students are provided with essential background information on the study of law in two mini-courses on the Civil Litigation Process and Case Analysis and Briefing. New law students complete their first week by taking their first law school classes in Contracts, Criminal Law, and Torts.

Descriptions of Required Courses

In Contracts I, students begin the study of the basic agreement process and the legal protection afforded contractual relationships. Topics to be covered include the offer and acceptance of the contract, consideration and other bases for enforcing promises, the Statute of Frauds, and unconscionability and other controls on promissory liability. Contracts II emphasizes issues arising after formation of the contract: interpretation, the duty of good faith, conditions, impracticability and frustration of purpose, remedies, third-party beneficiaries, and assignment and delegation. Article 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) is covered with respect to remedies, anticipatory repudiation, impracticability, and good faith.

Civil Procedure I introduces the rules and principles governing procedure in civil litigation. Topics to be covered include the binding effects of judgments, jurisdiction and venue (selecting the proper court), and how to determine applicable law.

Civil Procedure II introduces the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and includes such topics as pleading, joinder of claims and parties, discovery, trials, verdicts, judgments, and appeals.

Legal Process I introduces students to the use of cases and statutes in prediction and persuasion. Students will focus on the analysis and synthesis of common law decisions, statutory interpretations and the fundamentals of legal writing and legal research. In Legal Process II students explore more formal legal writing, appellate procedure, and oral advocacy.

Torts involves liability for injury to individuals. Topics to be covered in Torts I include intentional torts, defenses and privileges related to intentional torts; negligence (including the standard of care, professional malpractice, and liability of owners and occupiers of land); defenses based on the plaintiff’s conduct (including contributory and comparative negligence, assumption of risk, failure to take precautions, and avoidable consequences); causation, proximate cause; duty rules; and questions of both joint and several and several liability. In Torts II, students explore vicarious liability and related concepts; strict liability for dangerous animals and abnormally dangerous activities; products liability; nuisance, defamation, and invasion of privacy; economic torts (including misrepresentation and interference with contract and prospective opportunities); immunities (including those of the government, governmental employees, charities and family members), and damages.

Criminal Law covers the substantive aspects of criminal law, including general principles applicable to all criminal conduct and the specific analysis of particular crimes and defenses to those crimes.

Property introduces students to issues of ownership, possession, and title in the areas of landlord-tenant relations; estates in land and future interests; co-ownership and marital property; real estate sales agreements and conveyances; title assurance and recording statutes; servitudes; and selected aspects of nuisance law, eminent domain, and zoning.

Constitutional Law provides an introduction to the fundamental principles of American constitutional law, including federalism, separation of powers, equal protection of the law, and the constitutional protection of other fundamental individual rights.

Legal Profession involves the study of the legal, professional and ethical standards applicable to lawyers.

Other Requirements

Students must satisfy the following requirements at some time prior to graduation:

- Perspective Course
- Expository Writing
- Planning and Drafting

These requirements may be met through successful completion of any number of elective courses. The requirements reflect the faculty’s conviction that each student should develop both essential lawyering skills and the ability to view law and the legal system in broad perspective.
The first-year course of study is designed to provide students with a solid theoretical and analytical foundation for upper-division elective courses. Since the first-year course work is fundamental to a solid legal education, the curriculum is mandatory. The course of study for the first year is as follows:

Fall Semester Credit Hours
- Civil Procedure I .3
- Contracts I .3
- Criminal Law .3
- Legal Process I .3
- Torts I .3
- TOTAL .15

Spring Semester Credit Hours
- Civil Procedure II .3
- Contracts II .3
- Legal Process II .3
- Property .4
- Torts II .3
- TOTAL .16

The Second Year

Required courses in the second year are:

Fall Semester Credit Hours
- Legal Profession .3

Spring Semester Credit Hours
- Constitutional Law .4

Elective Courses
Second- and third-year students may choose from more than 70 upper-division elective courses. Each of the courses listed below is scheduled for at least one of the next two academic years. However, not all elective courses may be offered during the two years in which electives may be taken. Full course descriptions are available at www.law.utk.edu.

Focusing your Studies:

Concentration in Advocacy and Dispute Resolution

Building on the College of Law’s strong curriculum in lawyering skills and its nationally acclaimed clinical programs, the college provides an opportunity for students who wish to pursue a course of academic study geared toward preparing them for a career in advocacy and dispute resolution. Students who choose this concentration follow the traditional curriculum in the first year, then begin the advocacy curriculum by taking integrated courses in advocacy evidence and trial practice during the first semester of their second year. This integrated instructional method allows students to learn important legal principles and skills in context, by applying the principles of evidence law and the skills involved in trial practice to simulated civil and criminal case files.

Students in the concentration can then choose, based on their interest, among many other courses that emphasize various aspects of advocacy and dispute resolution, including pretrial litigation, negotiation and dispute resolution, interviewing and counseling, advanced trial practice, and advanced appellate advocacy. Students can also elect to take traditional courses that expose them to particular legal areas, such as federal courts, complex litigation, remediation, and investigatory or adjudicatory criminal procedure.

As a final requirement, students must participate in one of several legal clinics. Students who have met the requirements of the concentration are acknowledged as having completed the J.D. degree with a concentration in advocacy and dispute resolution. Students who participate in the concentration in advocacy and dispute resolution concentration benefit from the college’s exceptional facilities—several trial and appellate courtrooms for use in simulation exercises and advanced classroom technology—and its highly respected and experienced full-time and adjunct faculty comprised of members of the bench and the bar. Concentration students also benefit from the work of the University of Tennessee Center for Advocacy and Dispute Resolution, which, through the College of Law curriculum, interdisciplinary and professional programs, and faculty and student scholarship, seeks to improve advocacy and dispute resolution skills and thus to enhance justice.

Concentration in Business Transactions

Since a high proportion of legal work, both in Tennessee and across the nation, occurs in the representation of businesses, the business transactions curriculum allows second- and third-year students to concentrate their studies on the legal aspects of business and finance, emphasizing the needs of business concerns both large and small. The concentration in business transactions provides a strong base from which to begin a career in business law, whether as a litigator or a transactional lawyer.

Many of our faculty members have practiced with transactional practice groups in prestigious law firms, and they are uniquely qualified to mold a curriculum that will give students practical experience in business law. In part, the concentration in business transactions was created to take advantage of these real-world experiences. The concentration is part of the college’s Clayton Center for Entrepreneurial Law.

Following this course of study helps students develop competence in the kinds of transactional matters lawyers handle or litigate daily, such as planning and carrying out business transactions, drafting and negotiating documents, counseling clients about compliance with laws and regulations, and pursuing commercial litigation claims. The curriculum provides a rich educational opportunity for students who choose to prepare for practice in this field. Skills and simulation courses in business transactions, contract drafting, and representing enterprises complement additional required courses like fundamental concepts of income taxation, taxation of business organizations, land finance law, and commercial law. Students who have met the requirement of this concentration and the other requirements of the College will be acknowledged as having completed the J.D. degree with a concentration in business transactions.

Richard White, '07

Weil, Gotshal & Manges, LLP, Dallas
B.S., MAcc, The University of Tennessee

Richard came to the College of Law after working as a financial analyst and accountant with ExxonMobil Corporation in Houston.

"What stands out about the UT College of Law curriculum is its pragmatism and applicability to real-world situations. The most valuable aspect of my legal education at UT was the accessibility of the business faculty. I had multiple opportunities to enroll in independent studies with professors who had been in private practice for over a decade. These individualized learning experiences provided substantial practical experience and skills that I have been able to apply in my corporate practice."

"The Clayton Center for Entrepreneurial Law hosts visiting professors from firms throughout the country. Classes are specifically tailored to important areas of corporate and business practice. I had the opportunity to learn the nuts and bolts of bankruptcy practice from a partner of one of the largest firms in the United States. This learning experience would be impossible to replicate because of the sheer cost of such an individual’s time."

...developing a national reputation for excellence in advocacy...
Ali Safavi had never even visited Tennessee before he applied for admission to the College of Law. A visit to Knoxville gave him the assurance he needed to enroll. Before joining the Walt Disney Company in 2005, Ali worked with Procter & Gamble, where he launched P&G's first automotive product. P&G achieved over 200% return on investment. This initiative was cited as a gold standard in the company's commercial innovation strategy. In 2004 Ali led P&G's most successful product launch with Febreze Air Effects. At the Walt Disney Company, Ali manages the company's global animation business, focusing on new feature animation, the Gold Catalog, and the Pixar brands. Overseeing Disney business in Asia, Europe, and Latin America on titles such as Chicken Little, Cars, Toy Story, Cinderella, Finding Nemo, Monsters Inc, Mulan, Pocahontas, Lilo & Stitch, and Aladdin, is a challenge he relishes. Ali welcomes the responsibility for a substantial percentage of the profit and loss in a major division of Disney. He affirms the role UT played in preparing him for success in corporate America: "UT's JD. I.MBA Program was indispensable in allowing me to achieve early wins in corporate America and has positioned me well for continued professional success. Specifically, the program rounded out my skill set by giving me breadth and depth of experience in over 30 cross-functional disciplines; prepared me for anticipating and finding actionable solutions to real-world business issues; enabled me to have access to the world's most impressive scholars, students, faculty, staff, and industry professionals; and crystallized my vision to become a Fortune 500 CEO."

The University of Tennessee has approved dual degree programs in

- law and business
- law and public administration

J.D./MBA Program
The College of Business Administration and the College of Law offer a credit-sharing program leading to the conferral of both the Doctor of Jurisprudence and the Master of Business Administration degrees. Applicants for the dual degree program must make separate application to and must be competitively and independently accepted by the College of Law for the J.D. degree and by the Graduate School and the College of Business Administration for the MBA program. The UT MBA degree focuses on essential skills for the business manager of the future, regardless of the functional area of emphasis, by integrating the management of information, relationships, supply chains, and resources. The MBA program has received numerous accolades, including No. 1 for "Value for Money" in the United States in the Financial Times 2004 Business School rankings, tenth for supply chain/logistics in MBA programs by U.S. News & World Report for 2006, and fourth among southern universities in The Wall Street Journal 2005 Business School rankings.

For more information about the UT MBA program, go to mba.utk.edu.

J.D./M.P.A. Program
The College of Law and the College of Arts and Sciences Department of Political Science offer a coordinated program leading to the conferral of both the Master of Public Administration and the Doctor of Jurisprudence degrees. A student enrolled in the dual degree program can complete both degrees in about four years rather than the five years that would otherwise be required. Students in the dual degree program should plan to be enrolled in course work or an internship for one summer term in addition to taking normal course loads for four academic years.

The M.P.A. is a professional degree program designed to prepare men and women to assume responsible positions in the public service through a program of study that integrates the theory and practice of public administration. The M.P.A. curriculum at the University of Tennessee aspires to produce graduates who are literate in the field of public administration, have the skills to be effective managers of organizational resources, and possess the analytical abilities to be creative problem-solvers.

Applicants for the dual degree program must make separate application to and must be competitively and independently accepted by the College of Law, the Graduate School for the M.P.A. degree, and the Dual Degree Committee. All applicants must submit an LSAT score, which may be substituted for the GRE score normally required for admission to the M.P.A. degree. Candidates must satisfy the graduation requirements of both programs as well as the requirements for the dual degree program.

For more information about the M.P.A. program, go to web.utk.edu/~polisci.
LEARNING by DOING: The CLINICAL PROGRAMS

The Legal Clinics
For more than half a century, the College of Law’s legal clinics have provided law students with opportunities to learn by doing—representing clients and helping resolve legal disputes. Our legal clinics celebrate their 60th anniversary in 2007. Our clinics is the longest continuously operating for-credit clinic in the country and remains one of the most successful programs of its kind. U.S. News & World Reports ranked our clinical program 17th nationally among the more than 180 clinical programs considered.

The Advocacy Clinic
The faculty of the Advocacy Clinic expose students through direct experience to the formation and development of the attorney-client relationship and accompanying professional obligations as they begin to develop their professional skills. The Advocacy Clinic functions much as a real law firm does. Third-year students work with faculty members on several different types of cases, including criminal, housing, juvenile, and unemployment matters. The entire “firm” meets weekly to discuss cases, tactics, and strategy. Students develop skills in fact investigation, negotiation, case development, interviewing witnesses, drafting and arguing motions, and presentation of evidence. Students also learn to work holistically with clients and to think outside the legal box. Students begin to develop professional judgment and the skills necessary for effective client representation. All cases handled by students are real cases with real consequences.

The Business Clinic
In the Business Clinic, students and faculty represent for-profit and nonprofit organizations in the Knoxville area. Students provide valuable service to the community, and at the same time develop skills in interviewing, client counseling, document drafting, business planning, and the in and outs of a business practice.

Business Clinic students counsel small start-up businesses on choosing a legal entity, forming corporations and LLCs, and other aspects of creating successful businesses. Students also represent community groups in forming nonprofit corporations and obtaining tax-exempt status.

The Mediation Clinic
Mediation is a process by which a neutral attorney helps clients resolve their differences by agreement. The Mediation Clinic provides law students with opportunities to learn by serving—mediating actual disputes instead of acting as advocates. Students enrolled in the clinic receive intensive training in mediation techniques from a supervising faculty member, then work in pairs to mediate civil and criminal cases in Knox County General Sessions Court and in such agencies as the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Externships
Students can also take advantage of three externships—judicial, prosecutorial, and public defender. In the prosecutorial externship, students are placed in the Office of the Knox County District Attorney General. Working under the supervision of experienced assistant attorneys general, students prosecute real cases on behalf of the state handling all phases of the criminal process, including case development and investigation, preliminary hearings, plea negotiations, and trial.

In the public defender externship, students are placed in the Knox County Public Defender’s Office, working under experienced public defenders and regularly appearing in court to represent clients in all aspects of their cases, including trials.

In the judicial externship, law students work as clerks for state and federal judges, assisting in all aspects of the judge’s work and learning invaluable lessons.

Each of the externships also includes a classroom component with supervising law faculty.

Graduates of the University of Tennessee are among the new generation of leaders in law firms and corporations. Among these leaders is Robert O. Link Jr., chairman and managing partner of one of the oldest and most respected law firms in the United States—Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft LLP. With 600 attorneys in five offices around the world, Cadwalader has long held a position of prominence among law firms, representing the world's premier financial institutions as well as leading corporations, government entities, charitable and healthcare organizations, and individual private clients. Cadwalader's ability to adapt to an ever-changing marketplace is one reason that the firm continues to survive and thrive after more than 210 years.

Mr. Link received a B.S. in Accounting with highest honors from the University of Tennessee and went on to earn his M.B.A./J.D. degrees at UT. He was named to the Order of the Coif at the College of Law and was a multiple recipient of the American Jurisprudence awards. He is admitted to practice in Tennessee, Georgia, and New York.

Mr. Link joined Cadwalader in 1987, becoming a partner in 1990. In addition to his responsibilities as chairman of the firm, a role he assumed in 1994, he is chairman of the firm's acclaimed Capital Markets Department, a group that has played a pivotal role in the development of the structured finance and securitization markets since their inception. Under his stewardship, Cadwalader has successfully redefined itself as a global finance law firm that focuses on high-value sophisticated transactional, litigation, and regulatory needs of the world's leading firms and corporations. Under his stewardship, Cadwalader has successfully redefined itself as a global finance law firm that focuses on high-value sophisticated transactional, litigation, and regulatory needs of the world's leading financial institutions. The firm has posted record profits each year since 1994, added numerous internationally recognized attorneys who are leaders in their fields, consistently achieved recognition as a leader in corporate finance transactions, and expanded around the globe.

A member of the New York State Bar Association, the Mortgage Bankers Association, and the NYC 2012 Olympic Legal Advisory Committee, Mr. Link also sits on the board of Wall Street Rising, an organization formed in the aftermath of the events of 9/11 to revitalize the Wall Street Financial District, and on the advisory council to the dean of the College of Business Administration at the University of Tennessee.

Mr. Link is quick to credit the University of Tennessee for giving him a solid background in both business and law: "My experiences at UT truly served as the foundation for a fascinating career, providing me with not only the substantive knowledge I needed to succeed but also the professional skills that helped me achieve my potential."
As if being a legal advisor for a well-respected U.S. Senator wasn't enough, Bridget Lipscomb—now a litigator for the Department of Justice, Civil Division—uses her law degree from the UT College of Law to defend the United States. In the 13 years since she graduated from law school, Lipscomb has utilized her talents both as a partner in a private law firm and as legislative counsel for Senator Lamar Alexander in Washington, D.C.

Originally from Chicago, Lipscomb obtained degrees in history and public administration from Grambling State University before receiving her law degree from UT in 1994.

"While I was in law school, I knew I wanted to be a litigator. The UT College of Law, my experiences with the Legal Clinic and trial practice courses, and my time on the National Trial Team thoroughly prepared me to litigate effectively in every legal arena," says Lipscomb.

After spending time as a partner at Lewis, King, Krieg & Waldrop in Knoxville, Lipscomb was granted an opportunity to tackle legal issues on the other side of the law. "Working with Senator Alexander as legislative counsel was such an intriguing experience for me," she notes. "I went from utilizing the law to helping create laws. In private practice, you look for statutes that will help your case; in working with legislation, you help to create those statutes and laws."

Whether representing Tennessee or the entire country, Lipscomb is sure of one thing: "My legal education from the UT College of Law has given me the joy to help others in a manner that I wouldn't have been able to otherwise."

Pictured here in Rome, Katie and Gino Marchetti, daughter and father, have many things in common, including the fact that they're both UT College of Law grads. With Katie residing and practicing law in London and Gino practicing in Nashville, both enjoy the international and domestic aspects of their careers. Gino will soon assume the role of president of the International Association of Defense Counsel, a position to which he was elected at the IADC Annual Meeting in Rome in 2006.

Upon graduation from UT College of Law, Katie went on to complete an LL.M. at King's College, London, focusing on international finance law. She has since been practicing international corporate and transactional law in London with Herbert Smith, an international firm with over 2,000 attorneys throughout Europe and Asia.

"I can honestly say I would not have pursued my LL.M. and employment in London without the encouragement of Professor Becky Jacobs, who had chosen an international legal career herself. Becky treated this career route as the most natural in the world and inspired me to do the same. I now find myself in meetings in Amsterdam, London, or Paris, never thinking twice about the fact that I am the only American or native English speaker in the room. I do not think I would be in such an environment without the guidance of Professor Jacobs."

As the managing member of Taylor, Pigue, Marchetti & Mink, PLLC, Gino specializes in commercial and business litigation and corporate representation. He has been an active member of the IADC since 1990 and has participated in numerous presentations and seminars around the world. Gino also represents a number of not-for-profit organizations and has served as general counsel to the Roman Catholic Diocese of Nashville since 1988. He also serves on the board of the DRI, the LCJ, the ABOTA Roundtable, and other organizations.

"I was never so proud as when Katie received her degree from the UT College of Law. Our respective times at UT formed the foundation for any success we have enjoyed in our careers. My office with the IADC has shown what an excellent reputation the UT College of Law has in the international community."
Joel Katz embodies one of the University of Tennessee College of Law’s greatest success stories. Katz, a former Chair of the American Bar Association’s Entertainment and Sports Law Section, is widely recognized as a leader in the field of entertainment law. Katz has been named to numerous “best lawyer” lists in America.

A native of the Bronx in New York City, Katz came to Knoxville in the fall of 1966, enrolling at the UT College of Law after earning an undergraduate degree from Hunter College. Katz recalls having just $150 in his pocket when he arrived, but he proceeded to spend “the three best years of my life.”

After receiving his J.D. degree in 1969, Katz worked as an HUD attorney in Atlanta, then became a clerk for a major Atlanta law firm. In 1971 Katz started a private practice in Atlanta. Shortly after opening the firm of Katz, Smith & Cohen, he received a call from a former student who had a friend needing legal help. The student’s friend was recording artist James Brown. After successfully representing Brown, Katz steadily expanded his practice in the music entertainment field. Today, Katz is one of the nation’s leading music entertainment attorneys. His clients represent a “who’s who” of the music business: James Brown, Toni Braxton, Jimmy Buffet, Kris Kristofferson, George Strait, and Willie Nelson, and many of the world’s best-known television and motion-picture producers, record labels, concert promoters, booking and talent agencies, actors, and authors. In 2003 Katz was honored with the UJA-Federation of New York’s Spirit of Music Award.

In 1998, Katz, Smith & Cohen merged with the international firm of Greenberg Traurig. Katz now heads the firm’s Atlanta office. Katz credits much of his success to his alma mater. “I had a wonderful time in law school and met some wonderful people,” he said. “I’ve watched the UT College of Law grow into one of the finest law schools in the country.”

Over the years, Katz has established a generous student scholarship at the College of Law and has funded a $1,000,000 endowed professorship, the Joel A. Katz Distinguished Professor of Law. In honor of his long tenure and distinguished career, the Law Library was named the Joel A. Katz Law Library in 1999. Katz continues to be a loyal contributor to the college and was one of the driving forces behind the establishment of the Joel A. Katz-SunTrust Lecture Series in 2005.

The excellent legal resource materials in the Joel A. Katz Law Library are available to students, faculty members, practicing attorneys, and judges. The law library contains the official court reporters, session laws, and codes of all states and of the federal system. The collection includes the complete National Reporter System (which covers all reported state and federal decisions), the Annotated Reports, standard sets of miscellaneous reports, and English-language legal periodicals. In addition, there are encyclopedias, digests, dictionaries, standard treatises, and current loose-leaf services, totaling more than 571,000 volumes and microform volume equivalents. Moreover, the law library is a selective depository for federal documents. Law students also have use of the university’s John C. Hodges Main Library, located only a few blocks away.

The University of Tennessee has one of the largest “wireless” campus networks in the world. More than 100 university buildings are covered by an 802.11B network with approximately 1,300 access points currently deployed. Even faster connections will be available as conversion to an 802.11G network is completed. Wireless network access is available in the entire College of Law building—all offices, classrooms, the library, and common areas. The Joel A. Katz Law Library contains two computer laboratories, through which the library is able to offer UT law students the newest software tools to assist them in their learning process and in perfecting their legal drafting skills. The computers in these labs also allow students to access the WESTLAW and LEXIS legal database services. The library also provides access to the WilsonLine Index to Legal Periodicals and the LegalTrac Current Law Index as well as a host of subject specific databases. Access to the collections of the law library is provided through an online catalog.
The quality of an institution of higher learning can best be evaluated by the quality of its faculty. As you choose a law school, consider the multidimensional roles that faculty play in influencing the quality of the education you will receive. The faculty is an interesting mix of personalities and experiences. UT has professors who have spent most of their careers teaching and engaging in the kinds of scholarly research that characterize a distinguished law faculty. Many faculty members have come from notable careers in private practice, government, or corporate law. Throughout this section of the Applicant Guide, you will see College of Law faculty members identified as Points of Pride, highlighting just a few illustrations of the faculty's commitment in teaching, in service, and in scholarship.

IN TEACHING—in the classroom, in the hallways, after class, and in their offices. The teaching and learning experience does not stop after a professor's notebook is closed for the day. The College of Law is fortunate to have a group of professors who are not only knowledgeable and experienced practitioners but also effective, caring teachers who make themselves available outside the classroom.

IN SERVICE. A commitment to service—to the profession, the University, and the community keeps our faculty in contact with legal problems and issues that reach far beyond the College of Law.

IN SCHOLARSHIP. It is impressive to take a course under a law professor who has—literally—written the book. As you read the faculty biographies that follow, you will see that the UT College of Law has several professors who hold the distinction of authorship of legal texts, casebooks, and treatises.

Dwight L. Aarons
Associate Professor of Law

B.A. and J.D., University of California, Los Angeles

Professor Dwight Aarons spends much of his scholarly activity exploring issues related to the death penalty. He has had numerous law review articles published dealing with the circumstances and legal issues surrounding the long-delayed execution of capital defendants. One of his most recent works, Reflections on the Killing State: A Cultural Study of the Death Penalty in the Twentieth Century, examines the impact of the death penalty on U.S. culture, law and politics. Professor Aarons is also active in national organizations such as the American Bar Association Death Penalty Moratorium Implementation Project. At the College of Law he has coached several Frederick Douglass Moot Court teams and served as faculty advisor to the Black Law Students Association. In 2005 he was honored by the UT Chancellor and the Faculty Senate Teaching Council for his Excellence in Teaching.

Professor Aarons teaches Criminal Law, Civil Procedure, Death Penalty, and Legislation.

Gary L. Anderson
Associate Professor of Law

S.B., Iowa State University
J.D., State University of Iowa
LL.M., Harvard University

Professor Anderson serves on the faculty of the UT Legal Clinic. Before coming to UT in 1973, he was a practicing attorney and county attorney in Iowa. Professor Anderson was also a teaching fellow at Harvard University and a member of the faculty at the University of Missouri. He was honored with the 1994 Lionel R. Barrett, Jr. Award from the Tennessee Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers for his work with the Indigent Defense Funding Crisis Group. Professor Anderson received the Bass, Berry & Sims Award for Outstanding Service to the Bench and Bar. He served as reporter for the Tennessee Indigent Defense Commission from 1995 to 1998.

Professor Anderson teaches Advocacy, Criminal Procedure, Evidence, and Trial Practice.

Reba A. Best
Professor and Head of Cataloging

B.S., East Carolina University
M.L.S., Florida State University

Professor Best came to UT in 1979 and established the Law Library's Cataloging Department. During her tenure, the library's extensive collection has become more accessible through the use of consistent cataloging practices and standards and the transition to a Web-based online catalog. In addition to providing description and access to the library's physical holdings, she is now moving the online catalog towards being a "portal" to information sources (fee-based and free) available on the Web. Professor Best has served the library, the college, and the university through her service on numerous committees, as a law school representative to the faculty senate, and as a mentor to untenured faculty. She was a recipient in 1997 of the College of Law's Carden Award for Outstanding Service and in 1999 of the UTK Employee Team Excellence Award for Promoting the Spirit of Teamwork. She is currently the membership vice-president of the Knoxville branch of the American Association of University Women and also serves as the organization's Webmaster.

Robert C. Blitt
Associate Professor of Law

B.A., McGill University
M.A., University of Toronto
J.D., University of Toronto
LL.M., University of Toronto

Professor Blitt joined the faculty as an associate professor in 2007. He came to Tennessee from Washington, DC, where he served as international law specialist for the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF), an independent, bi-partisan agency created by Congress to monitor the status of freedom of thought, conscience, and religion or belief abroad. Prior to joining the commission, Professor Blitt spent over five years in the
Thomas Y. Davies

Professor Davies's special areas of expertise are the investigatory phase of criminal procedure, especially search and seizure law and the related exclusionary rule, and the history of criminal procedure. His research on the effects of the exclusionary rule has been discussed in several U.S. Supreme Court opinions as well as a number of state supreme court opinions. He has appeared as counsel in two Supreme Court search cases and has also been a witness before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee on proposed legislation relating to exclusion. His recent research deals with recovering the authentic historical meaning of the provisions of the Bill of Rights that regulate criminal procedure. To date, Professor Davies has published research on the original meaning of the Fourth Amendment, the right against self-incrimination in the Fifth Amendment, and the right of confrontation in the Sixth Amendment, as well as framing-era arrest law. He is currently completing research on the original understanding of "due process of law." Articles by Professor Davies have been published in the American Bar Foundation Research Journal, the Brooklyn Law Review, the Justice System Journal, the Michigan Law Review, the Ohio State Journal of Criminal Law, the Wake Forest Law Review, and the Tennessee Law Review.

Before joining the UT faculty in 1986, Professor Davies practiced law as a corporate litigator in the Stare Journal of Criminal Law, and directed projects at Physicians for Human Rights (Israel). In 2002, Professor Davies was a Rabbin Fellow for Peace and Tolerance at the Hebrew University. Among his writings, Professor Davies produced a detailed human rights analysis of Iraq's 2005 Constitution, and numerous articles including "The Religion-State Relationship and the Right to Freedom of Religion or Belief: A Comparative Textual Analysis of the Constitutions of Predominantly Muslim Countries," and "Who Will Watch the Watchdogs: The Case for Regulating International Human Rights Nongovernmental Organizations."

Professor Blitt's current research areas include exploring the role of nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) in promoting international human rights norms and questions related to NGO regulation, including Russia's new NGO law.

Professor Blitt teaches International Law, Human Rights, and Comparative Constitutional Law.

Carol Morgan Collins
Catalog Librarian and Assistant Professor
B.A. and M.S.I.S., University of Virginia at Wise

Professor Collins joined the Law Library faculty in 2001 after serving as Reference/Systems Librarian at the Washington County Public Library System in Abingdon, Virginia. During this time, in addition to providing reference services, Professor Collins was introduced to the Innovative Interfaces System and was instrumental in setting system parameters for all modules and supervising a major re-cataloging project for the county library system. She received an M.S. in Information Science from the University of Tennessee in 1996. Currently, her primary responsibilities include selecting and implementing appropriate levels of descriptive cataloging, classification, and subject analysis to provide access to the intellectual content within the materials held by the UT Law Library.

Joseph G. Cook
Williford Gragg Distinguished Professor of Law
B.A. and J.D., University of Alabama

Professor Joseph G. Cook was named Macebearer, the highest award the University of Tennessee bestows upon a faculty member, for the 2004-2005 academic year. The award is symbolic of the faculty's commitment to teaching, scholarship, and service. Professor Cook is the senior member of the UT College of Law faculty, having joined the faculty in 1965 shortly after receiving the LL.M. degree from Yale University. He was named Williford Gragg Distinguished Professor in 1979 and served as associate dean for academic affairs during 1991-92. Professor Cook is the author or co-author of three multi-volume treatises, Constitutional Rights of the Accused, Civil Rights Actions, and Casebooks in Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure. During the summers of 2000 and 2001 Professor Cook taught in England as a faculty member with the Cambridge Summer Abroad Program. He has received the L.R. Hesler Award for Excellence in Teaching and Service, the Carden Award for Outstanding Scholarship, the Harold C. Warner Outstanding Teacher Award (twice), the Forrest W. Lacey Award (twice), and the UT Alumni Outstanding Teacher Award. Professor Cook is a trustee of the Tennessee Justice Foundation.

Professor Cook teaches Constitutional Law, Contracts, Criminal Procedure, and Jurisprudence.

Judy M. Cornett
Associate Professor of Law
B.A. and J.D., The University of Tennessee

Professor Cornett combines her legal knowledge with her love of English literature. After receiving the J.D. degree from UT in 1982, Professor Cornett was an adjunct member of the UT law faculty. Now a full-time faculty member, Professor Cornett earned master's and Ph.D. degrees in 18th-century British law and literature from the University of Virginia. She has been published in the William & Mary Journal of Women and the Law, and the Tennessee and Cincinnati law reviews and is a member of the Modern Language Association, the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies.
and the American Society for Legal History. She served on the Tennessee Supreme Court Commission on Gender Fairness and as co-chair of the Tennessee Supreme Court Committee to Implement the Recommendations of the Racial and Ethnic Fairness Commission and the Gender Fairness Commission.

Professor Hirsch joined the UT law faculty in August 2004 after working for four years in the Appellate Court Branch of the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D.C. He received a J.D. degree from New York University in 1998 and, following graduation, was a judicial clerk for the Honorable Haldane R. Mayer on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit and the Honorable Robert R. Beezer on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. While in law school, Professor Hirsch received the ABA/BNA Prize for excellence in labor and employment law and the Seymour M. Goldstein Prize for academic excellence in labor relations. His scholarly work has been published in the Seton Hall Law Review, the Fordham Law Review, the Boston College Law Review, and the New York University Environmental Law Journal.

Professor Hirsch teaches Federal Courts, Labor Law, Employment Law, and Employment Discrimination.

Associate Professor of Law
B.S, Florida Institute of Technology
J.D., University of Georgia
Becky L. Jacobs brought more than a decade of national and international experience in the corporate world when she joined the College of Law faculty in 2002. Professor Jacobs came to UT from Duke Energy International’s Sao Paulo, Brazil office, where she worked as an Assistant General Counsel. Early in her career, she clerked for the Honorable Pasco M. Bowman on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit. She then practiced with the law firms of Gibson, Dunn and Crutcher and Shook, Hardy & Bacon, spending time in the London offices of both firms.

Professor Heminway brought nearly 15 years of corporate practice experience when she joined the faculty in 2000. As an attorney in the Boston office of Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP from 1985 through 2000, she worked in the areas of public offerings, private placements, mergers, acquisitions, dispositions, and restructurings. She has served as an expert witness and consultant on corporate finance and federal and state securities law matters and is a frequent continuing legal education presenter on business law issues. Professor Heminway has also represented clients pro bono on political asylum applications, landlord/tenant appeals, social security/disability cases, not-for-profit incorporations, and related corporate law issues. She was honored in 2003 by UT Pro Bono for her work with its Animal Law Project and was recognized on four occasions for her pro bono work with the Political Asylum/Immigration Representation Project in Boston. She is a member of the American Law Institute, a Research Fellow of the Center for Corporate Governance, a multi-disciplinary research center at UT, and has been a cameo lecturer in the UT Executive MBA Program. Her methods and tips for teaching Business Associations are featured in Teaching the Law School Curriculum (Carolina Academic Press, 2004). Professor Heminway was a visiting professor at the Boston College Law School during its fall 2005 semester and at Vanderbilt University Law School for a short course in spring 2007.
She also worked as an in house lawyer for CNG Transmission and Conoco. Professor Jacobs has extensive experience with international transactions and has practiced in the areas of environmental, energy, and administrative/regulatory law. The top graduate in her law class at the University of Georgia, Professor Jacobs was named to the Order of the Coif and was symposium editor of the Georgia Law Review.

Professor Jacobs teaches Legal Process I, International Business Transactions, Alternative Dispute Resolution, Mediation Clinic, and Natural Resources and Environmental Law.

Ut College of Law Among Top Law Schools on Social Science Research Network

The University of Tennessee College of Law is currently ranked first among law schools in the nation in the number of readers per scholarly article posted on the Social Science Research Network. The college's overall scholarly impact ranking, calculated by how often scholarly articles posted by its faculty are downloaded and read, is 32nd of nearly 200 U.S. law schools.

"This is particularly impressive," says Interim Dean John Sobieski, "because only about a third of our faculty is participating in the SSRN service. We expect to continue to improve as other faculty members join the nationwide trend of putting scholarship online."

While scholarly productivity is only one indicator of a law school's quality, the ranking reflects the faculty's overall commitment to excellence.

The Social Science Research Network, online at www.SSRN.com, is an international consortium featuring scholarship in the fields of law, economics, and social sciences. Sponsors include Stanford Law School, the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business, and the European Corporate Governance Institute.

Professor Stein joined the UT faculty in 1990 after practicing law in New York. His practice experience covered various aspects of real estate finance and development and land use, and he currently teaches courses in these areas. His recent scholarship in these fields has been published in the Ohio State, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Washington, and Washington & Lee law journals. He also is the co-author of a book that helps attorneys develop their expertise in commercial real estate law.

Professor Stein is co-chair of the Legal Education Committee of the ABA Section of Real Property, Probate and Trust Law, a member of the ABA Property Preservation Task Force, and has served on the executive advisory board of the Real Property, Probate and Trust Journal. He regularly speaks on various aspects of real estate law.

Professor Stein received the Provost's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2003, the Harold C. Warner Outstanding Teacher Award in 1992 and 2001, and the Carden Award for Outstanding Achievement in Scholarship in 2001. He served as the Visiting Fulbright Professor of Law at Shanghai Jiao Tong University, Shanghai, People's Republic of China, during the spring semester of 2003, and returned to Shanghai as a Fulbright Senior Specialist during the summer of 2005.
Professor Penny J. White served as faculty council chair of the National Judicial College during 2005-2006. White, a former Tennessee Supreme Court justice and member of the College of Law faculty since 2000, has been a member of the NJC faculty for 12 years, teaching more than 40 courses for judges on the subjects of evidence, criminal procedure and judicial ethics. She has served on the faculty council for five years and is nearing the end of her second three-year term. The National Judicial College provides judicial education and professional development for the U.S. judiciary as well as for judges from other countries. The council is made up of nine NJC faculty members from across the nation and represents the interests of the volunteer faculty of the National Judicial College.

Before joining the UT College of Law faculty in 2000, Professor White had served as a judge at every level of the Tennessee state court system. As the youngest member of the Tennessee Supreme Court, Professor White participated in several decisions that have impacted Tennessee law, including decisions involving class actions, rights of tort victims, and capital punishment. Since leaving the bench, Professor White has authored benchbooks for Tennessee circuit, general sessions, and municipal court judges; she has taught judicial education programs in 35 states; and she has spoken and written frequently on the topic of judicial independence.

A member of the faculty since 1999, Professor Paulette Williams was instrumental in the creation of the Business Law Clinic at the college in 2002. In the clinic, third-year students practice business and transactional law while representing start-up businesses, nonprofit community groups, and individuals with transactional legal issues. The development and growth of the clinic has further expanded UT's nationally ranked clinical programs, which already included advocacy and mediation clinics. Before coming to UT, Professor Williams taught for one year as a visitor at the Cornell University Law School in its Legal Aid Clinic, and for many years she was a legal aid lawyer in New York City. In addition to developing the business law clinic, she pursues her interests in the subjects of wealth and poverty, clinical legal education, and domestic violence in the law school curriculum through her scholarship and her participation in a variety of professional development activities.

A Chattanooga native, Sonya accepted employment with Miller and Martin after working as a summer associate in 2005 and 2006. As a law student she was a member of the 2005-2006 Frederick Douglass Moot Court Team and the Academic Standards Committee, and she served as coordinator for the 2006 Julian Blackshear Scholarship Banquet.

"The University of Tennessee invested in my legal education and provided teachers who enjoy watching their students learn how to analyze the law."

After graduating from the UT College of Law, Adomitis clerked for the Hon. Harry Wellford in the United States District Court (Western District, Tennessee) and for the Hon. Bailey Brown at the United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. After completing those clerkships, he entered private practice in Memphis with the firm of Wildman, Harrod, Allen, Dixon & McDonnell (now Wyatt, Tarrant & Combs).

Adomitis joined the Bridgestone Group of companies in 1988 and has served in a number of positions across several areas. His first position was assistant general counsel for the former Bridgestone USA in Nashville. In 1991, Adomitis was named general counsel of the group’s Dayton Tire Company in Oklahoma City. During this time, Adomitis became very involved in his community, working for the Oklahoma City Literacy Center and for Junior Achievement as a teacher and board member. Adomitis was elected in 1996 to the Junior Achievement Hall of Fame for Oklahoma City.

In 1997, Adomitis moved to the group’s U.S. retail division as assistant general counsel. By 1998, Adomitis relocated once again to Nashville where he served as divisional general counsel for what is now Bridgestone Americas. In this role, he began traveling to post-war Liberia to help restart the company’s rubber operations there. In 2004, Adomitis was offered the presidency of Firestone Natural Rubber Company, Liberia’s largest foreign investor. He serves in that capacity today.

Adomitis’ experience within the company from the corporate offices in Nashville to the divisions of retail, diversified products, and tire manufacturing, gives him a unique perspective for guiding the rubber operation, which not only supplies tire-grade rubber to Bridgestone Firestone tire plants in the United States, but also supplies the United States almost 50 percent of its industrial latex requirements.

Although Firestone’s Liberian operations, facilities, and equipment were destroyed during 14 years of civil war and chaos that began in 1989, Adomitis visits the operation regularly and is focused on leading the company and its 6,000 employees in Liberia as they help to rebuild the country. Under Adomitis’ leadership, Firestone is restoring and rebuilding its 200-square-mile operation of rubber trees, industry, rural electrification, school system, housing, roads, and healthcare in Liberia.

“As someone who aspired most of my life to be a practicing lawyer, I never understood how many of my classmates could endure the rigors of law school without the goal of actually practicing law,” Adomitis recalled. “Twenty-five years later, I understand fully how the law school experience shapes an individual to not only practice law but also to handle a wide variety of life and business challenges. I believe an increasing number of companies are looking for the kind of skills that come with a rigorous legal education. There is no question that my years at the College of Law prepared me for my current position, even though I could never have foreseen it at the time.”

After a 25-year absence, Adomitis returned to the College of Law to deliver the 2006 Distinguished Alumni Lecture. “Although the College of Law itself had been completely renovated and rebuilt since 1979, what really impressed me was the diversity of the student body,” Adomitis said. “The College of Law has truly become not just a national institution but an international one. I expect its graduates to have an ever-increasing impact on the world in the years to come.”

Carrie Archie Russell was active in many student organizations at the college and was named Outstanding Student by the National Association of Women Lawyers in 2000. She spent the first four years of her legal career clerking for Judge Carol Soloman of the Eighth Circuit Court in Nashville. She is now pursuing a Ph.D. in political science at Vanderbilt University. Her passion is American politics and constitutional law, and she hopes to pass that love on to her students when she begins teaching.

“My years at the College of Law taught me to think critically—to see every story or factual assertion as having two sides that deserve equal attention. It reaffirmed my belief that constitutional democracies rely on participatory publics who know the rules and are willing to enforce them or petition for their change.

“Having to literally defend my client’s rights in the legal clinic, while respecting the rights of others at the same time, helped me learn that by knowing and exercising my rights as a citizen, I am perpetuating the dream of government by and for the people. Acquiring a legal education is not easy, but it is the best way I know to personally inculcate and outwardly protect life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in a democratic society.”
Benjamin H. Barton

Professor Ben Barton joined the Law School Clinic in 2001 and quickly became one of the nation's most prolific clinical law professors. His scholarship has ranged from economic analysis of the Rules of Professional Conduct to a study of tort law and playground equipment to an analysis of the libertarian themes in the Harry Potter novels. His work has been featured in the Wall Street Journal and on multiple legal blogs. As director of the Legal Clinic, he helps to merge the theoretical and the utilitarian in teaching students to practice law. Professor Barton received his J.D. degree magna cum laude from the University of Michigan in 1996 and was a member of the Order of the Coif. He published two notes in the Michigan Law Review while in law school and received the Jason L. Honigman Award for his dedication to the review. Since arriving at the UT College of Law, he has twice been named the Outstanding Faculty Advisor for UT Pro Bono and has received the Marilyn V. Yarbrough Faculty Award for Writing Excellence for his article in the Georgia Law Review.

Douglas A. Blaze

Professor Blaze, who received a J.D. degree summa cum laude from Georgetown University, joined the faculty in 1993 as director of Clinical Programs. He came to Tennessee from Phoenix, Arizona, where he worked in private practice and later joined the faculty at Arizona State University. Professor Blaze is co-author of The Law of Negligence in Arizona. His work has been published in the Arizona State, Georgetown, Tennessee, and William & Mary law reviews, among others. Professor Blaze is the immediate past chair of the Tennessee Alliance for Legal Services and is a member of several other bar committees. In 2004, Professor Blaze received the Thomas Jefferson Prize. He received the Bass, Berry & Sims Award for Outstanding Service to the Bench and Bar in 1996 and 2004, the Harold Warner Outstanding Teacher Award in 1997, and the Carden Institutional Service Award in 2000 and 2005.

John L. Sobieski, Jr.
Interim Dean and Lindsay Young Distinguished Professor of Law

B.S., Loyola University, Chicago
J.D., University of Michigan

Dean Sobieski came to the UT College of Law in 1972 after clerking for Justice Walter V. Schafer of the Supreme Court of Illinois and serving as a lieutenant (JAGC) in the United States Navy. He was named Lindsay Young Distinguished Professor of Law at UT in 1986 and became associate dean for academic affairs in 1995. Dean Sobieski has received the Harold C. Warner Outstanding Teacher Award twice, the Tennessee Bar Association's Outstanding Law Professor Award, the Carden Faculty Award for Outstanding Service (twice), the Bass, Berry & Sims Award for Outstanding Service to the Bench and Bar, the Forrest W. Lacey Award for Outstanding Contributions to the Moot Court Board (twice), and the Carden Award for Superior Achievement in Scholarship. He is co-author of the seven-volume Civil Rights Actions and helped to draft the Tennessee Rules of Appellate Procedure. He was named interim dean of the college in June 2006. Dean Sobieski teaches Civil Procedure, Civil Rights Actions, Complex Litigation, Conflict of Laws, and Federal Courts.

Douglas A. Blaze
Interim Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Art Stoltz & Elvin E. Overton Distinguished Professor of Law

Professor Barton teaches Advocacy Clinic and Torts.

Katrice W. Jones Morgan
Assistant Dean for Student Affairs

B.A., The University of Tennessee
J.D., Louisiana State University

Katrecie Morgan came to the College of Law in 2007 after six years as an assistant district attorney general for Knox County, Tennessee. Prior to that she was assistant director of advising services for the University of Tennessee College of Arts and Sciences for two and a half years. Dean Morgan received a bachelor's degree in English from the University of Tennessee in 1990 and a J.D. degree from Louisiana State University in 1997. At the UT College of Law, she oversees student registration, scheduling of classes, administration of examinations, grade reports, class rankings, transcripts, grading policies, and rules and guidelines regarding matriculation.

William J. Beintema
Director of the Law Library and Associate Professor

B.B.A., J.D., University of Miami
M.S.L.S., Florida State University

Professor Beintema came to UT in 1984 after serving as director of the Oklahoma City University Law Library. He was also a research assistant at the Florida State University Law Library and assistant law librarian and acting law librarian at the University of Miami. Professor Beintema is the author of Clergy Malpractice: An Annotated Bibliography. He has held national and regional offices and committee positions in the American Association of Law Libraries and has served as a member of the Advisory Board of the Legal Assistant Technology Program at Pellissippi State Technical Community College. In 2001 Professor Beintema received an award from the Southeastern Chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries "In Recognition Of Sustained Special Service to the Chapter."
GEORGE W. KUNEY
Professor of Law and Director of the Clayton Center for Entrepreneurial Law
B.A., University of California, Santa Cruz
J.D., University of California, Hastings College of the Law
M.B.A., University of San Diego
Professor George Kuney's expertise and scholarly interests relate to business transactions and litigation with an emphasis on acquisitions, recapitalizations, reorganizations and financing. He began his legal career in the San Francisco offices of Morrison & Foerster LLP, and Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Robertson & Falk LLP. He then became a partner in the San Diego office of Allen, Matkins, Leek, Gamble & Mallory LLP, where he concentrated on insolvency and reorganization matters nationwide. He is a research fellow of the Center for Corporate Governance, a multidisciplinary research center of the University of Tennessee. Professor Kuney teaches Contracts I, Contracts II, Contract Drafting, Debtor-Creditor, Property, Representing Enterprises, and Workouts & Reorganizations.

CAROL MCCREHAN PARKER
Associate Professor of Law and Director of Legal Writing
B.S., Northwestern University
M.A., Northwestern University
J.D., University of Illinois
Professor Parker helps students master the complex skill of legal writing as director of writing and also as coordinator of UT's academic support program. She was director of the writing programs at DePaul University and Indiana University before joining the UT faculty in 1994. She has written articles on legal writing and torts, has served as chair of the Association of American Law Schools Section on Legal Writing, Reasoning and Research, and is a member of the board of directors of the Legal Writing Institute. Professor Parker has received the Carden Award for Outstanding Service to the Institution and the Forrest W. Lacey Award. She has also worked in private practice in Chicago.
Professor Parker teaches Intellectual Property, Law and Medicine, and Legal Process.

Daniel G. Lamb, '77
Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman, LLP, San Diego
As a trial lawyer with Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman, Daniel Lamb has tried cases in state and federal courts throughout California and across the United States. These cases have involved a wide variety of disputes, including unfair competition and trade regulation, consumer class actions, intellectual property, corporate and business control contests, business torts, contracts, federal securities laws, environmental cost recovery and toxic torts, federal and state income tax, land use, and real property law. He has frequently been honored by his peers, having been listed in Best Lawyers in America and Best Lawyers in San Diego. He is featured in the May 2007 edition of California Super Lawyers magazine.

"The strongest memories of my three years at Tennessee Law are of the faculty members who inspired and challenged me and the friendships I formed with my fellow students. Those relationships have influenced my career and my life in ways that I could never have imagined. For me, and I expect for many others, those bonds are the real legacy of the law school."
Public service continues to be a priority for many alumni. The College of Law is very proud of alumna Deborah Taylor Tate, who was appointed in 2005 to the Federal Communications Commission by President George W. Bush. Before joining the FCC, Commissioner Tate served as a director of the Tennessee Regulatory Authority (TRA) and as chairman in 2003–2004. In that position, she was appointed by the chairman of the FCC to the Federal-State Joint Board on Advanced Telecommunications Services.

Commissioner Tate embodies the characteristics of a “Tennessee Volunteer” and continues to receive accolades for her community and civic involvement. She is the recipient of the 2006 Junior League’s Mary Harriman Community Leadership Award for her commitment to improving the health, economic, and social well-being of women and children. In 2004 she was recognized as one of Tennessee’s “Most Powerful People,” inducted as a fellow by the Nashville Bar Foundation, and elected to International Women of Tennessee. She is the founder and former president of Renewal House, a recovery residence for female crack cocaine addicts and their children. She continues to serve on the boards of numerous charitable and community organizations.

Professionally, Commissioner Tate has served as an attorney and senior policy advisor to two former Tennessee governors and was instrumental in the creation and implementation of a statewide plan establishing the Mental Health Revision Commission culminating in the passage of an entire new mental health law for Tennessee.

“Even though I have held a variety of positions, public and private, traditional and non-traditional, every opportunity in my professional career has been directly related to my law degree. In fact, I met my first boss taking him on a tour of the UT law school, then Governor Lamar Alexander. My law degree has provided the entry into many professional careers and positions at every level of government. It is the opportunity to use that legal education to impact public policy in a positive way that has inspired me. In many roles—from drafting legislation to serving on public policy commissions—I have also had the good fortune to continue to interact with many of my UT law professors who provide expertise to government and policymakers in their particular areas of specialization.”

Dedication to government service as a law student led Steve Elkins to the Office of the Governor of the state of Tennessee. Steve spent his summers clerking for the vice president of the United States general counsel’s office and for the solicitor general’s office in the Office of the Attorney General for the state of Tennessee. He graduated summa cum laude from the UT College of Law. Governor Phil Bredesen appointed Steve as legal counsel to the governor in December 2006.

“I feel fortunate to have had the opportunity to attend the UT College of Law. I am especially thankful for the relationships I formed with both fellow students and many professors who cared enough to take a personal interest in helping me achieve my goals. I met a wonderful group of people with many diverse backgrounds and experiences.”
The Law School of the Future—Today

A new law center at the University of Tennessee became a reality in 1997 when the three-year construction project was concluded and students, faculty, and staff moved into the $21.5-million facility. The impressive 110,000-square-foot center is a melding of the old with the new and is an exceptional setting for legal education.

A three-level rotunda connects the new 80,000-square-foot structure with the redesigned and renovated 30,000-square-foot building that has been home to the College of Law since 1950. The new facility is located on Cumberland Avenue, just across from the University Center, in the heart of the campus.

The Law Center Includes

- The Joel A. Katz Law Library occupying 56,000 square feet of the new facility and offering law students and the legal community access to the information they need for legal study and research. Library resources include an online automated catalog system, centers for use of the WESTLAW and LEXIS legal database retrieval systems, computer laboratories, and CD-ROM stations, as well as reading rooms and study carrels.
- Six large classrooms/courtrooms and five smaller classrooms/seminar rooms. Each is equipped with audiovisual equipment, permitting teaching and learning in the format most suitable for the instructional methodology of the course. The facility has additional space for seminars and discussion groups, as well as formal and informal meeting areas.
- A Legal Clinic with the space and the technology to function as a modern law firm, to complement the instruction and supervision that have made the Legal Clinic one of the most highly regarded clinical programs in the nation.
- Expanded space dedicated to student meetings, organizations, relaxation, and study, including a spacious indoor commons area adjoining an outdoor courtyard.

Moot Court Program

The Moot Court Board plays a vital role in the College of Law’s appellate and trial advocacy programs. It is composed of second- and third-year students who have demonstrated excellence in advocacy through various inter- and intraschool competitions. The Board develops legal problems for the two intraschool competitions held each year—the Advocates' Prize and the Jenkins Competition—and is involved in the selection of students who will represent the University of Tennessee in interschool competitions. The Board is committed to increasing the level of interest, participation, and excellence in advocacy at the University of Tennessee College of Law.

Legal Writing Program

Lawyers are professional writers. Whether they act as advisors, advocates, or drafters of statutes and contracts, lawyers serve their clients by analyzing real-life problems in terms of legal principles and communicating that analysis effectively. A strong foundation in legal writing and research skills is essential to professional success.

The legal writing program at the University of Tennessee College of Law is among the most focused, comprehensive, and advanced in the country. It is one of the cornerstones of the college’s academic program and demonstrates its commitment to teaching and training students to be excellent lawyers.

The writing program includes both required and elective courses. In courses that fulfill writing requirements, students create documents that give advice, present arguments on behalf of clients, specify the terms of contracts or other instruments, and present scholarly analysis of legal issues. In elective courses throughout the curriculum, students prepare professional documents of all types. By writing, students learn how to use legal authorities to answer clients’ questions; they learn to recognize, present, and respond to various kinds of legal arguments in the precise language that law demands; and they learn to produce professional-quality documents.

Legal Process I and Legal Process II are gateway first-year courses taught by full-time law professors and practicing attorneys. Working closely with classroom teachers, a writing specialist helps each student identify strengths and weaknesses and offers individual tutoring and workshops to all students wishing to improve their writing skills. In the first semester, Legal Process I introduces students to the structure of legal analysis and the lawyerly use of legal authorities. Students learn how to find, choose, and use legal authorities to solve legal problems, and to write legal memoranda like those used in law offices. In Legal Process II, students acquire more advanced research techniques and learn how to make persuasive legal arguments in trial and appellate briefs and in oral arguments.

After the first year of law school, students continue to develop their writing and research skills through two upper-level writing requirements. In the “Planning and Drafting” requirement, students learn to plan and draft documents, such as contracts, governing the future conduct of clients and others. The “Expository Writing” requirement focuses on developing analytical skills by researching and writing a scholarly research paper on a subject chosen by the student. Students may satisfy the upper-level writing requirements through a variety of courses and independent projects. Many students elect to take more than one course to satisfy each of these requirements.

Beyond the required courses, opportunities to gain experience in preparing professional documents are available throughout the curriculum in practice-oriented courses in advocacy or business transactions. Finally, the College of Law’s Moot Court Program and its student-edited journals—the Tennessee Law Review, Transactions, and the Tennessee Journal of Law & Policy—offer additional exciting opportunities to gain realistic professional experiences in legal writing.

The Tennessee Advantage

NATASHA WILLIAMS CAMPBELL, '07

Baker, Donelson, Bearman, Caldwell & Berkowitz, Knoxville

B.A., Duke University

Natasha Williams Campbell was a very busy student at the College of Law, serving as student materials editor for the Tennessee Law Review, as third-year editor of Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law, and as a teaching assistant for legal research. She also worked as a graduate assistant in the Office of Minority Student Affairs. And, she is the mother of a baby boy!

"Members of the faculty and staff at the College of Law are extremely supportive. Despite demanding schedules, they make themselves available to discuss issues of professional, academic, and personal concern to students. During my years at Tennessee, I valued this time for informal conversation because it allowed me to cultivate relationships with professors and to develop a familiarity with staff members."

TENNESSEE LAW REVIEW
The Tennessee Law Review is a law journal published quarterly by the students of the College of Law. Members are selected from the rising second-year class on the basis of writing ability and scholarship. Third-year members may be chosen to serve on the editorial board or may participate as staff members.

The Tennessee Law Review offers an excellent opportunity to those students with an aptitude for legal research and writing at a professional level. The Law Review publishes articles on important legal topics written by legal scholars and practitioners throughout the country. Members of the Law Review also write notes and comments for publication.

Members of the Tennessee Law Review receive one hour of ungraded academic credit for each semester in which they satisfactorily perform their membership duties.

TRANSACTIONS: THE TENNESSEE JOURNAL OF BUSINESS LAW
The Clayton Center for Entrepreneurial Law produces Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law semi-annually. This journal, carried by law libraries nationwide, is produced by students with the assistance of the College of Law faculty. Transactions covers legal developments of interest to the business bar as well as the center’s activities and faculty achievements.

TENNESSEE JOURNAL OF LAW AND POLICY
The Tennessee Journal of Law and Policy is a student-produced journal that began quarterly publication in the fall of 2004.

STUDY ABROAD: CAMBRIDGE OR RIO DE JANEIRO
The University of Tennessee co-sponsors two student abroad programs, enabling students to earn class credit during the summer while studying and traveling for a month. Both programs feature courses on various topics in international and comparative law and are ABA accredited.

For more information about The Cambridge Summer Session at Downing College, see www.law.olemiss.edu/programs/cambridge/index.html. For information about the Summer Legal and Policy Study program in Rio De Janeiro, go to law.gsu.edu/rio.

STUDENT BAR ASSOCIATION
The UT Student Bar Association is the representative voice of College of Law students. Elected officers serve on the Dean’s Advisory Council, and members organize activities for the benefit of the law school community. All students may join the SBA and participate in its activities.

The SBA supervises the locker-rental program and operates the SBA Book Exchange, through which law students may buy and sell used law books at discounted prices. The SBA also administers the Alan Novak Memorial Emergency Loan Fund, which provides short-term interest-free loans to law students in need.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS
Student organizations at the University of Tennessee College of Law provide opportunities for students to develop common interests and explore law-related topics together. These are the active student organizations:

- American Bar Association, Law Student Division; Alternative Dispute Resolution Project; Black Law Student Association; Business and Tax Law Association; Christian Legal Society; Class Development Council; Criminal Law Society; Environmental Law Organization; The Federalist Society; Lambda Legal Society; Law Women; Moot Court Board; Muslim Law Students Association; Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity; Phi Delta Phi international, Legal Fraternity; Speakers Series; Sports & Entertainment Law Society; Student Bar Association; Tennessee Association for Public Interest Law; Tennessee Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers; Transactions: The Tennessee Journal of Business Law; Tennessee Law Review; UT Pro Bono.

An Organizations Fair is held each fall semester to acquaint students with the student groups.

The College of Law sponsors teams in several categories of moot court competition. Some recent teams and their results include:

- National Moot Court Team (national finals in 1997; twice national champions); National Trial Team (regional champion in 2003 and 2004); Jerome Prince Evidence National Moot Court Team (won the national championship in 2001, 2000, and 1993; placed third in the nation in 1999 and 1992; placed second in the nation in 1997); Constitutional Law Moot Court Team (reached the semifinals in the 'Spong Constitutional Law Moot Court Competition at William & Mary in 2000); Trademark Moot Court Team Regional Champions in 2003 and 2006; American Trial Lawyers Association Trial Team; Environmental Moot Court Team (second place in national competition in 1992 and 1993); Frederick Douglass Moot Court Team; Black Law Student Association Trial Team (finale second in 2000; won outstanding advocate).

The Advocates’ Prize Moot Court Competition was established through the generosity of a good friend of the College of Law. This is an intraschool competition in written and oral appellate advocacy. Trial skills are similarly recognized in the College’s Ray H. Jenkins Trial Competition. The final rounds of both competitions are judged by panels of distinguished jurists from benches such as the United States Supreme Court, the United States Court of Appeals and District Courts, and the Supreme Court of Tennessee.
Pro Bono and Public Interest Law

The University of Tennessee College of Law encourages students, faculty, and staff to participate in pro bono, public interest, and social justice activities. Through course work, clinical education, volunteer opportunities, honors, and awards, as well as other means of direct guidance and support, the College of Law demonstrates its commitment to a justice system that is fair and accessible to all.

UT Pro Bono

One way in which members and aspiring members of the bar can work toward these goals is through the pro bono contribution of their knowledge and skill to clients and communities that would otherwise be unable to afford legal help. Such volunteer service provides much-needed assistance to others, and it can be an important learning opportunity for the lawyer or law student as well.

UT Pro Bono is a student-directed, community service organization at the University of Tennessee College of Law that connects law students with area attorneys representing indigent clients. Working in cooperation with attorneys and local legal aid societies, UT Pro Bono serves as a resource by providing law students for research, educational, and investigatory assistance. UT Pro Bono operates the following service projects:

Tennessee Innocence Project

The Tennessee Innocence Project is a non-profit organization comprised of volunteer law students, attorneys, investigators, and others who are devoted to making certain, through the utilization of DNA technology and other methods, that no person who is actually innocent remains in prison or on death row in Tennessee. Law student volunteers predominantly staff the Tennessee Innocence Project. Students review innocence applications from prisoners, investigate cases, interview witnesses, gather documentation and existing evidence, and analyze judicial review materials.

The Homeless Project

The Homeless Project is designed to accommodate the legal needs of the homeless population. This project allows students to assist in the legal representation of individuals who are temporarily or permanently displaced. Twice a semester, a group of students visits the Knoxville Rescue Ministries or the Serenity Shelter to render legal services and to educate the homeless. A law professor or a local practicing attorney accompanies the students to the shelters and provides guidance to them. Before students may volunteer, they must attend a training session to familiarize themselves with various governmental assistance programs (i.e., Social Security benefits, unemployment benefits, disability benefits, and workers’ compensation), which may further assist the students’ ability to help the homeless.

Family Justice Project

UT Pro Bono, in coordination with Legal Aid of East Tennessee, trains UT law students to interview and conduct legal “check-ups” for families of elementary school students at selected local schools. Because of the financial situation of the families, many of the children are legally entitled to social services and public benefits of which they might be unaware or might have difficulties obtaining. Law students can spot issues and problems the families might have and can help address those issues either by informing the families of their options or by helping them solve a problem.

Immigrant Assistance Project

This project is dedicated to assisting those who cannot obtain access to justice due to immigration status and/or a language barrier. IAP members work with other arms of UT Pro Bono to expand their services to immigrants in East Tennessee. The IAP serves as a liaison between the local legal community, the law school, and immigrants in the East Tennessee area.

Animal Law Project

Law student volunteers learn about and become involved with efforts to educate the public about animal and animal cruelty laws and legal issues. The Animal Law Project is a partner in a local Animal Task Force along with the UT College of Veterinary Medicine, the School of Social Work, the College of Nursing, the Humane Society of Eastern Tennessee and the Cumberlands, and other community-based organizations.

Saturday Bar

The Saturday Bar project provides student volunteer assistance to attorneys working with Legal Aid of East Tennessee’s Saturday Bar Program. Students assist in the intake and interviewing of clients. Students have the opportunity to observe volunteer attorneys providing practical legal advice to clients, and are generally welcomed to follow through on these cases with the local pro bono attorney to whom the case is assigned.
Volunteer Income Tax Assistance

Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA), a volunteer outreach program funded and managed by the Internal Revenue Service, helps disabled, elderly, and low-income taxpayers file their returns electronically. Law school VITA volunteers run a school Web site and are trained in basic tax law and mechanics and use of tax preparation software. The Law School VITA site specializes in helping students with tax return preparation, including scholarship, grant, loan, and tax-deductible school expense reporting.

Pro Bono Honors Program

The Pro Bono Honors Program leads to a certificate and public recognition for graduating students who have performed 50 or more hours of pro bono service, performed without monetary compensation or academic credit, during law school.

The College of Law hosts an Honors Banquet each year during which students, faculty, and staff are recognized for their achievements in various areas. Some of the annual prizes honor students for their involvement in pro bono or public interest activities.

Point of pride

UT Establishes Children's Advocacy Network

In 2004, The University of Tennessee College Of Law received a grant from Equal Justice Works (EJW) to staff a Children's Advocacy Network.

EJW is the national leader in funding and spearheading access to justice programs in American law schools and beyond. The grant provided funds for the UT College of Law to hire an EJW Fellow to work with attorneys, students, and faculty to develop a back-up center for children and youth.

UT's project is the first among southern and southeastern law schools to join the Law School Consortium Project, a national enterprise designed to bring into closer collaboration law schools and lawyers in small and solo practices and legal services, public interest, and pro bono practices.

The first component of the Children's Advocacy Network is the Lawyer's Education Advocacy Resource Network (LEARN). LEARN was created to provide training and support to attorneys working on children's educational law issues.

There is great need for legal representation on behalf of school-age children and youth at both the state and national levels—both regular and special education students. Low-income students of color and students in rural areas suffer particularly from lack of adequate representation.

Dolores Whites of Champaign, Illinois, was the college's EJW Fellow. She received a law degree from the University of Illinois in 2003 and, before coming to UT, was an education law attorney and coordinator of Parent and Student Advocacy with the Champaign Urbana Project. Her successor, Barbara Dyer, is a 2002 graduate of UT College of Law and has an extensive background in special education advocacy.

Barbara works with Professor Dean Hill Rivkin, the LEARN director, and other faculty, staff, and students. They collaborate to organize and develop training and to provide litigation and advocacy support and mentoring for Tennessee public and private lawyers who represent students in education cases. A course in education advocacy is also offered to students each year.

"Our ultimate goal is to firmly establish this project in the UT College of Law, the bar, the advocacy community, and the university," Rivkin said. "We hope to develop a project that will benefit Tennessee children and youth and that can be replicated in other law schools nationwide."
The College of Law publishes a reference guide, Financing Your Legal Education, for our prospective students. It is available online from the College of Law Web site at www.law.utk.edu. Simply click on Prospective Students, then Financial Information, to view and print a PDF version of this resource.

Tuition and Fees

The value of your legal education at the University of Tennessee College of Law compares favorably with that available at other state-supported and private institutions.

University tuition and fees are determined by the Board of Trustees each summer. Therefore, cost of attendance can only be estimated before a candidate for admission must make the decision of which law school to attend. Tuition and fees for the 2007-08 academic year (fall and spring semesters) are as follows:

- For Tennessee Resident Students: $11,502
- For Out-of-State Students: $27,762

Total Expenses

Living expenses for the 2007–08 academic year are outlined in the box on this page to give you an idea of the total cost of attending the University of Tennessee College of Law. Tuition has increased 4.6–18% each year since 1998–1999. Candidates for admission can estimate the cost of attendance for the three-year period by anticipating that a similar percentage increase will take place for the second and third year of law school.

Application Fee

There is a non-refundable $15 application fee payable at the time of application.

Seat Deposit

All applicants admitted to the College of Law who advise us that they plan to enroll in the fall must pay non-refundable seat deposits to reserve a place in the entering class. The amount of the deposits will be credited toward the fall semester 2008 fees.

Financial Aid

Candidates for admission to the College of Law may be eligible for student loans; the number of scholarships for entering students is limited. Candidates for admission should go to the College of Law Web site (www.law.utk.edu) for in-depth information about the types of financial aid available, the processes for applying for financial aid, important deadlines, a list of scholarships, and other information.

Loans

Candidates for admission must complete the FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) process before they are eligible to be considered for federal loans and need-based scholarships.

There are several different loan programs available to help our students finance their legal educations:

- Federal Perkins Student Loan Program
- Subsidized Stafford Loans
- Unsubsidized Stafford Loans
- Grad Plus Loans

Detailed information about each loan option can be found on the College of Law Web site (www.law.utk.edu) in the section for Applicants.

Work Study

The University administers work-study positions under the federal College Work Study Program. Requests for applications should be directed to the University's Financial Aid Office.

Graduate Research Assistant Program

The College of Law is pleased to offer the opportunity for selected law students to serve as graduate research assistants for faculty members during their three years of study at the College. Candidates offered positions as Tennessee Law Scholar and Research Associates will work under the supervision of law professors for an average of 10 hours each week during fall and spring semesters for three years.

Tennessee Scholars will be chosen from admitted candidates who express an interest in this position during the admissions process. Academic qualifications, research and writing experience, and other factors considered in the admissions process will also be considered in the selection process.

Compensation includes a full tuition waiver (in-state or out-of-state) and a monthly stipend. Please see the law school admissions application packet for detailed information.

Scholarships

The College of Law has a number of scholarships that are awarded to admitted candidates during the admissions process. Scholarships may be based on a number of factors: academic credentials (LSAT score and UGPA), records of leadership and community service, or other factors as established by the scholarship donor. Several scholarships may be awarded for which financial need, as established by the University after the FAFSA process is complete, is a primary criteria. Candidates for admission should complete the FAFSA process as soon as possible after the first of the year in order to be considered for scholarships in which financial need is a factor.

Candidates for admission will automatically be considered for all scholarships for which they are eligible, with the exception of the Kolwyck Scholarship. These scholarships are outlined in detail below. Please note that your application file should be complete by January 15 in order to be considered for this scholarship.

The following scholarships are available to College of Law students; not all listed scholarships are allocated to first-year students. Descriptions of each scholarship and the criteria for selection of the recipient are included in the College of Law Web site (www.law.utk.edu) in the Applicant section.
The Arthur H. Stolnitz Scholarship was established with a bequest from this 1952 College of Law graduate. Mr. Stolnitz had a very successful 45-year career in the entertainment industry. At the time of his retirement in 1996, he had reached the position of executive vice president for business affairs at Warner Bros. TV. His fond memories of his years at UT and the College of Law led him to encourage out-of-state students to come to Knoxville. Prior to his death in 2007, he kept in contact with recipients of his scholarship. He often accompanied admissions representatives to out-of-state recruiting events. Mr. Stolnitz was generous with financial support and energetic in leadership. The College of Law is honored to continue awarding this scholarship to out-of-state students in his memory.

The Clarence and Augusta Kolwyck Memorial Achievement Award is awarded by the faculty of the College of Law to a student who shows bright professional promise, as demonstrated primarily through prior academic achievement. This scholarship is awarded annually to members of the three law school classes. The admissions criteria will be used to evaluate candidates for awards to first-year students. Academic performance in law school will be an additional criterion considered in second- and third-year scholarship awards. A student who receives an award in the first year will be eligible to receive the award in the second and third years upon maintenance of a designated law school grade-point average. A separate application is not required for consideration for this Kolwyck Scholarship. Candidates whose application files are complete by January 15 will be given priority consideration.

THE BETTYE B. LEWIS CAREER CENTER

EMPLOYMENT RESOURCES

CAREER SERVICES
Recruiting and hiring practices in the legal job market require that making career decisions be an ongoing, developmental process that begins in the first year of law school and continues through graduation. Career Center staff help students acquire the skills and knowledge necessary for a successful job search and provides them with information on the many professional areas in which a law degree can be used.

SERVICES FOR FIRST-YEARS
First-years are introduced to staff members, who discuss general career development strategies, as well as programs and services that are offered throughout the year. Guidelines for conducting a legal job search as a 1L, including standards for contact between students and employers, are also explained. Individual advising sessions begin in early November and continue through January to assist students with resumes and cover letters, as well as job search strategies specific to each student. First-years are also encouraged to participate in practice interview sessions for skills assessment and advice on making a great first impression.

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
Through Career Services, students have the opportunity to learn about and meet legal recruiters who hire summer and year-round law clerks, as well as entry-level attorneys. Job listings are posted on our Web site and on bulletin boards inside Career Services; students typically apply for these positions with a cover letter and resume sent directly to the employer. Career Services also receives requests from local attorneys for student assistance with single-project or temporary assignments, which may last from a few hours to a few weeks.

Each year, Career Services hosts approximately 100 employers from throughout the Southeast in its fall and spring on-campus interview programs. This process begins shortly after the start of each semester, and all students are encouraged to sign up for the opportunity to meet with employers that interest them. UT law students may also choose to participate in off-campus job conferences co-sponsored by the Career Center. These include:
- Atlanta Legal Hiring Conference (Atlanta)
- Equal Justice Works Career Fair (Washington, DC)
- Judicial Clerkship Program (sponsored by the ABA, Chicago)

Mid-Atlantic Legal Recruiting Conference (Washington, DC)
Nashville Bar Association 1L Hiring Conference (Nashville)
Patent Law Interview Program (Chicago)
Southeastern Intellectual Property Job Fair (Atlanta)
Southeastern Minority Job Fair (Atlanta)
Southeastern Law Placement Consortium (Atlanta)

Employers from across the U.S. also solicit résumés from UT students interested in their practice and their geographic location. Many students serve as volunteer interns with public interest organizations, government agencies, and judges during the school year or summer months. Volunteering can pay rich dividends, such as practical work experience, the chance to be of service to legal offices not usually funded for clerks and, the opportunity to develop contacts and mentors who can assist you throughout your career.

CAREER RESOURCES
The Career Center houses a resource library of more than 1,000 books, videotapes, legal periodicals and employer files to help you identify career goals and the best routes to reach them.

To assist students in contacting employers directly, the Career Center maintains various databases and directories with address and hiring contact information. There is also an alumni network of UT College of Law graduates who personally assist students in their career-building efforts through informational interviews.

SERVICES FOR STUDENTS AND ALUMNI
• Individualized career development counseling
• Resume and cover letter assistance
• Inclusion in the "Lawyers of the Future" online database
• Comprehensive in-office and on-line resource centers
• Interviewing opportunities through on- and off-campus job fairs, job postings, and resume referrals
• Workshops and programs in career development, job search skills, and exploration of career opportunities for J.D. graduates.

Rachel Kuipers, '07

Mayer Brown Rowe & Maw LLP, Chicago
B.A., University of South Carolina

Michigan native Rachel Kuipers attended the College of Law as an out-of-state student.

"One of the first things that attracted me to UT was the intimate size and welcoming atmosphere. Having smaller classes allows you to get to know your professors and staff members who, you quickly learn, are very important to your law school success. It's a great feeling to walk into the Financial Aid Office or the Career Center and be greeted by name. Also, a smaller school facilitates real relationships with professors. In my experience, UT professors actually care about their students. They will go to lunch to discuss class schedules with you, meet to talk about job prospects, and even offer advice about personal matters. The education I obtained from UT helped me land a great job in Chicago with an international firm."

Before you decide which law school to attend, it only makes sense to look at the cost of attendance at that school in relation to the average salaries that graduates from that school have accepted.

While the majority of the college's graduates practice law in Tennessee, alumni are found in 49 states and 10 foreign countries. In addition to traditional legal careers as attorneys, prosecutors, and judges, UT alumni work in a wide range of non-legal and law-related jobs. Our graduates have forged successful careers in such areas as corporate management, medicine, entrepreneurial enterprises, public service and government, teaching, and educational administration.

The University of Tennessee College of Law joins other top law schools with a very high percentage of graduate employment.

Career Center Focus—The Business of Practicing Law

The Knoxville Chapter of the Association of Legal Administrators and the College of Law formed a unique partnership to sponsor the series, "The Business of Practicing Law," for UT law students. Professor Carl Pierce has advised the planning group since its outset, working with Career Center staff and KALA member and ALA board member Kathy Scourby, firm administrator of the Knoxville office of Hunton & Williams. The goal of the program is to supplement instruction students receive in their law classes and to provide the practical knowledge to integrate the students smoothly into law firms.

The workshop topics are "Lawyer Roles in Firm Practice," "Producing the Firm's Work," and "Practicing Profitably." Students who participate in the series can expect to do the following: identify work habits that will enable them to be effective, efficient lawyers; understand expectations legal employers have of associates, beyond classroom knowledge of law; grasp the role of technology in the legal workplace; recognize the varied roles that lawyers play in a law firm and the skills needed to excel in these roles; learn the basic concepts of law firm finance; and acquire a context for helping others as an attorney and for crafting a career that will lead to a satisfying life.

Several Knoxville law firms have been involved in the first three years of the program: Butler Vines; Egerton, McAfee, Hodes, Doughty & Carson; Kramer Rayson; Lewis, King, and Sto & Hinds. According to KALA President Beth Ann McDowell, legal administrator at Pain Tarwater, "This series exposes students to the challenges they must meet in order to succeed as a practicing attorney. If we can give students a good head start, they will be happier and more productive once they leave law school and join our firms."

"The Business of Practicing Law" provides valuable information for students who have already accepted positions with law firms or are deciding if law practice is right for them. "Knowledge of the concepts and terminology used at these sessions helps students to recognize the implications of what they hear in an interview or learn through their own research, to compare practices between law firms, and to ask questions to inform their own decision making," says Career Center Director Karen Britton.

This data is accurate as of July 26, 2007.
Law students have the best of two worlds. They are part of a small academic unit, yet they have all the resources of a comprehensive research university. The total enrollment at the University of Tennessee for fall 2005 approximates 26,000 students. UT students come from all 50 states and approximately 100 foreign countries, with 14% minority enrollment. In contrast, the College of Law has fewer than 500 students, all studying in a self-contained building in the heart of campus. There were most likely more students enrolled in your high school than in the College of Law. Law students can interact with the larger campus as much or as little as they choose.

For more information about the services listed below and many others, go to the UT Web site at www.tennessee.edu or the College of Law Web site at www.law.utk.edu.

PRIVILEGES
Law students have the same privileges and responsibilities and are subject to the same regulations as other University students.

PRE-ENROLLMENT ADVISING
We want you to choose the law school that is right for you, considering your geographic preferences, your interests in certain academic programs, your career ambitions, and your financial concerns. The staff members of our Office of Admissions & Financial Aid can meet with you, in person or by phone, to provide the information you need to determine if Tennessee is a good match for you.

ORIENTATION AND INTRODUCTORY PERIOD
You will spend much of your first week as a law student at Tennessee in classes and in co-curricular and social activities designed to help you bridge the gap from college or career to law school.

ACADEMIC ADVISING
First-year law students have a faculty advisor and a student advising team. You should consult early and often with these advisors about the transition to the law school environment, adjusting to law school teaching and learning, balancing your time and your life, choosing classes, finding your way around Knoxville, or other issues of concern. The assistant dean for student affairs can also advise you in these and other areas.

ACADEMIC SUPPORT PROGRAM
During fall semester, the college offers a series of lectures on law school survival skills such as time and stress management, synthesis of law materials, note taking, outlining, and examination skills. During spring semester, any first-year student whose first semester graded point average fell below a 2.0 or who can demonstrate need for academic support can participate in small group tutorials focusing on legal doctrine and skills in Contracts, Torts, and Civil Procedure.

STUDENT COUNSELING CENTER
The Student Counseling Center provides psychological and psycho-educational services through consultation and training to help students reach their potential.

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICES
One of 20 accredited college health facilities in the nation, Student Health Services provides quality medical care on an outpatient basis. Most services are covered by the student activity fee. A health insurance plan is available for enrolled students.

DISABILITY SERVICES
The College of Law works closely with the University’s Office of Disability Services to eliminate barriers individuals encounter and to work with them to achieve and maintain individual autonomy. Admitted students with disabilities are encouraged to contact the Office of the Assistant Dean for Student Affairs so that the student’s needs can be evaluated and accommodated.
SAFETY SERVICES
The T Link: Nightly, 6:00 p.m. – 7:00 a.m. Call from any campus Blue Phone or call 974-4080, and a van will be dispatched to connect you to the Late Nite shuttle or to your destination. Service is on demand, and the service area includes UT’s Main and Ag Campuses and Ft. Sanders to Grand Avenue (excluding the Cumberland Avenue Strip).

TRANSPORTATION SERVICES
The “T” bus system and a free trolley connect the University and downtown Knoxville.

HOUSING
The university operates several reasonably priced apartment buildings. One of these, Laurel Apartments, is within walking distance of the law school and others are within five miles of campus. The University of Tennessee Foundation operates Knoxville Place, a student living community right behind the College of Law (for more information, please visit www.knoxvilleplace.com).

PARKING PERMITS
Permits may be purchased by students who live on or off campus who want to park in surface lots and garages near the law school. Parking is also available in private lots surrounding the law school and occasionally on the street with metered parking. Students who live in Knoxville Place have secured garage parking with limited entry access.

CULTURAL PROGRAMMING AND ENTERTAINMENT
Law students can take advantage of the array of activities available on campus, such as museums, art galleries, performances, films, exhibits, lectures, plays, and other forms of entertainment.

SPORTS AND RECREATION
Law students can obtain student tickets to attend Tennessee Volunteer football games, Lady Volunteer and Volunteer basketball games, and other intercollegiate events. The student activity fee includes use of the new, state-of-the-art student recreation center, T-RECS, for sports and fitness activities.

CAROLYN P. BROWN UNIVERSITY CENTER
Directly across Cumberland Avenue from the College of Law, the University Center has a post office, a travel agency, a cafeteria and a food court, a computer store, the university’s book and supply store, lounges, conference areas, and the “Down Under” bowling alley and game room.
Knoxville is an excellent place to call home while attending law school. The UT campus, located near the heart of the city, is the flagship public research institution of Tennessee and readily draws business and entertainment to the region. Consistently ranked among the best cities under 1,000,000 population in the United States, Knoxville boasts extensive cultural attractions, quaint shops and coffee houses, superb restaurants, fine nightlife, and proximity to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and to major cities like Nashville, Atlanta, Charlotte and Birmingham—all while retaining the southern charm of a smaller city. Whatever you like to do, you’re sure to find it in Knoxville.

“GO BIG ORANGE!”
This phrase is one you’ll repeat many times during your law school experience. For all you sports fans, Knoxville is a “one-stop shop” for several nationally recognized sports teams. Neyland Stadium, the nation’s second largest collegiate football stadium and home to nearly 108,000 cheering UT fans, is right down the street from the College of Law. Coach Pat Summitt’s championship basketball Lady Vols play to packed houses at Thompson-Boling Arena on the south side of campus.

The Icebears professional hockey team and the Smokies minor league baseball team call the Knoxville area home. Don’t forget the Women’s Basketball Hall of Fame, which resides in downtown Knoxville. For all the action of the game—there’s no greater place to be than Knoxville.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS
If you feel the call of the wild, there are many places in and around Knoxville where you can get your fill. Lace up your boots and head forty-five minutes east or southeast to the Great Smoky Mountains for a day of hiking. The Ocoee River, site of the 1996 Atlanta Olympics canoe and kayak slalom races—rated one of the ten best white-water rivers in the country by Canoe magazine—provides the exciting challenge of raging rapids. For boating and fishing enthusiasts, seven TVA lakes are within a 30-minute driving distance from Knoxville.

Volunteer Landing, Knoxville’s new riverfront development, displays a marina, visitor center, restaurants, and “dancing” fountains and waterfalls. Animals of all types from around the world reside at the Knoxville Zoo.

CULTURAL LIFE
Knoxville is home to numerous cultural attractions that appeal to a variety of tastes. World-class art exhibits are showcased at the Knoxville Museum of Art and the McClung Museum. The Tennessee Theatre is home to the “Mighty Wurlitzer” organ and the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra. Knoxville also boasts the Appalachian Ballet Company, Knoxville Opera Company, Tennessee Children’s Dance Ensemble, Beck Cultural Exchange Center, and several historic places of interest, including the James White Fort and Blount Mansion. The redevelopment of the downtown Market Square area provides an eclectic array of cafes, boutiques, and a pavilion that is home to Knoxville’s summer concert series, Sundown in the City.

On campus, the Clarence Brown Theatre produces a full season of plays and musicals annually, and the Cultural Attractions Series offers an outstanding line-up of music and dance performances.

Knoxville and the University Community
Knoxville’s diversity affords law students the opportunities of a major metropolitan area while exuding the outdoors charm of the Appalachian region.
Knoxville blurs the line between small town and big city, and UT law students find that characteristic very appealing. We think you will, too. For links to information about the Knoxville area, go to www.tennessee.edu/knoxville.

Demographic Information

Population
- City of Knoxville: 178,000
- Knox County: 390,000
- Metro Area: 704,000

Access
Interstates 40, 75, and 81 converge near Knoxville to offer easy access to surrounding states. McGhee Tyson Airport, located just 20 minutes from campus, provides over 130 arrivals and departures each day on several major airlines, which include Continental, Delta, United, American, Northwest, and US Airways.

Distance to
- Atlanta: 214 miles
- Nashville: 180 miles
- Charlotte: 243 miles
- Birmingham: 257 miles

Weather
Knoxville enjoys four very distinct seasons throughout the year. Winters tend to be short and mild, and spring usually arrives by mid-March—although don't let February's sometimes-mild temperatures fool you into thinking spring has sprung early! By the time summer rolls around, temperatures hover in the 80s, making for lazy summer days. Fall, a brilliant burst of color in east Tennessee, arrives in late September and brings with it a welcome, cooler temperature change. Fall melds into winter in late November.

Knoxville Recognized for Livability

Knoxville is on the radar screen of several indices of quality of life, and a great place to spend your law school years.

- Forbes magazine: No. 5 in the U.S. for business and careers (2006)
- CNN/Money.com: One of the 10 best cities in the U.S. for retirement (2005)
- Boating Life magazine: No. 3 in the U.S. among areas to boat and live (2007)
STUDENT HOST PROGRAM
Many schools offer limited visitation days with activities mapped out for you. We recognize that all candidate's interests, concerns, and travel schedules are not the same. The Office of Admissions and Financial Aid and the Student Bar Association customize prospect visits through our Student Host Program, available Monday through Friday during fall and spring semesters and as student availability allows during the summer semester.

To schedule a visit, contact Carolyn Dossett, Senior Admissions Specialist, or Phyllis Brewer, Admissions/Recruitment Assistant, in the Admissions Office at (865) 974-4131, or by e-mail at lawadmit@utk.edu. Please call us at least a week before you plan to visit to allow time to schedule the activities you select, which can include the following:

• Tour the College of Law building
• Attend a law school class
• Speak with
  - A professor in your area of interest
  - Admissions staff about admission or financial aid questions
  - Career Center staff about career planning and job prospects
  - A student about life in Knoxville and at the College of Law

Tours of the University of Tennessee campus can be arranged through the Office of Undergraduate Admissions Web site: admissions.utk.edu/undergraduate/visit.shtml

Regrettably, the College of Law does not have funding to reimburse prospects for campus visits.

PARKING FOR VISITS
Parking is most readily available in the University Center garage on Philip Fulmer Way, just behind the University Center and across Cumberland Avenue from the College of Law. We can validate your garage parking to reduce the cost; just bring the parking receipt with you to the Admissions Office. However, the College of Law cannot be responsible for parking violations issued by the city of Knoxville or by the university.

HOTELS
Several hotels are within a few blocks or a short drive from campus. Be sure to ask any hotel you contact if they offer discounted rates for UT visitors. (It never hurts to ask!)

Admissions Criteria and Procedures for Application

Who Is Eligible to Apply?
An applicant for admission must hold a baccalaureate degree from an accredited four-year institution by the time the applicant begins study at the College of Law. Each applicant must have taken the Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) within the past five years.

Preparing for Law School
The College of Law does not require applicants to specialize in any particular academic major or subject areas closely related to law during their undergraduate education. However, potential applicants should choose courses that will enhance their abilities in the areas of critical thinking, oral and written expression, and logical and analytical reasoning. Individuals considering law school in the future are encouraged to enroll in a broad range of courses that will help develop these skills.

Our Admissions Criteria
Admission to the University of Tennessee College of Law is competitive. Each year the Admissions Committee selects the entering class from a large number of applicants.

In making selections, the Admissions Committee places substantial emphasis on the undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) and the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) score. Undergraduate academic performance is a significant indicator of potential success, both as a measure of general ability and as an indication of factors that will hold one in good stead in law school—motivation, persistence, organizational skills, and work ethic. Similarly, the LSAT is designed to measure some of the qualities that are needed for successful law study. Although no single factor standing alone can predict with absolute certainty the ability to succeed in law school, members of the Admissions Committee have judged that the LSAT score, when combined with other assessments, is very helpful as a starting point in making comparisons among applicants for admission.

To incorporate these factors, an Admissions Index is calculated for each applicant, using a correlation formula calculated by the Law School Admission Council. In calculating the Index, only the applicant’s UGPA from all work attempted toward the first undergraduate degree earned is used.

You might find these statistics helpful. In July, the 2007 entering class was composed of 51 percent male and 49 percent female students. The class UGPA profile (75th percentile/median/25th percentile) was 3.79/3.59/3.37. The class LSAT profile (75th percentile/median/25th percentile) was 162/160/157. The median age was 23. The enrolled class profile should be substantially similar to this preliminary profile.

Every application file is read in full by at least one member of the Admissions Committee, no matter how high or low the applicant’s Index is. And while the UGPA and LSAT score are undeniably important elements, the Admissions Committee also considers a variety of other factors when evaluating applicants for admission. These factors are not given a specific weight; rather, the Admissions Committee considers these factors in its review and evaluation of the applicant’s file. In making these judgments, the Admissions Committee relies heavily upon information submitted by the applicant, as well as upon recommendations. The Admissions Committee will not admit an applicant unless there is high probability, based on its evaluation of the application, that the applicant will succeed as a law student and as a practicing attorney.

The factors considered are:

- Law School Admission Test score (unusual disparities in scores, evidence suggesting unreliability of a particular score)
- Undergraduate academic performance (grade improvement during the undergraduate career, pattern of grades, grade inflation with respect to grades earned years ago, strength of college or university attended, difficulty of undergraduate program, participation in an honors program, work or family circumstances that might have affected an applicant’s grades, combination of high undergraduate grades and low SAT or ACT scores)
- Excellence in co-curricular activities (extracurricular activities, leadership, exceptional talents, or other accomplishments)
- Excellence in community or civic activities (community service, leadership, exceptional talents, or other accomplishments)
- Graduate or professional school performance (success in graduate or professional studies, including strength of school and difficulty of program)
- Work or military experience (before, after, or during an applicant’s educational career)
- Career goals
- History of overcoming disadvantage or performing well despite heavy work or family responsibilities, child or parental care responsibilities; likely contribution to the diversity-related educational goals of the College with respect to race and ethnicity, economic status, and social or cultural background
- Exceptional talents or other accomplishments
- Evidence of maturity, responsibility and motivation
- Evidence of critical skills for law students (writing ability, analytical skills, and oral communication skills)

The successful completion of programs such as the Tennessee Institute for Pre-Law (TIP) and the Council on Legal Educational Opportunity (CLEO) Summer Institute or similar programs may be favorably considered by the Admissions Committee.
As a state-supported institution, the College of Law has a primary responsibility to offer opportunities for the study of law to qualified Tennessee residents. Traditionally, Tennessee residents account for the majority of the student body. While the College of Law will actively continue to seek a proportion of out-of-state students, the Admissions Committee also will continue to give priority to Tennessee residents.

The University of Tennessee does not discriminate based on race, sex, color, religion, national origin, age, disability, or veteran status in provision of educational opportunities or activities.

The College of Law provides equal opportunity in legal education for all persons, including faculty and employees, with respect to hiring, continuation, promotion and tenure, applicants for admission, enrolled students, and graduates, without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, handicap or disability, sexual orientation, or veteran status.

INTERVIEWS AND CAMPUS VISITS
The Admissions Office does not conduct interviews for the purpose of evaluating applicants for admission. Applicants are encouraged, however, to visit the College of Law during the fall or spring semester to visit a class, speak with current students, and learn more about the College of Law. Please call the Admissions Office at (865) 974-4131 to schedule a visit.

THE ADMISSION PROCESS

The Application Timetable

When Should I Apply?
A new class is admitted to the College of Law for the fall semester of each year only. Candidates who plan to apply for the fall 2008 entering class should plan to take the LSAT on September 29 or December 1, 2007, allowing adequate time for individual preparation before the examination.

Please complete your application file as soon as possible. Application files completed by March 1 will be afforded priority consideration for spaces in the entering class. Application files completed after March 1 will be considered as late files and may not be reviewed by the Admissions Committee.

Remember that it is the applicant's responsibility to make sure that the Admissions Office receives all materials by March 1. We will make every effort to notify applicants when their application file is complete. If you do not hear that your file is complete, please check with the individuals who are completing recommendations for you or check with the Admissions Office to determine which items are missing.

Direct all correspondence and inquiries to the Admissions Office as follows:

The University of Tennessee College of Law
Office of Admissions and Financial Aid
1505 W. Cumberland Avenue, Suite 161
Knoxville, TN 37996-1810
Telephone: (865) 974-4131
Fax: (865) 974-1572
E-mail: lawadmit@utk.edu

Please do not delay consideration of your application file by using any other address for admissions-related correspondence.

When Will Decisions Be Made?
The Admissions Committee begins to review applications as soon as they become complete. Decisions are usually made by early April. Applicants are notified of the Committee's decision by letter as soon as possible after the decision is made.

When Must I Respond?
Applicants who have been accepted for admission will be asked to accept or decline the offer in writing within a reasonable period of time so that additional offers may be made as necessary on a timely basis. Admitted students who accept our offer of admission will be required to place at least one nonrefundable deposit.

Communication About Your File
Because of the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, information about the status of your application file should only be shared with you, the applicant. If you expect to be out of the country or otherwise unavailable during the application process, it is advisable to designate a parent or spouse to deal on your behalf with the College of Law. To do so, please send a letter to the Office of Admissions and Financial Aid authorizing and naming your designate to work with our office on your behalf.

THE APPLICATION FILE

The following items must be received by the Admissions Office to complete your Application File:

- The completed Application Form
- The Certification Letter, completed and signed
- The Application Fee of $15.00 (check, money order, or credit card—Visa, Master Card, or Discover)
- Two Writing Samples: the Personal Statement and the Essay
- The Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS) Report
- Two Recommendations (through LSDAS service)
How Can I Apply for Admission?
There are two methods to apply for admission this year.

1. You may complete the application forms and submit them by mail or in person to the Admissions Office. The forms are provided in this packet or available to be downloaded from our Web site (www.law.utk.edu) if you have Adobe Acrobat Reader software.

2. You may use the 2007 electronic application package provided by LSAC (www.LSAC.org).

The Application Form
It is very important that you provide all of the information requested on the Application Form. An incomplete form may place you at a disadvantage. If you need additional space, please feel free to provide attachments that are clearly identified with your name and Social Security Number or Student ID Number. We realize that it is difficult to type the Application Form and still be clear and complete. Neat and legible handwritten forms are perfectly acceptable. Be sure to review the application for accuracy and completeness and sign the Certification Letter before mailing. All application instructions and materials can be printed from the College of Law home page on the Internet (www.law.utk.edu).

Application Fee
A nonrefundable $15.00 application fee must accompany the Application, Certification Letter, and Writing Samples. Please make your check or money order payable to The University of Tennessee, or you may charge the fee to your Visa, Master Card, or Discover.

Please send the completed Application, the Certification Letter, both Writing Samples, and the Application Fee to the Admissions Office together. You can speed consideration of your application by sending these required materials at the same time.

Two Writing Samples
Both a Personal Statement and an Essay are required and should be written by you and enclosed with the completed Application Form. The Admissions Committee will review both writing samples for content and form.

Personal Statement—The Personal Statement provides an opportunity for you to present your personal background, your motivation for the study of law, and your description of how you plan to contribute to the legal profession. This is also your opportunity to provide information that pertains to the admissions criteria established by the Admissions Committee. Please do not exceed 500 words.

Essay—Your Essay should discuss for the Admissions Committee the experience that you consider to be one of the most important learning experiences you have had in the past 10 years. Please limit your Essay to no more than 500 words.

The Law School Data Assembly Service Report
The Law School Data Assembly Service (LSDAS) provides a means of centralizing and standardizing undergraduate academic records to simplify the law school admission process. The College of Law, like nearly all ABA-accredited law schools, requires that applicants use the LSDAS service. The LSDAS prepares a report for each law school to which you apply. There is a registration fee for the LSDAS as well as a fee for each law school report (go to www.LSAC.org for more information and current fees).

The LSDAS report contains an undergraduate academic summary, copies of all undergraduate, graduate, and law/professional school transcripts, LSAT scores and writing sample copies, and copies of letters of recommendation processed by the Law School Admission Council (LSAC).

The College of Law will request your LSDAS report upon receipt of your application for admission. It can take several weeks for your application to become complete after your application and accompanying materials reach us. It is your responsibility to submit your application well before the March 1 priority deadline so that we can order and receive your LSDAS report in time for full consideration by the Admissions Committee.

JD Credential Assembly Service for Foreign-Educated Applicants
The University of Tennessee College of Law requires that your foreign transcripts be submitted through the LSAC JD Credential Assembly Service. If you completed any postsecondary work outside the U.S. (including its territories) or Canada, you must use this service for the evaluation of your foreign transcripts. The one exception to this requirement is if you completed the foreign work through a study abroad, consortium, or exchange program sponsored by a U.S. or Canadian institution, and the work is clearly indicated as such on the home campus transcript. This service is included in the LSDAS subscription fee. A Foreign Credential Evaluation will be completed by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO), which will be incorporated into your LSDAS report. If we determine that you need to submit a TOEFL score, you must contact the Educational Testing Service (ETS) and request that your TOEFL score be sent to LSAC. LSAC's TOEFL code for the JD Credential Assembly Service is 0058. Your score will be included in the Foreign Credential Evaluation document that will be included in your LSDAS law school report.

To use the JD CAS, log in to your online account and follow the instructions for registering for the service. Be sure to print out a Transcript Request Form for each institution and send it promptly to them. More time is usually required to receive foreign transcripts.

Questions about the JD Credential Assembly Service can be directed to LSAC at 215.968.1001, or LSACINFO@LSAC.org.
Candidates with Advanced Degrees or Graduate Work
If you have a graduate degree or hours earned toward a degree, including hours earned at another law school, you must have the transcripts from all graduate institutions you attended submitted to LSDAS. This is necessary for your academic record to be considered complete and your file ready for consideration by the Admissions Committee.

Although only your undergraduate grade point average is used to calculate the Admissions Index, evidence of academic success in graduate school will also be considered in the admissions decision.

Two Recommendations
The College of Law requires two recommendations as part of the selection process. These recommendations should be written by people who have known you long enough and well enough to make a sound evaluation of your intelligence, industry, character, motivation, and aptitude for the study of law. Recommendations from individuals who can judge your academic abilities are usually most helpful to the Admissions Committee. If you have been out of school and in the workplace for a number of years, you may find employers or clients to be your best sources.

The College of Law requires applicants to submit recommendations through the LSAC letter of recommendation service that serves all member schools. This service is included in the cost of your LSDAS Registration subscription. Your letters will be copied and mailed to us along with your LSDAS Report, or as received by LSDAS. To use this service, follow the directions for submitting letters outlined on the LSAC Web site (www.LSAC.org) or in the 2007–2008 LSAT/LSDAS Information Book. Be sure to fill out and give each letter writer a recommendation form from www.LSAC.org. In the event that your undergraduate institution has a recommendation service and will not forward your recommendations to Law Services, they may be forwarded directly to our Admissions Office.

ONLINE APPLICATIONS
2008 LSAC Electronic Application
All LSDAS registrants with LSAC online accounts will have free access to the 2008 electronic JD applications for all ABA-approved law schools including the “flow-as-you-go” common application information. This free distribution of online applications allows you to electronically package your applications with the transcripts, letters of recommendation, and LSDAS law school reports that are being processed and sent to law schools by LSAC. There is no additional cost for the electronic application, but your online account will be charged $12.00 for each school to which you apply. Information about the 2008 electronic application process is available at www.LSAC.org.

The UT College of Law has discontinued providing an online application.

REACTIVATION OF THE APPLICATION FROM THE IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING YEAR
Applicants who wish to reactivate their application for admission from the immediately preceding year should request reactivation of the file in writing well before the March 1 priority deadline. The applicant must update the file with information about employment, graduate study, or other information pertinent to the admissions criteria for consideration by the Admissions Committee. Additional materials submitted, such as an updated Application Form and recommendations, will be added to the original file. No materials will be substituted for the original materials; rather, the additional materials will be considered as supplementary information. Candidates who applied in the immediately preceding year do not need to submit an additional Application Fee.

If you have retaken the LSAT since you last applied, it is your responsibility to notify the Admissions Office at the time you request reactivation of your file. A new LSDAS report will be ordered by the Admissions staff, and your on-line account will be charged $12.00.

Individuals who wish to reapply after more than one year may not reactivate an old application. New original application materials and a LSDAS report must be submitted. Your online account with LSAC will be charged $12.00 for the report, and a $15.00 application fee is also required.

TRANSFER STUDENTS
The number of seats available for transfer students is limited, therefore admission as a transfer student is competitive. Prospective candidates are encouraged to call the Admissions office by June 15 to determine if applications are being accepted for fall term and to complete their application by July 1. Transfer decisions will be made and communicated to the candidates as soon as possible.

Transfer applicants must be in good standing at a law school accredited by the American Bar Association. The Admissions Committee will consider each transfer applicant’s undergraduate and law school records and grade point averages, LSAT score, the reason for seeking to transfer, and all other factors that are used in making admissions decisions.

Transfer applicants must supply the following materials to the Office of Admissions and Financial Aid for the file to be complete and considered by the Admissions Committee:
1. A completed application for admission
2. An LSDAS report (the College of Law will order this report, and your online account will be charged $12.00.)
3. Two (2) letters of recommendation, one of which should be from a law faculty member at law school attended
4. A letter stating the reason(s) for seeking to transfer
5. A personal statement and an essay
6. The following materials from the law school attended:
a. a letter of good standing with an indication of class rank from the dean
b. an official law school transcript
c. a copy of the official law school catalog
7. The $15 application fee.

Candidates admitted to the College of Law as transfer students may receive up to 31 semester hours of credit for work successfully completed at the previously attended law school. A total of at least 58 credit hours must be completed at the University of Tennessee College of Law.

Visiting Students

A student who is in good standing at a law school accredited by the ABA may take courses at the College of Law on a space-available basis with the permission of the dean or the dean’s designee.

Applicants to visit at the College of Law must supply the following materials to the Office of Admissions and Financial Aid for the file to be complete and forwarded to the Office of Student Affairs for consideration:
1. A completed application for admission
2. An LSDAS report (a copy from the law school attended will be accepted)
3. Two (2) letters of recommendation, one of which should be from a law faculty member at law school attended
4. A letter stating the reason(s) for seeking to visit
5. A personal statement and an essay
6. The following materials from the law school attended:
   a. a letter from the dean or the dean’s designate which includes:
      1. authorization to visit and any limitations or specifications on courses which will be accepted by that school
      2. indication of good standing, including class rank
   b. an official law school transcript
   c. a copy of the official law school catalog
7. The $15 application fee

Candidates should have completed the visitor application process no later than four weeks before the beginning of the term for which they are applying to visit. Decisions to allow candidates to visit will be made and communicated to the candidates as soon as possible.

Tennessee Residency

Information about qualifying for residency in the state of Tennessee is included at the end of this application packet. Please be aware that residency rules vary from state to state. If you are not currently classified as a Tennessee resident but feel that you meet the criteria outlined, please complete and return the residency application form with your other admissions application materials.

APPLICANT CHECKLIST

- Have you signed and dated your Application and Certification Letter?
- Have you enclosed two writing samples, your Personal Statement and Essay?
- Have you enclosed your nonrefundable $15 application fee payable to The University of Tennessee (check, money order, or credit card—Visa, Master Card, or Discover)?
- Have you provided your two sources of recommendation with information and instructions about the LSDAS letter of recommendation service and asked them to forward their recommendations to LSAC?
- Is your name and Social Security or Student Identification Number and LSAC Account Number on every item you submit, and does this information match on each item?
- Have you had all of your official undergraduate (and graduate, if applicable) transcript(s) forwarded to LSDAS?

Your application file will be incomplete until we receive all of these items. Mail all materials to:
The University of Tennessee College of Law
Office of Admissions and Financial Aid
1505 W. Cumberland Avenue, Suite 161
Knoxville, TN 37996-1810

Or apply electronically via LSAC.

ACADEMIC, CRIMINAL, OR CIVIL ACTIONS

NOTE: Because of the high ethical standards to which lawyers are held, character evaluations are conducted of all applicants for admission to a state bar. State requirements vary, and you should obtain information about qualifications for admission to the bar of the state where you intend to practice. Similarly, failure to provide truthful answers, or failure to inform the Admissions Office of any changes to your answers, may result in revocation of admission or disciplinary action by the law school in which you seek admission or are enrolled or from which you have graduated. You are advised to check transcripts and/or consult with school officials holding disciplinary records before answering these questions.

Have you ever been subjected to disciplinary action by any of the educational institutions you have attended, or are there charges pending that could result in such an action? Include probation, suspension, expulsion or any other disciplinary action for academic, social, or other reasons.

☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, please explain.

The University of Tennessee funds several Tennessee Law Scholar and Research Associate positions for College of Law students. These scholars work under the supervision of law professors. The College expects to fund two scholar positions from the 2008 entering class.

- Compensation for the scholars includes a full tuition waiver (in-state or out-of-state) and a monthly stipend. The value of the tuition waiver and stipend will be determined annually. The value of the tuition waiver for the 2008–2009 academic year will be determined when tuition and fees are established by the Board of Trustees of the University of Tennessee at its summer meeting. The stipend for the 2007–2008 academic year was $4,400.

- Scholars who remain continuously enrolled taking a full-time course load, who remain in good academic standing and who successfully complete their research assignments will keep the position for all six semesters of law school. These positions offer significant benefit, both economic and experiential, to the students selected.

- Scholars will be required to work an average of 10 hours per week, during fall and spring semesters only. The 10 hours worked as a scholar will count against the 20 hour per week maximum work limitation imposed by the American Bar Association during fall and spring semesters only.

- Scholars will be chosen from admitted candidates who express interest in this position during the admission process. Scholars will be selected on the basis of the LSAT score, the undergraduate grade point average, and other criteria used for admission to the College of Law. Scholars will not be considered for other College of Law scholarships. The value of the tuition benefit will reduce the amount of student loan eligibility.

Please indicate if you would like to be considered for the Tennessee Law Scholar and Research Associate positions by returning this form with your application for admission. Those candidates who respond affirmatively by March 1 will be given priority consideration.

The following residency regulations apply to students enrolled at The University of Tennessee College of Law. In interpreting these regulations, please remember that law students are considered emancipated persons. References to unemancipated students, therefore, do not apply to law students.

Residency Classification
A prospective student who applies for law school admission and other graduate study will be classified as in-state or out-of-state. Classification is based on information supplied on the Application for Admission. A student cannot acquire in-state status on the basis of full-time enrollment at a higher educational institution in Tennessee. Proof of in-state residence is the responsibility of the individual.

A prospective student who feels that he/she meets the criteria stated below for in-state residency classification should complete the Application for In-State Classification and submit that form along with any supporting documentation to the College of Law Admission/Financial Aid Advisor. The application must be submitted on or before the last day of regular registration (the day before classes officially begin) for a given semester, if the student is to be considered for reclassification that semester.

Presumption
Unless the contrary appears from clear and convincing evidence, it shall be presumed that an emancipated person does not acquire domicile in this State while enrolled as a full-time student at any public or private higher educational institution in this State, as such status is defined by such institution.

Evidence to be Considered for Establishment of Domicile
If a person asserts that he or she has established domicile in this State he or she has the burden of proving that he or she has done so. Such a person is entitled to provide to the public higher educational institution by which he or she seeks to be classified or reclassified in-state, any and all evidence which he or she believes will sustain his or her burden of proof. Said institution will consider any and all evidence provided to it concerning such claim of domicile but will not treat any particular type or item of such evidence as conclusive evidence that domicile has or has not been established.

Appeal
The classification officer of each public higher educational institution shall be responsible for initially classifying students “in-state” or “out-of-state.” Appropriate procedures shall be established by each such institution by which a student may appeal his or her initial classification.

Effective Date for Reclassification
If a student classified out-of-state applies for in-state classification and is subsequently so classified, his or her in-state classification shall be effective as of the date on which reclassification was sought. However, out-of-state tuition will be charged for any quarter or semester during which reclassification is sought and obtained unless application for reclassification is made to the classification officer on or before the last day of regular registration of that quarter or semester.

Rules of Residency Classification

Intent
It is the intent that the public institutions of higher education in the State of Tennessee shall apply uniform rules, as described in these regulations and not otherwise, in determining whether students shall be classified "in-state" or "out-of-state" for fees and tuition purposes and for admission purposes.

Definitions

(1) “Public higher educational institution” shall mean a university or community college supported by appropriations made by the Legislature of this State.

(2) “Residence” shall mean continuous physical presence and maintenance of a dwelling within this State, provided that absence from the State for short periods of time shall not affect the establishment of a residence.

(3) “Domicile” shall mean a person’s true, fixed, and permanent home and place of habitation; it is the place where he intends to remain, and to which he or she expects to return when he or she leaves without intending to establish a new domicile elsewhere.

(4) “Emancipated person” shall mean a person who is no longer in the care, custody and control of his or her parent.

(5) “Parent” shall mean a person’s father or mother. If there is a non-parental guardian or legal custodian of an unemancipated person, then "parent" shall mean such guardian or legal custodian; provided, that there are not circumstances indicating that such guardianship or custodianship was created primarily for the purpose of conferring the status of an in-state student on such unemancipated person.

(6) “Continuous enrollment” shall mean enrollment at a public higher educational institution or institutions of this State as a full-time student, as such term is defined by the governing body of said public higher educational institution or institutions, for a normal academic year or years or the appropriate portion or portions thereof since the beginning of the period for which continuous enrollment is claimed. Such person need not enroll in summer sessions or other such inter-sessions beyond the normal academic year in order that his or her enrollment be deemed “continuous.” Enrollment shall be deemed continuous notwithstanding lapses in enrollment occasioned solely by the scheduling of the commencement and/or termination of the academic years, or appropriate portion thereof, of the public higher educational institutions in which such person enrolls.
RULES FOR DETERMINATION OF STATUS

(1) Every person having his or her domicile in this State shall be classified "in-state" for fee and tuition purposes and for admission purposes.

(2) Every person not having his or her domicile in this State shall be classified "out-of-state" for said purposes.

(3) The domicile of an unemancipated person is that of his or her parent. Unemancipated students of divorced parents shall be classified "in-state" when one parent, regardless of custodial status, is domiciled in Tennessee.

Out-of-State Students Who Are Not Required to Pay Out-of-State Tuition

(1) An unemancipated, currently enrolled student shall be reclassified out-of-state should his or her parent, having theretofore been domiciled in the State, move from the State. However, such student shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition nor be treated as an out-of-state student for admission purposes so long as his or her enrollment at a public higher educational institution or institutions shall be continuous.

(2) An unemancipated person whose parent is not domiciled in this State but is a member of the armed forces and stationed in this State or at Fort Campbell pursuant to military orders shall be classified out-of-state, but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition. Such a person, while in continuous attendance toward the degree for which he or she is currently enrolled, shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition if his or her parent thereafter is transferred on military orders.

(3) A person whose domicile is in a county of another state lying immediately adjacent to Montgomery County, or whose place of residence is within thirty (30) miles of Austin Peay State University shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition at Austin Peay State University. Provided, however, that there be no teacher college or normal school within the non-resident's own state, of equal distance to said non-resident's bona fide place of residence.

(4) Part-time students who are not domiciled in this State but who are employed full-time in the State, or who are stationed at Fort Campbell pursuant to military orders, shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition. This shall apply to part-time students who are employed in the State by more than one employer, resulting in the equivalent of full-time employment.

(5) Military personnel and their spouses stationed in the State of Tennessee who would be classified out-of-state in accordance with other provisions of these regulations will be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition.

(6) A person who is domiciled in the Kentucky counties of Fulton, Hickman, or Graves shall be classified out-of-state and shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition at The University of Tennessee at Martin if qualified for admission. This exemption is on condition that Murray State University in Murray, Kentucky, continue to admit Tennessee residents from selected Tennessee counties to enroll at that institution without payment of out-of-state tuition.

(7) Any dependent child not domiciled in Tennessee but who qualifies and is selected to receive a scholarship under the Independent Children Scholarship Act (T.C.A. 49-4-704) because his or her parent is a law enforcement officer, fireman, or emergency medical service technician who was killed or totally and permanently disabled while performing duties within the scope of employment, shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition.

(8) The spouse of a student classified as "in-state" shall also be classified "in-state."

(9) Students not domiciled in Tennessee but who are selected to participate in specified institutional undergraduate Honors Programs shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition.

(10) A person whose domicile is in Mississippi County, Arkansas, or either Dunlin County or Pemiscot County, Missouri, and who is admitted to Dyersburg State Community College, shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition.

(11) A person who is not domiciled in Tennessee, but has a bona fide place of residence in a county which is adjacent to the Tennessee state line and which is also within a 30 mile radius (as determined by the THEC) of a city containing a two-year TBR institution and who is admitted to a two-year TBR institution, shall be classified out-of-state but shall not be required to pay out-of-state tuition. The two-year institution may admit only up to three percent (3%) of the full-time equivalent attendance of the institution without out-of-state tuition. (THEC may adjust the number of the non-residents admitted pursuant to this section every three (3) years.)
