City Spotlight: La Grange

La Grange is the oldest town in Fayette County, originally being a Chickasaw Indian village named “Itey Uch La,” meaning “Cluster of Pines.” For a number of years, it was a trading post for the Indians who would visit the town regularly to dispose of their game, hides, etc. Situated on a high bluff overlooking north Mississippi, La Grange lies 50 miles east of Memphis along State Highway 57 and three miles north of the Mississippi state line.

Building Better Cities

By Jim Thomas, Assistant Director
“The University of Tennessee (UT) Municipal Technical Advisory Service (MTAS) has developed a checklist of the basics of managing a Tennessee municipality to help Tennessee municipal officials judge whether their city or town measures up in providing services. This publication presents seven areas of services provided by most municipalities in an easy-to-use checklist format so you can conduct your own survey of how efficiently and effectively services are provided in your city or town.”

This is quoted from the introduction to a publication entitled “What Every City Needs” produced by MTAS in 1988 that listed 73 basic needs of every city and town covering administration, finance, police, fire, water/wastewater, streets/roads and solid waste collection and disposal. While we are 24 years later, the advice is still sound and is the basis for a new MTAS project called “Building Better Cities.”

Over the next few months, MTAS personnel will be collecting data on each city and town in Tennessee that addresses 28 criteria and factors (compared to 73 in (continued on page 2)

Peak Interest in Benchmarking at Municipal Managers Conference

MTAS staff who facilitate the Tennessee Municipal Benchmarking Project, headed to Nashville on April 11-12 to promote performance management at the Spring Conference of the Tennessee City Managers Association.

Frances Adams-O’Brien, MTAS research and information center manager, and Sarah Young, Tennessee Municipal Benchmarking Project (TMBP) project coordinator, joined Outreach Coordinator John Crawford to present on TMBP, a comparative performance management project coordinated by MTAS for a decade.

The purpose of the project is not to compare one city against all others. When data collection is completed, analysis of the data will be used by MTAS to do planning for its work to accommodate each city’s efforts to build that better city. While much of the information relative to the criteria is already known or available from central sources, MTAS management consultants will also be talking with city officials across the state to complete the survey.

The baseline data being collected now will be analyzed and reported on during late summer this year. The same survey will be completed in future years to measure progress that cities and towns, with MTAS’s service, make toward “Building Better Cities.”

The project currently boasts 10 participating cities across the state of Tennessee. MTAS staff is focused on making fiscal year 2012 the biggest year yet for the project with plans to add even more cities.

MTAS staff briefed the audience on essentials of benchmarking, a timeline for the fiscal year 2012 project cycle and sample measures calculated in its annual report. Then they spotlighted the expertise of city leaders who have participated in the TMBP for the past 10 years with a panel discussion about the positive impact of the project in their localities.

Cleveland City Manager Janice Casteel, Brentwood Assistant City Manager Kirk Bednar and Collierville Assistant to the City Manager Janet Geyer comprised the panel. Casteel celebrated the improved collaboration that occurred among city staff in the process of the project’s data cleansing exercises, while Geyer emphasized how data generated by the project can aid in public relations. Bednar stressed the critical need for direction from the city manager to ensure buy-in among the staff in collecting the data, given the big commitment of work time and effort it entails.

“Performance measurement should ultimately be a tool for performance management,” Adams-O’Brien relayed in the presentation. City leaders confirm the powerful impact it has made in improving and monitoring their own city service delivery.

Let Me Tell You a Story – How an Annual Report Will Benefit Your Fire Department

By Dennis Wolf, Fire Management Consultant

A fire department is a valuable community asset providing emergency and essential services to residents, businesses and visitors. Regardless of the size of the community, the majority of the residents will never need the emergency services the fire department provides. This is especially true in a large city, where the percentage of people using the emergency services is small.

Local fire officials and those who use the services know what the fire department does and the services the department provides to the community, but the majority of the population does not, and even elected officials may not be aware of all of the services provided or the department’s workload.

A fire department annual report is an excellent tool for a fire department to use to tell its story to the community and to build community support for its efforts and needs, but many departments do not produce an annual report.

MTAS has a new publication, Let Me Tell You a Story – How an Annual Report Will Benefit Your Fire Department, that discusses the benefits of using an annual report, suggests ways to get started in creating an annual report, lists items to include in the report and includes an example of how to organize the report. The publication also includes a list of resources to assist a fire department in creating an annual report.

Complete MTAS Classes at Your Desk! New Online Courses Available to All Tennessee Cities

MTAS has added 35 new online courses to its training catalog representing a wide variety of courses that are suitable for all levels of municipal employees. These courses are easily available from the Solution Point website at http://www.solutionpoint.tennessee.edu/.

One new course, which is particularly recommended by MTAS for all Tennessee cities and towns, is the Open Records course. One law that municipal employees and officials often struggle to understand and comply with is the Tennessee Public Records Law (also known as the “Open Records Law”). This course explains the law, provides resources that make the process easier and describes how to handle certain specific requests such as personnel, business, financial, utility, computer and electronic records.

The courses currently offered are:
- Choosing the Best Applicant
- Creating a Positive Attitude
- Culture and Its Effect on Communication
- Decision Making: The Fundamentals
- Delegation: The Personal Approach
