Annual Salary Report Compiled

The 1999-2000 Study of Faculty Salaries has been published by the UT Office of Institutional Research and Assessment, providing an annual comparison of salaries earned by male and female faculty members. The report provides statistical information on salaries by academic rank, tenure status, experience at UT, degree attainment and academic unit.

A subcommittee of the Commission for Women is reviewing the report and will present its findings on the CFW website later this semester. Additional comparative data and facts are available in the UT Fact Book at the Institutional Research and Assessment website: http://web.utk.edu/oira from the vice-chair

As I end my third year as Vice-Chair of the Commission for Women I look back with pride on the work the Commission has accomplished. This group has worked cooperatively on many issues important to women on this campus and I have enjoyed working with my colleagues from many academic disciplines and departments.

I am especially proud that the Commission helped to sponsor the teleconference on Women in Higher Education last year and look forward to the Mentoring Program which Jo Lynch is spearheading as a result of that teleconference. It has also been my pleasure to have worked with the UT Notable Woman committee and to have assisted in honoring several women who have made many contributions to the University and to society.

As the Commission continues its work under new leadership, I believe that continued improvements to the climate for women will be possible with participation and ideas from new as well as continuing members. I appreciate the assistance and comradeship from those I have come to know as friends while working with the Commission for Women.

Sandra C. Walker
Vice-Chair

from the chair

The Commission for Women is a collection of dedicated women and men who are charged with planning, implementation and evaluation of University programs, policies, and services designed to improve the status of women. The CFW serves as an Advisory Body to the Provost. Even after three years as chair of the CFW, I am struck with a sense of awe when I look at the mission of the CFW. I am very proud to be associated with such a fine collection of people who voluntarily give time to this important mission. As you plan your activities for the new semester and a new academic year, please visit the CFW website, then contact the chair of the CFW and volunteer for some of many new programs.

I thank every member of the CFW who has worked so hard to accomplish our mission. I must, however, single out Sandra Walker, vice-chair of the CFW, for special recognition. My job as chair would have been impossible if it had not been for Sandy's leadership. Sandy has been willing to give time, energy and talents to many projects. Last year, when she led the CFW's participation in the Teleconference for Women in Higher Education, her skills as a project manager made that event a successful venture.

Sandy, thank you.

I look forward to the programs in this final semester as chair of the CFW and to a continued association with the CFW.

Kimberly D. Gwinn
Chair

Professor Wright joined the University of Tennessee Department of English in 1949, where she became an internationally recognized scholar in American literature. fall 2000 feature followup

Several join in "Chilly Classroom" discussion

The article in the Fall 2000 issue of Networker seeking input on "Chilly Classroom" research resulted in several people logging on to the CFW web site to join or read the web discussion. Participants shared their UT experiences on the subject, which suggests that men and women are treated differently in classroom settings, both by female teachers and by male teachers.

Those responding related firsthand accounts of being treated differently as students, in addition to faculty perceptions of female students' characteristics. A female student wrote that she sensed that her comments in class were often ignored by the professor, but when repeated by male students, were praised by the professor. Male professors participating in the web discussion expressed frustration at attempting to be gender neutral, in response to a climate of sexual harassment accusations.

Additionally, one male teacher wrote that women in his class seemed reluctant to respond to questions during class. As a result, he found himself targeting questions to male students because he anticipated they would answer the question and contribute to the discussion. Still another male teacher observed that women students were far more likely to seek after-class assistance, acknowledging that he perhaps "expected" male students to resolve a problem on their own, while he was far more willing to help female students with questions.

The Commission is grateful to those who participated in this discussion and anticipates that more awareness of this issue will result.
Women's Mentoring Program Established

A program to link female faculty and staff as mentors for female students has been established by the UT Commission for Women. The first of three events will take place in February 22 to initiate the Women's Mentoring Program, which came from a suggestion from graduating female students in 2000. The goals of the program are to promote the advancement of the status of all women at the university, to encourage personal and professional development and to build supportive relationships.

Scheduled events are:

* February 22, 4-6 p.m. UC Crest Room. An informal meeting to outline plans and register for mentor/mentee placements.

* March 29, 4-6 p.m., UC Shiloh Room. Panel discussion with Anne Mayhew and Norma Cook, who will discuss the history of feminism in the U. S. and on the UT campus.

* April 19, 4-6 p.m., UC Shiloh Room. Small group meetings; topics will include understanding basic rights of women in the classroom and workplace; writing effective letters of recommendation; and applying to graduate and professional schools.

For additional information about the program, visit the Commission's web site or contact: Jo Lynch (jolynch@utk.edu) or student coordinator English Rockholt (erockhol@utk.edu).

Online Sexual Offenders Registry

The Tennessee Bureau of Investigation has launched a sexual offenders web site which allows for searches of a database by last name, county of residence or zip code. The web site is in response to a Tennessee law requiring the information to be public record. It provides information on individuals convicted after July 1, 1997.

The information contained in the registry has been provided to the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation by the offender and is based upon the last monitoring and verification form received. The TBI does not guarantee the accuracy of this information and notes that offenders may have moved without notifying the TBI of that change.

TBI policy is that local law enforcement is best suited to make the determination as to who poses a threat in their community. For more information, visit the Registry web site: http://www.ticic.state.tn.us/SEX_ofndr/search_short.asp and the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation's site: http://www.ticic.state.tn.us. Information may also be obtained by calling 1-888-837-4170 from 8:00 A.M. until 4:30 P.M. CST Monday through Friday, excluding holidays.
