Nationally recognized authors and lecturers, including Laura Epstein, Sol Gordon and Joy Johnson will highlight the second annual Fall Symposium sponsored by the Office of Continuing Social Work Education. Workshops, to be held in cities across Tennessee, will give social workers in the state and region a rare opportunity to meet and learn from authorities in a variety of social work fields.

Laura Epstein, Professor at The University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration and a developer of Task-Centered Treatment, will conduct workshops in Knoxville September 6 and Nashville September 7. Epstein is the author of Task-Centered Approach to Human Services (forthcoming Spring 1979) and co-author, with William J. Reid, of Task-Centered Casework, a widely-used basic text, and Task-Centered Practice.

In Task-Centered Treatment, Reid and Epstein have formulated a short-term model for social casework designed to help clients achieve specific goals by identifying and removing barriers to task achievement. According to Anne Hartman in the Journal of Education for Social Work (Winter 1978), task-centered practice can "bring students the kind of immediacy of experience and specific 'how-to's' for which they so often long. . . It presents," she says, "a wedding of practice and research, demonstrating that through single-case and small-sample studies, a lone practitioner without the benefit of grants and consultants can try something out, monitor it, and see how it works."

Fall Symposium

Joy Johnson

Sol Gordon, noted writer, lecturer, educator and therapist, will conduct a workshop on Adolescent Sexuality in Knoxville September 29. The workshop will be co-sponsored by the Planned Parenthood Associations of Knox County and the Southern Mountains. Gordon is Professor of Children and Family Studies and Director of the Institute for Family Research and Education, a program of Syracuse University's College for Human Development. He was formerly Associate Professor of Yeshiva University and Chief Psychologist of the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic. Gordon is the author of several widely-read books on psychology, adolescents, sex and parenting.

Joanne Jankovic, Assistant Professor in the School of Social Work and the College of Education at the University of Georgia, will conduct a workshop on Supervision September 26-27 in Chattanooga. A former Ford Foundation fellow, Jankovic has presented papers recently at the NASW symposium in San Diego and the National Conference of School Social Workers in Denver.

By popular demand, the Tri-Cities area will host its second Family Therapy workshop featuring a staff member from the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic. Dr. Avner Barcai, Associate Professor at the clinic, conducted an extremely successful workshop there in the spring. The date of the workshop has not yet been set.

Dr. Kenneth Wedel of the University of Kansas will conduct a two-day workshop in Memphis September 28-29. His topic will be Administration and Planning. A second Memphis workshop is still in the planning stage.

Jackson will be the site of two workshops also. Dr. Marvin Feit, Assistant Professor at the UT School of Social Work in Memphis, will lecture on Exploring Alternative Methods of Working with Clients September 26. Dr. Terry Johnson, a clinical psychologist at Raleigh-Bartlett Family Counseling Center, will conduct a workshop September 27 on Behavioral Modification Techniques.

Anne Deaton, OCSWE Professional Assistant, will conduct a workshop on Volunteer Management September 22 in Knoxville. Other workshops are tentatively planned for Shelbyville/Tullahoma and the Clarksville area. An announcement bulletin detailing workshop topics, leaders, locations, dates, times, fees and registration information will be mailed out in July.
Reality Therapy

Glasser To Present Three Workshops

William Glasser, noted psychiatrist and author, will conduct a series of three one-day workshops on Reality Therapy in Tennessee this fall. The workshops, which will be co-sponsored by the Office of Continuing Social Work Education and the Tennessee Chapter of NASW, will be held in Nashville November 29, Knoxville November 30, and Memphis December 1.

Glasser has authored several books of significant interest to social workers and other human services personnel. They include Reality Therapy, Mental Health or Mental Illness, Schools without Failure, The Identity Society, and his latest work, Positive Addiction.

Law and Aging Conference Scheduled for September

A two day conference on "Law and Aging" will be held in Gatlinburg September 8-9. The conference will be co-sponsored by OCSWE, the UT Law School Continuing Legal Education Program, the Young Lawyers' Conference of the Tennessee Bar Association, The East Tennessee Development District, and the Tennessee Commission on Aging.

The goal of the conference is to provide social workers and lawyers with an opportunity to share in a continuing education experience that will address issues of mutual concern to both professions' practice with elderly clients.

Among the topics to be covered at the conference are the following: the needs of the elderly for legal services; the psycho-social implication of aging; what it's like to be older; improving the lawyer/social worker relationship with aged clients; public benefits and administrative law related to the elderly; adult protective services related to the elderly, including nursing home patients' rights and commitment rights.

A number of nationally known authorities will participate in the program, including David Marlin, Director of Legal Research Services for the Elderly in Washington, D.C., and Barbara Silverstone, DSW, Chairperson on NASW's National Committee on Aging and Executive Director of the Benjamin Rose Institute in Cleveland, Ohio. In addition, a presentation will be made by staff from the Michigan Senior Citizens Law Program and the University of Michigan Institute of Gerontology.

Detailed program announcements and registration materials will be mailed during July. For more information, please contact Dick Edwards, Associate Director, OCSWE, 615/974-6778.
A Letter from the President
Of the SSW Alumni Association

This is an open letter of appreciation to all the alumni and faculty of UTSSW. Your support during the last two years has been outstanding. Everyone has cooperated with requests to help the Alumni Association and the School and many have volunteered their services. That volunteer spirit is very gratifying to me as I hope it is to you who have volunteered.

Ben Granger, Betty Cleckley, Roger Nooe, Dave Fauri, Kate Mullins, Ron Green, and various faculty and staff members have been enthusiastic and helpful to the Alumni Association. Very active alumni groups have been functioning in Memphis, Nashville and Knoxville. We know that alumni in other regions and states are anxious to organize and are now ready to join you in planning alumni activities. Please let us know what your specific interests are and what role you wish to play in organizing an alumni group.

Paul Struxness, Barbara Hooe, Lois Humphrey and Denny Dukes have been developing a very sound fund-raising approach and alumni in Chattanooga, upper East Tennessee and the Jackson area have joined in implementing the fund-raising plan.

Many of you have contributed generously to the scholarship fund. The campaign is still going on so those of you who have not yet responded (or who have not been getting our special mailings) can still contribute. Merely designate your check "for UT School of Social Work Scholarship Fund" and send it to: The University of Tennessee, National Alumni Association, Suite 600 Andy Holt Tower, Knoxville, TN 37916.

Together, as faculty, staff and alumni, we can help the School reach new levels of excellence. Perhaps someday we can even supplement the salary of an outstanding professor. Again, thank you for all your enthusiasm during the last two years. In particular, thank those of you, listed below, who have helped several students continue their education in social work through your contributions to the Alumni scholarship fund during this fiscal year.

Gatlinburg Conferees Study Professional Standards

In recent years attempts have been made to "declassify" social work positions by reducing or eliminating professional educational requirements. Often disguised as affirmative action or cost reduction, declassification has diminished services to social work clients.

In response to this issue, the Office of Continuing Social Work Education hosted a national training conference on "Professional Standards: Establishing Their Validity in Classification and Selection Systems for Social Workers."

The conference, sponsored by the National Association of Social Workers, was held in Gatlinburg May 5-7. Planned as a small working session, the conference was designed primarily for members of NASW chapters who will be working with state and local governments, though the principles covered could be applied in the private sector as well. Over 20 states sent representatives to the meeting.

The training sessions were conducted by Thelma Hunt, Ph.D., M.D., Director of the Center for Psychological Service and Professor Emeritus of Psychology, George Washington University, Washington, D.C., and Clyde J. Lindley, M.A., Associate Director of the Center for Psychological Service.

Knoxville Student Group Sponsors Opportunities Day

Social Work Opportunities Day, held April 10, brought 24 social service agencies to the UT Knoxville University Center to share information with students and faculty about their organizations' services and potential job opportunities. The event was sponsored by the Social Work Student Association and the UT Career Planning and Placement Service. Agencies from Knox County, Oak Ridge, Chattanooga and Louisville, Tennessee, were represented.

Co-chairpersons Patrick Mooney and Judy Villecco welcomed agency personnel and Dr. Roger Nooe and Dean Ben Granger addressed the group. Committee members included Kay Colson, Emily Ritter, Steven Turner, Julie Lawrence and Diane Bailey.

Mid-State CE Advisors Seek Broader Input

The Advisory Committee for Continuing Education in Social Work for Middle Tennessee met April 6 in Nashville to make plans for workshops to be offered in the Fall Symposium.

The members discussed restructuring the Advisory Committee for broader input in program planning. During the next six months, small sub-committees will be formed with professionals from specific delivery areas for mental health, medical services, health care, volunteer services, public welfare, mental retardation, public schools, corrections, family services, neighborhoods, youth services and child care. Bob Rowen, Coordinator of Continuing Education for the Nashville Branch, will recruit persons from these areas to assist in the development of workshops that will meet their professional needs.

San Francisco Hosts NABSW Conference

The National Association of Black Social Workers (NABSW) recently celebrated its 10th anniversary at a conference held in San Francisco May 1-6. Many of the initial founders of the organization, including Dr. Betty Cleckley of the UT School of Social Work, returned to San Francisco for the occasion. The following UTSSW faculty and students also attended: Professors Carl Wilks, Titus Haynes, Ben Mason, Lou Beasley, and Carole Watson; student representatives Thelma Haynes, Memphis Branch; James Bailey, Knoxville Branch; and Sheron Doss, Nashville Branch.

Dr. Cleckley presented a paper, "Reckoning with Institutional Change: A Social Work Educator/Administrator's Experience in a Major Southeastern University," and led a workshop on "The Inclusion of Ethnic Minority Content and Social Work Education: New Perspectives." Carl Wilks participated in that workshop and in one dealing with "Dilemmas of Black Teenage Pregnancies."

Scholarship To Honor Alum

Students at the Nashville Branch of the UT School of Social Work are to be the beneficiaries of a new source of financial aid. A scholarship fund, which will be known as the Pauline Harsson Stockton Scholarship Endowment Fund, was established in December 1977 by Dr. John M. Stockton of the University of Pennsylvania. The scholarship commemorates his wife, a 1952 graduate of the Nashville Branch.

Income earned from the fund will be used to assist eligible social work students in financing their education. Interested applicants must be Tennessee or Alabama residents, enrolled at the Nashville Branch, and must maintain a 2.0 overall GPA while enrolled to maintain eligibility.

Additional details about the scholarship can be obtained by contacting Dr. David Fauri, Director, Nashville Branch, or Dr. Ben P. Granger, Dean of the School, Knoxville.
Needs Assessed in Geriatric Social Work

Most professionals and other personnel who work with geriatric clients in the East Tennessee area indicate they need to know more about the basic behaviors and characteristics of later life in order to meet specific practice demands.

This was one of the facts noted in a survey made by the Office of Continuing Social Work Education, which was designed to determine the practice needs and priorities of mental health practitioners, professionals and other personnel who work with aging persons in the Lakeshore Mental Health Institute catchment area. The results of the needs assessment survey provided a data base for the Geriatric Task Force at Lakeshore Mental Health Institute to be used in their application for a federal grant to fund a statewide Continuing Education Program on Aging and Mental Health. The proposed continuing education program will utilize recognized experts in the fields of Aging and Mental Health, Continuing Education and Outreach to train existing staff of participating agencies in these three areas.

Closed-end questionnaires were mailed to 2500 personnel. Approximately ten percent or 249 usable questionnaires were returned. The survey group represented a broad spectrum of educational backgrounds, professional disciplines, types and locations of practice. Most respondents preferred that workshops be held during the work week and be no longer than two to three days in length.

In addition to answering questions regarding various biographical information, each respondent was asked to evaluate a list of 53 different practice demands which might be more effectively met by increasing their knowledge and skills in specific content areas. Sixty-six percent of the survey group indicated that they needed more knowledge and better skills to handle the following problems: (1) helpless, hopeless, unmotivated behaviors; (2) identification of the behaviors, tasks, and characteristics of later life; (3) motivating clients; and (4) the homeless older person.

Regarding practice problems in continuing education and outreach, approximately 50 percent of the respondents noted that they needed more skills in the following areas: (1) development of teaching and learning materials; (2) coordination and utilization of community services; (3) educating the community. Generally, the survey data indicated limited variation in practice needs of respondents from different professional disciplines, types and locations of practice.

The survey data will form the basis for planning the specific content of each workshop and the composition of special workshop groups when the grant is funded.

Right Is Wrong

A number of much heralded national proposals such as welfare reform, comprehensive community mental health coverage and national health insurance appear to have lost significant support recently and seem to be in danger of being put back on the shelf for another time. At the same time, legislators report receiving record numbers of cards and letters from constituents on the subject of the Panama Canal "give away." There is growing recognition that there may be a relationship between these two happenings.

In the last two years, organizations of the "new right" have raised over $2 billion, much of it through direct mail solicitation. It is said that every time a new social program is proposed, computer operations of the "new right" immediately generate mailing labels, letters with tear-off portions to be sent to legislators, and envelopes for further contributions. As a result, we may be heading for the day when social workers hesitate to speak up for quality service programs for clients for fear of stimulating a well-orchestrated, automated response system with potentially massive negative impact on our interests.

This type of advanced communications technology facilitates the ability of the new right minority to have the impact of a majority--and this is wrong. It is time for social workers to gain an understanding of the tactics of the "new right" and to take responsibility for reasserting the interests of the majority. We should not allow such important public social policy issues as national health insurance to be derailed. Are we going to allow our interests and those of our clients to be controlled by the "new right"? Wrong!
