Library Development Program

1967
1968

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE RECORD
Foreword

Those of you who have received the first seven Reports of the Library Development Program covering the years September 1959 through June 1967 will recall a yearly account of receipts of money and books, and a summary in the Seventh Report of a total of $352,979.64 and 40,200 books given to the library during these years.

For the year July 1967-June 1968 the amounts are $90,807.02 and 4674 books. Both these totals compare favorably with those of other years for in only one year, 1966-67, did the gifts of money amount to more than this year's total and only during early years, when special emphasis was put on book gifts, did we receive more books than during the past year.

For each of these totals we continue to be indebted to the friends who remember us with gifts, great and small, and who encourage others to remember the library on many occasions and for many reasons. Our appreciation of these gifts is renewed each time we are able to supplement our regular book funds with gift funds, each time we place a bookplate in a book, noting the donor of a particular title.

You will recall that at the writing of the last Report, we anticipated the addition of the millionth volume. This event took place during the winter of 1967 with the accessioning of volume one of The Papers of Andrew Johnson. This title is particularly appropriate as our achievement volume since it is edited by two of the U.T. history professors, was published by the U.T. Press and a copy presented to President Lyndon B. Johnson for the White House Library in a special ceremony held at the White House in December of 1967. As we look toward the 175th anniversary of the founding of the University, an event which will take place during the coming year, and as the library keeps pace with the University in its "reach for greatness," we realize that only a fraction of 175 years will have passed before we announce the acquisition of our second million volumes.

Endowments

In 1959, when the Library Development Program was initiated under the guidance of Dr. John C. Hodges and with the sponsorship of the Alumni Association and the Development Council, there were six endowment funds from which the library realized slightly more than $1300. Today, there are more than forty endowments, the largest with an invested capital of more than $20,000, realizing a total interest of approximately $8000. In addition, the Library Endowment Fund serves as a receptacle for small or large gifts not specified for a particular fund, and is used as particular occasions permit or require.

ESTABLISHED ENDOWMENT FUNDS

The oldest of the endowed funds, the Rhea Fund, was established in 1904, the interest realized to be spent for books in the field of classics. The early 1920's saw the establishment of four additional endowment funds and in 1952, through a bequest in his will, Frank M. Dryzer specified that of the amount he was giving to The University of Tennessee, $12,000 should be invested, the interest from this fund to be used for the purchase of mathematics and physics books for the library. Not until the Library Development Program was begun was there any noticeable activity in this area, but under Dr. Hodges' active leadership, additional funds were established and, as a result, many subject areas benefit from the proceeds. Several of the funds are specified for English and American literature but others are used for other subject areas: education, engineering, history, religion, agriculture, the sciences, business administration and romance languages.

NEW ENDOWMENT FUNDS

The John C. Hodges Alumni Library Endowment Fund was started during his lifetime to honor Dr. Hodges and, after his death, was continued and enlarged by alumni and friends as a memorial. Through the generosity of the many who knew Dr. Hodges, the fund continues to grow and its sponsors continue to solicit and welcome contributions. Because of the varied interests of the many contributors to this fund, there is no limitation concerning its expenditure and the annual increment is used for the purchase of books in any or all subject areas.

In carrying out the provisions of Dr. Hodges' will, the executors have turned over to the University a substantial amount which was used to establish The John C. Hodges Library Endowment (not to be confused with The John C. Hodges Alumni Library Endowment Fund) the proceeds from this investment to be spent for books in the field of English language and literature.

We were appreciative of Dr. Hodges' efforts in our behalf during his lifetime, and we continue to be grateful and appreciative of his interest and accomplishments as money realized from both these funds is made available to us.

CONGREVE COLLECTION
Included in the numerous books given to the library during 1967-68 are several collections and many single titles we feel worthy of special attention. One of these, and perhaps the most important, is Dr. John C. Hodges' collection of the works of William Congreve. The nucleus of the collection consists of about 150 books, original editions of the individual and collected works. It was Dr. Hodges' purpose to obtain a copy of every edition of every title published, but some of the editions eluded his ownership though his diligent search stretched over many years. Even so, this is said to be the finest private Congreve collection in existence and one which compares favorably with the collections in the Harvard and Bodleian libraries and in the British Museum.

Surrounding this nucleus is a large collection of materials including books about Congreve, books on English drama with particular emphasis on the theatre of the 16th and 17th centuries and material by and about other dramatists of this period, especially Congreve's contemporaries.

A bibliography of the Congreve titles included in this collection is now in preparation and, when published, it will provide a useful tool for scholars interested in this author and this period.

HERBERT EARL COPELAND ESTATE LIBRARY
Another collection which deserves attention is the Herbert Earl Copeland gift received in April of 1968. The most unusual part of this collection is the Railroadiana consisting of books dealing with the history of railroads, others about railroad lines or particular locomotives, numerous time tables, journals specializing in railroad lore. These books, journals and marginalia are important, but the collection derives its unique quality from the numerous albums filled with photographs of locomotives. It was Mr. Copeland's ambition to obtain at least one photograph of every locomotive ever in operation. That this ambition was fulfilled is doubtful, but the thousand-odd photographs he had accumulated, indicate he was well on his way to attaining this goal.

In addition to railroads, Mr. Copeland was interested in history in general, Tennessee history in particular. From his collection we have garnered many county histories, Tennessee authors, histories and biographies of Tennessee and Tennesseans. Books relating to the Civil War, to World War II, and to history in general, have fitted well into our collection, sometimes as first, more often as second copies.

STANLEY P. JOHNSON GIFT
In the early months of 1968 Mrs. Stanley Johnson presented to this library a complete file of The Fugitive, the personal copy of her husband, the late Stanley P. Johnson. The importance of this gift lies not only in the fact that The Fugitive in the original edition is practically impossible to obtain, nor that this is an association copy, but is due also to the fact that Mr. Johnson was a member of the Fugitives and a frequent contributor to the magazine bearing the name of the group.

To have this personal copy in The University of Tennessee Library strengthens the collection of material created by those who have been associated with the University. For several years Dr. Johnson held a high position in the administrative organization of the University; he established and, for some time, administered what is now the University's Office of Public Relations and, while here, wrote some of the books included in his bibliography.

Along with the poetry journal mentioned above, Mrs. Johnson gave to us first editions of several of Dr. Johnson's books.

CHARLES P. WHITE COLLECTION

Occasionally when professors are retiring and they are no longer interested in maintaining a private library as teaching references, they give this material to the library. Such a gift came to us from Dr. Charles P. White, long a University professor and Director of the Bureau of Business Research.

His main interests being taxation and finance, it was no surprise to find the books making up this collection dealt, primarily, with these and peripheral areas. The substantial holdings of the National Tax Association Proceedings and the National Tax Journal have enriched this section of our Business Administration Library. Also, and of interest to Special Collections, is the accumulation of about 150 pieces of the Knoxville Community Planning Council. Papers, 1944-46. This collection is in the form of correspondence, minutes, reports and related materials of the Council in its efforts to provide employment opportunities for returning veterans and to sponsor plans for the improvement of the social and economic life of the community.

OTHER BOOK CONTRIBUTORS

From other individuals we have had substantial gifts consisting of both books and journals. Space limitations frustrate our desire to name each contributor individually, but we would like to comment on the following:

The private library of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Potter consisting primarily of reference materials, history, biography, Tennessee and Knoxville history, and fiction, some old, some new.

The gift of the Addicks Family, a memorial to Mrs. Frank M. Whitfield and her daughter, Mrs. Gilbert R. Addicks, reflecting the interests of the family in antiques of silver, glass, furniture, and china; their interests in garden clubs, women’s clubs, interior decoration, and books of general interest.

In addition to the gifts noted above, substantial collections have come from: Joel Anderson, Ann Leola Barton, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Hazen, Mrs. Albert M. Lyles, Joe M. McAfee, Capt. B. B. Moore, Mrs. George Norton, Wilbur W. Piper, Herman E. Spivey, Frank B. Ward, and John H. Wolaver.

GIFTS TO SPECIAL COLLECTIONS

Many individuals have been our benefactors in disposing of their collections of unpublished material, some personal, some collected from other sources. U.T. professors, some deceased or no longer connected with the University, some still on the faculty, are represented in this list as follows:

Maynard, Horace, 1814-1882. Papers, 1828-1926. ca. 1,000 pieces. Correspondence diaries, essays, addresses, eulogies, photographs, business and financial papers, scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, and related miscellaneous items pertaining to Maynard (U.T. professor, U.S. Congressman, Minister to Turkey, Postmaster General) and his family. Gift of Mrs. Robert Lindsay.

Madden, David. Literary manuscripts. Typescripts for twenty-six works, including short stories, plays, reviews, and novels recently published by this prolific Tennessee writer. (Currently writer in residence at the University of North Carolina).

Other items, University-connected, include:

Among miscellaneous items too important to omit are:

Blanton, Smiley. Papers, 1897-1965. ca. 2,000 pieces. Correspondence, contracts, clippings, photographs, research material, and manuscripts for books and articles. Gift of Mrs. Smiley Blanton.

The Contributors list, a feature of each of the preceding Reports, will not appear in this publication this year. These names will be a part of the list which is published in the Report of the Development Council, 1967-68 and includes the names of all those who have made a financial contribution to the University.

It is impossible for us to recognize in this list of donors the names of all those who have been consistent supporters of the Library Development Program, but we are aware of them as are those of you who receive and read these Reports. We are particularly proud to note the fact that of these 117 donors, 31 are from the University faculty and two of these are from our library staff.

Procedures for Making Gifts

Occasionally it seems appropriate to remind the interested person of the ways in which he may give to the library on the Knoxville campus or to one of the libraries in Martin, Memphis, or Nashville.

A GIFT OF BOOKS, particularly those of interest to a University library, keeping in mind that the Undergraduate Library often needs duplicate copies of many titles, is simple to make. If you are in doubt about the desirability of these titles, contact the library and speak to the person in charge of gifts.

If you are within easy traveling distance, a staff member can come to look at the books, select the ones of interest, and take them off your hands. If too far for this kind of contact, details can be arranged through correspondence.

GIFTS OF MONEY may be made at any time. A gift to the University, your alumni contribution, Century Club or President's Club dues may be specified for the Library. This is an excellent choice if you do not already have another fund under consideration. Small amounts are always welcome. You may wish to make such a gift as a memorial, as a contribution to the Library Development Fund or to one of the endowed funds already in existence. If the amount you have in mind is substantial, you may wish to start a separate endowment fund. Details concerning endowments should be discussed with the library representative, details to be arrived at with help from the University legal counsel.

INVESTMENT POOL. Unless the donor prefers some other arrangement, each endowment is given the advantage of sharing in The University of Tennessee Consolidated Investment Pool, a diversified portfolio of high grade common stocks and bonds.

LIFE INCOME AGREEMENT. To provide a deferred library endowment, a donor may give money, securities, or property in exchange for a legal contract whereby the University will pay to the donor (and one other beneficiary if desired) all income twice yearly as long as he or the beneficiary may live. For the year the contract is made, the donor is entitled to a charitable deduction, the amount determined by his age—for example, 48% of the total gift at age fifty, 83% at age eighty. If the charitable deduction is more than can be used in the current year, it can be carried forward for the five succeeding years.
