The University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tennessee 37916. Second class postage paid at Knoxville, Tennessee.
Dear Friends of the Library:

Thanks to your generosity and that of the state, this has been our best year in developing library resources appropriate for a university which has the third largest graduate school in the South and Southwest. If the increase continues proportionately, the library will become an asset that we can compare proudly with the best. In holdings we are still behind several distinguished university libraries in neighboring states (notably North Carolina and Texas), but the improvement rate is most encouraging, especially when you realize that state and federal library appropriations are increasing fast, too.

The following is a summary of gifts for library development over the past six years:

Professor Emeritus John C. Hodges acts in no manner like a retired professor. His zest and activity as voluntary Coordinator for Library Development are immensely stimulating to all his associates, he, President Holt, and the whole University family gratefully anticipate your continued interest and investment in the UT Library.

Soon after this report reaches you the University will begin constructing a large, beautiful, air-conditioned library for undergraduates on the hill where the Faculty Club now is, the old Shields home. This library will have completely open stacks so as to invite students to live, move, and have their being in the midst of inviting books. It is by design that it will be in the very center of the expanding UT campus. We invite you to help stock it, and to come see it!

Sincerely yours,

Herman E. Spivey
Vice President

LIBRARY ENDOWMENT FUNDS

Endowments are carefully invested funds to provide yearly income for the purchase of the most needed books as long as the University may last—to serve countless generations of students.

Any gift to the University may be designated (1) as an addition to any one of the following endowment funds or, if substantial, (2) as the beginning of a separate endowment fund.

Investment Pool. Unless the donor prefers some other arrangement, each endowment is given the advantage of sharing in the University of Tennessee Consolidated Investment Pool, a diversified portfolio of high grade common stocks and bonds.

Life Income Agreement. To provide a deferred library endowment, a donor may give money, securities, or property in exchange for a legal contract whereby the University will pay to the donor (and one other beneficiary, if desired) all income twice yearly as long as he (or the other beneficiary) may live. For the year the contract is made, the donor is entitled to a charitable deduction, the amount determined by his age—for example, 48% of the total gift at age fifty, 83% at age eighty. If the charitable deduction is more than can be used in the current year, it can be carried forward for the five succeeding years.

"Imagine that we had it in our power to call up the shades of the greatest and wisest men that ever existed, and oblige them to converse with us on the most interesting topics—what an inestimable privilege should we think it! How superior to all common enjoyment. But in a well-furnished library, we, in fact, possess this power.
