Robert Fuller called the meeting to order at 3:45 p.m.

We have one submission to review from the College of Education, Health, and Human Sciences
- Add new major and degree: Educational Leadership major, Doctor of Education (EdD) degree.
- Revise admissions requirements for College Student Personnel major, MS.
- Drop concentration: Rehabilitation Counseling for the Counseling Major, MS.
- Revise college catalog description to remove references to dropped concentration.

Dr. Norma Mertz presented her proposal for a new major and degree: Educational Leadership for the Ed.D.

Dr. Mertz communicated that both THEC and Mary Albrecht (SACSCOC) agreed that this proposal is not a substantive change but a modification to an existing PhD program. As this has been determined a modification, it requires no site visit from THEC. However, external reviewers are required.

Dr. Mertz clarified that the degree is a Doctor of Education.

There were concerns that important program text was not included in the curriculum proposal, such as admission requirements, thesis committee and defense, thesis course number, comp exam, and residence requirement. This information was included in the Letter of Intent to THEC but not in the curriculum proposal.

After discussion, there was agreement to table the EdD proposal.

The Curriculum Committee requested a rewrite of the proposal to include the above catalog text recommendations. Dr. Mertz will send a rewrite of the proposal to Catherine Cox to include and add to the Agenda of the next scheduled Curriculum Committee meeting (August 2017).

Robert thanked the Committee for their work this year. Dr. Thompson also acknowledged the work of the Curriculum Committee and the important function they have.

All items (except the tabled EdD proposal) were approved as presented and are recommended to Graduate Council for approval.

The meeting adjourned at 4:40.

Respectfully submitted,
Catherine Cox, Graduate Curriculum Coordinator

SUPPORTING INFORMATION

Rationale: Across the state and nation, there has been a call for the advanced preparation of leaders armed with the knowledge and skills beyond that provided in initial leader preparation programs; leaders able to transform schools and school districts (Bass & Avolio, 1994; Carengie Foundation, 2012; DeMatthews & Mawhinney, 2014; DuFour & Marzano, 2011; Hanny, Jaafar & Earl, 2013). In awareness of the growing need for advanced preparation of school practitioners, the Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies has developed a doctoral program in Educational Leadership culminating in an EdD. The program is designed to provide advanced study in district leadership, a unique focus among doctoral programs, and a pathway for individuals to advance into school district leadership positions, including the superintendency, while also becoming practitioner-scholars.

The PhD in Education, with a concentration in Educational Leadership was established in 1950, and has been successfully offered at UTK for the past sixty-six years. Throughout its tenure it has served to prepare aspiring new professors and policy scholars in educational leadership who sought to teach and conduct research at the university level and serve in policy-focused organizations. While the program continues to serve that function, the need for practitioner-scholars has increased.

The Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies is being asked by practitioners in the field to offer advanced preparation as rigorous as is its PhD program, but tailored to advanced practice. However, since we did not have such a program at the doctoral level, we have had to turn away eager applicants, including many of whom graduated from our widely recognized principal preparation programs at the MS and EdS levels.

In June 2016, the department commissioned Kronley & Associates to conduct a needs assessment to determine if the requests it was getting for a practitioner doctoral program were consistent with an evidence-based demand sufficient to warrant the creation of an EdD at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. The findings of this study supported the creation of such a program. Kronley & Associates concluded “the proposed EdD will help address significant educator needs in Tennessee,” and went on to identify “a distinct and robust market” of prospective students who put high value on the proposed EdD from UTK and are interested in pursuing it. Further, the needs assessment affirmed that the proposed EdD was “tightly aligned with the University of Tennessee Knoxville’s mission and furthers (its) recently adopted strategic plan, Vol Vision 2020.”

This program is pending approval from the Tennessee Higher Education Commission. Students will be admitted to the degree only after the University and THEC approve the program. The Letter of Intent and proposal submission (including ELPS faculty and CVs) have been submitted to THEC. We’ve also received approval from Katie High’s office and from Provost Zomchick.

Impact on other units and/or courses: The new program will have little to no impact on other units or courses. It will not conflict with any other program offered at the University. Further, it will not change or alter any courses required by other programs, nor are any of the courses prerequisites for other courses or cross listed with the courses in any other programs or units. The courses to be included in the program already exist and been approved by the University.

Financial Impact: The proposed program is highly cost effective. No new resources, including faculty, are required to deliver the program; and the courses in the program are already approved and “on the books”. Similarly, no new facilities are needed. Existing facilities (offices, classrooms, and seminar rooms) are sufficient to accommodate the program, and the university already provides the tools to enhance online and hybrid course delivery, which will be incorporated into the new EdD program.

Support from Assessment Activities: A couple of years ago, the department conducted an informal survey of students in the Leadership Academy, one of our principal preparation programs about whether they thought we should offer an advanced practitioner doctoral degree program. The following year we sent out a survey to principals in East Tennessee and to teachers who had participated in our online principal preparation program to ask them about their interest in a practitioner doctoral program. As there seemed to be interest in having such a program, we thought it prudent to commission a more formal, external needs assessment. As discussed in the Rationale, the department commissioned Kronley & Associates, a firm that had been widely used by other universities, including the University of Chattanooga, to assess the need for the program.

An online admission application must also be submitted to the Office of Graduate Admissions. It is recommended that all materials be submitted by February 15.

Impact on other units: None. Financial impact: None. Support from Assessment Activities: Review of aspirational and peer programs application deadlines.
